McCarl Warning Holds Swanson Liable on Funds

Comptroller Acts After Navy Head Defies Him on Expenditures.

Criticizes Actions Of Attorney General

Answering the most radical defi which has been flung at his authority since the General Accounting Office was established in 1921, Comptroller General J. R. McCarl yesterday warned Secretary of the Navy Swanson he will be held responsible if he goes through with his avowed intentions of ignoring McCarl's rulings on expenditures.

The comptroller's notice was contained in a 13-page letter, dated February 27, replying to Swanson's letter of January 30, in which the latter revealed he has instructed his departmental officers that the "Attorney General's opinions and the decisions of the Court of Claims be hereafter followed."

Swanson Is Silent.

Secretary Swanson had no comment to make on McCarl's protest against the Cabinet member's unprecedented challenge. Capt. J. F. Fletcher, his aid, said:

"The Secretary has no comment to make. He may take the matter up at his press conference on Wednesday."

The latest eruption involving the Comptroller General's powers, which have been intermittently under fire by various New Dealists, is founded on the Navy Department's long and persistent battle for authority to pay traveling expenses of dependents of officers who have been detached from duty and ordered home to await retirement.

"It was nearly ten years ago," McCarl reminded Swanson, "that the Navy Department started its effort to secure such interpretation of the law supra as to permit payment of transportation expenses of dependents to their homes when officers were detached from duty and ordered home to await retirement orders.

Law Cited by McCarl.

"During all of that time the law has remained unchanged. In view of the fact that the accounting officers were unable to adopt such view with respect to uses of appropriated moneys, and that the Supreme Court of the United States

Former Justice Growing Steadily Weaker; Injections Resorted To.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, former Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, known to the country as "the great liberal" and "the great dissenter," grew steadily weaker yesterday as pneumonia made inroads on the sturdy constitution that refused to yield to seven bullet wounds during the Civil War.

Mr. Holmes, who has been lingering between life and death for more than a week, was decidedly weaker yesterday, but with his indomitable will-power seemed to be struggling to reach the ninety-fourth milestone of his birth, which occurs Friday.

For several days Mr. Holmes has been under an oxygen tent, and yesterday his physicians resorted to glucose injections in an effort to prolong his life. Late in the day three physicians visited the former justice, and afterward Mark Howe, former secretary and close watcher at the bedside, said:

"Not quite so favorable."

The injections were given to provide added nourishment. The patient has been taking broth and light nourishment, but not in sufficient quantity to maintain vigor.

Dr. Thomas A. Claytor made his third call of the day just before dusk. The physician, who deemed the former justice's condition so grave last Saturday that he called in specialists and issued his first official bulletin, said:

"The condition is unchanged."

A number of friends called at the home yesterday, but, as ordered since he was stricken with bronchial pneumonia, they were not permitted to see Mr. Holmes.

Works Tangle Ended; Action Likely Today

Direct Relief Allotment Rumored After Glass Sees Roosevelt.

The long-awaited "break" in the works and relief bill stalemate came yesterday with a rush that promised action by the Senate Appropriations Committee today or tomorrow, and a speedy Senate showdown on the controversial measure.

Developments followed a strategical conference between President Roosevelt and Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the committee.

"Some matters have been considered which I think ought to be brought to the attention of the committee and of the Senate," the Virginian told newspapermen.

Neither Glass nor Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson, White House confidante during the recent works bill impasse, would say what these "matters" are. Both insisted, however, that no advance agreement has resulted in the series of negotiations that followed the deadlock.

"I see no reason why Senator Glass and members of his committee should not proceed with consideration of the bill at their convenience," said Robinson.

Reply to Ickes' Action.

Despite the statement of leaders, rumors that a straight relief bill for $880,000,000 or $1,880,000,000 will be reported by the committee circulated through the Capitol.

Advocates of the prevailing wage on Federal aid projects were suspicious lest a straight relief bill, without the amendment, be pushed through the Senate, then altered in conference with the House to conform with the President's original bill.

Broad debate on the whole works issue is expected in the Senate today, in the vote on a resolution by Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, calling on the Treasury for an itemized statement of all allocations, disbursements and actual expenditures from the $3,300,000,000 1933 "recovery" appropriation.

The resolution is a direct answer

Greek Rebels Are Defeated In Macedonia

Retreat in Disorder as Loyal Troops Take Heavy Toll.

Copyright by the Associated Press.

Athens, March 4.—Government troops won a slashing victory against rebels in Macedonia today, driving them back across the River Struma after killing and capturing an unknown number.

Badly armed, the rebels retreated in terror under fire from government machine guns, advices fom Macedonia said.

Bullets rained into the ranks of the fugitives as they plunged into the river and swam for their lives to the east bank, near Bulgaria. There the scattered forces rallied and took up a new position.

Government success on the naval front also was reported. A terrific aerial bombardment was reported to have put the flagship of the rebellious Greek fleet into flames late today and the government unleashed fresh forces to stamp out civil war in Macedonia and Crete.

Flagship Bombed.

Five planes which left with their bomb racks loaded to capacity for a raid on Souda Bay, rebel base in Crete, returned to report they made two direct hits on the 9,450-ton cruiser Averoff, pride of the Greek navy.

Already severely battered, the Averoff was struck in the stern by the 250-pound high-explosive missiles. Flames rose high in the sky, the fliers said.

They were proceeding under orders to disable the warship instead of sinking it, since the admiralty is hopeful of blasting out the rebels and saving the expensive vessel.

The blood of fighting men soaked the soil of Saloniki again tonight as civil war gripped Greece.

Furious Fighting.

Loyal forces, striving to quell an armed uprising the government claims is led by former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, blasted with artillery, airplanes and machine-gun fire at revolutionaries.

Government soldiers and sailors moved through Macedonia and through the Aegean Sea, fighting what Premier Tsaldaris called "the greatest misfortune that has befallen Greece."

But the rebels fought back and, although the government announced the rebel forces were hemmend in at Drama, Macedonia, the fighting went on furiously.

Two destroyers started from Athens under forced draft in an effort to make contact with five warships commanded by rebel officers, and 22 government airplanes were assigned to bomb the rebel ships.

On Way to Aid Rebels.

Venizelos was reported to have proclaimed a separate government in Crete, but government officials immediately denied that such a report was true. They appeared to believe that the 71-year-old statesman's spirit might well be shaken by the air bombs that smashed his home at Canea, Crete, last night.

Venizelos' old political colleague, Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, who once governed Greece for a day by a coup d'etat, was reported to have left Cannes, France, and to have crossed into Italy on his way to join the revolutionists.

The newspaper Typos printed an unconfirmed report that 25 members of the crew of the armored cruiser Averoff had been shot and tossed overboard because they tried to tell their rebellious officers that peace should be sought with the pursuing government forces.

A tight censorship made confirmation of reports difficult.

One report was that the government was seeking offers of airplanes from foreign manufacturers.

Efforts of the rebel ships to make contact with rebel land forces in Macedonia last night were balked by the lighthousee keepers along the Macedonian coastline, who ex-

Surgery Rights Girl's Stomach, 'Upside Down'

Alyce, 11, Sleeps After Long Operation Which Untangles Organs.

By the Associated Press.

Fall River, Mass., March 4.—The "upside down" stomach of Alyce Jane McHenry was set right today in a prolonged operation of peculiar difficulty, an operation carrying an added touch seemingly drawn from the child's own faith.

Late in the afternoon, attending physicians described her condition as satisfactory. They said she was sleeping and that her pulse was 120, about normal.

"Bully!" was one spoken fervently.

"That's splendid!" was another.

All were heartfelt praises for the chief surgeon as one after another knotty mix-up of vital organs untangled under his swiftly moving fingers.

Whether the prayers are to be answered was unknown tonight. The strain was terrific on the child, but she stood it surprisingly well.

President Asks Direct Subsidy For Ship Lines

Text of the President's Message on Shipping, Page 4.

By Leon Dure, Jr

After years of wrangling, the ship subsidy question was put squarely up to Congress by President Roosevelt yesterday with a recommendation that subsidies be continued but that they be called by their "right name."

Proposing an end to the "subterfuge" of granting financial aid through the medium of ocean-mail contracts, the President called upon Congress to reorganize the whole system by means of which the Government has been attempting to build up the merchant marine.

This system, he told the legislators in a terse, to-the-point message, has been a failure. New means are needed, he asserted, to resurrect the American merchant marine—"one of our most firmly established traditions"—to a place "in keeping with our national pride."

In view of the congressional logjam, which has jeopardized much of the Administration's program, the President's declaration on shipping attracted little attention on Capitol Hill. The message, and two reports accompanying it, will be studied by the House and Senate Merchant Marine committees before legislation is drawn.

Part of General Program.

Mindful of the significance of the day, the second anniversary of the New Deal in office, the President disrupted his schedule in order to finish the message in time for its transmission yesterday.

The divorce of subsidies from mail contracts is a policy, first enunciated by Mr. Roosevelt more than a year ago, which has already been proposed for the air mail.

Prober Hints Murder Case At Pinehurst

He Will Play 'Hole Card' Today at Inquest on Death of Heiress.

'Wouldn't Be Here if I Thought It Suicide,' Pruette Says.

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 4.—A broad hint of murder came tonight on the eve of a new coroner's inquest into the strange death of Mrs. Elva Statler Davidson, 22-year-old heiress to part of the hotel magnate's fortune.

Solicitor Rowland Pruette, who will represent the State of North Carolina at tomorrow's inquest, said he had a "hole card" which he would play at that time.

The nature of the "hole card," he would not reveal.

"This investigation," Solicitor Pruette said, "wouldn't have progressed this far if it didn't have a pretty good hole card.

"I wouldn't be here if I thought it was a suicide. The State of North Carolina isn't interested in suicides."

Solicitor Pruette, whose old English title simply means prosecutor, previously had scouted the theory of an accident in Mrs. Davidson's death.

The yong woman, bride of H. Bradley Davidson, jr., of Washington, was found dead last Wednesday morning, her body slumped over the running board of a 12-cylinder car in a garage adjoining her mansion here.

Attended Charity Party.

A coroner's jury meeting immediately thereafter was told by Dr. M. W. Marr, the first physician to see the body, that Mrs. Davidson had died accidentally; that her death was the result of monoxide gas generated by an automobile motor.

It was decided, however, to continue the investigation. Hence tomorrow's session.

Solicitor Pruette announced tonight that he was investigating reports that Davidson was in Annapolis around the middle of February about the time his bride was in Boston willing him a large sum of money.

Pruette said also he was looking into the financial arrangements between the heiress and her husband. Davidson, he said, would be recalled for questioning tomorrow.

"Of course," he added, "Davidson can refuse to testify if he sees fit to do so."

He added that he saw no reason why Davidson should refuse to testify.

Body Partly Clothed.

Mrs. Davidson and her husband, together with a large party of friends, had attended a charity party on the night preceding her death.

Afterward the Davidsons and their friends went to Montesani's roadhouse on the edge of Pinehurst for a spaghetti dinner. Then they went home.

Outstanding among the questions which Solicitor Pruette wants answered tomorrow for the satisfaction of the coroner's jury are the following:

Why was Mrs. Davidson dressed as she was if, as claimed, she was just going for a drive?

In this connection Solicitor Pruette said tonight:

"I can't conceive of any woman unless she was dead drunk dressing in a costume like that for the purpose of committing suicide."

Mrs. Davidson did not have on any stockings or undergarments.

Long's Charges 'Base,' Says Farley in Denial; Vote on Inquiry Today

'Iscariot a Piker,' Asserts Former NRA Head; Sees Alliance With Huey.

By the United Press.

New York, March 4.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson tonight invoked the invective of his Blue Eagle days to "crack down" on two "shadows" that have "fallen athwart" America's faith in Franklin D. Roosevelt—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin and Senator Huey P. Long.

Addressing a dinner gathering in his honor, the former NRA chief laid down a brimstone barrage against the radio priest and the dictator of the delta, whom he described as leaders of the "emotional fringe" of United States politics.

"The danger from that group is that any desperate person is a potential candidate to join it," said Johnson. "If you box your boy's ears he will pout and, if occasion offers, run away from home with any enticing bum who comes along.

"Counting busted business men, the unemployed, large segments of farmers not yet helped and the dependents of all these, there are about 80,000,000 abused babies in this country—their ears still tingling from the worst economic boxing in history. They are ready to strike back at disaster in any way that is shown to them.

"You can laugh at Father Coughlin—you can snort at Father Coughlin—but this country was never under a greater menace than from the break-up of that spontaneous popular cooperation being engineered by the combination of this dangerous demagogy with the direct assault of the old social Neanderthalers—the architects of the 1929 boom and bust."

Johnson interjected an explanation that "nobody in the Adminis-

Stamp Gifts Upheld As an 'Old Custom'

Text of Mr. Farley's letter to Senator McKellar, Page 5.

By Robert C. Albright.

Hot rebuttal by Postmaster General Farley of sweeping charges by Huey Long yesterday transformed the Senate Postoffice Committee into a battle ground for the Louisianan's bitter feud with the Administration.

Clamoring for a Senate investigation of Farley's office, Long for the first time was granted a hearing by the Senate Postoffice Committee. The committee adjourned without taking action. It will vote on the Long resolution today.

Not satisfied with the committee airing of allegations he has hurled at the Postmaster General for more than a month, Long took the floor to predict Farley's resignation. He elicited only another denial from the Senate's plain-spoken Democratic leader—Joe Robinson.

In a letter to the committee, Mr. Farley answered what he called "the base insinuation of the Senator from Louisiana that I have at any time used the power and prestige of my office for personal financial gain or private interest." He replied in some detail to each of the Long charges.

The Postoffice Committee meeting and the Farley retort were sequels to a tempestuous Senate bout between Long and Robinson, who cited the President of the United States in refutation of Huey's claims that Farley is about to resign.

Ickes Denies Probe.

Chairman Kenneth McKellar, of the Senate Postoffice Committee, appointed a sub-committee to study voluminous data turned over to the Senate by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, at Long's insistence.

"I wish to state that I have never made or caused to be made any investigation of the Postmaster General," Ickes informed the Senate yesterday.

Fresh from another Senate denunciation of the Postmaster Genera, the Louisiana Senator reiterated his charges before the committee, and left members to peruse the lengthy Ickes report. But after nearly three hours they turned that task over to the sub-committee.

"So far as I can see," declared Senator McKellar, "there is nothing in the world in it reflecting on Mr. Farley. It may be there, but I haven't seen it."

The Kingfish has repeatedly charged that Farley was interested in public works contracts for James Stewart & Co., and also exerted his influence in favor of the General Builders Supply Corporation, headed by Farley's brother-in-law. In a letter accompanying his report, Ickes said the former firm received only one PWA contract—for the postoffice annex in New York City—and the latter but one, in connection with the Hillside housing pro-

Savants Approve Rocket Ship Plan

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 4.—A congress of leading Russian scientists and aeronautical experts decided today that Soviet experiments have definitely established the possibility of making rocket planes to carry passengers in the upper stratosphere, 20 to 30 miles above the earth's surface.

These rocket propulsion machines will be considerably faster than the machines of today, the congress predicted, and will constitute the best means of exploring heights never before reached by man.

Eccles Urges Open Market Rule by Board

Opposes Delegation of Policy to Committee Provided in Bill.

By the Associated Press.

A recommendation that the open-market policies of the Federal Reserve Board be placed completely under the board instead of in the committee of five, as proposed in the new banking bill, was made to the House Banking Committee yesterday by Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the board.

Testifying at hearings on the measure, he approved taking this control of the flow of credit to industry and interest rates from the now scattered representatives of the 12 Reserve banks, but said of the proposed board of five—including three board members and two bank governors:

"It is not clear, however, that this arrangement is the best than can be devised for the desired purpose.

"The Federal Reserve Board, which is appointed by the President and approved by the Senate for the purpose of having general responsibility for the formulation of monetary policies, would under this proposal, have to delegate its principal function to a committee, on which members of the board would have a bare majority, while governors of the banks would have two out of five members.

"Upon further study it would appear that the best way in which to handle this proposal would be to place the responsibility for open-market operations in the Federal Reserve Board as a whole and to rovide for a committee of five gov-

Richberg Talk Met by Drives For Inflation

He Pledges Sound Money as Opponents Advance on Five Fronts.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Inflation, ever-present bugaboo of the New Deal, threatened on several fronts here yesterday.

The applause barely had subsided after Donald R. Richberg, recovery coordinator, promised a Boston audience there would be no inflation as long as President Roosevelt remains in the White House before Capitol Hill radicals countered with a wide variety of schemes calling for tons of printing press money.

Outstanding developments were:

1. A petition to force a vote on the $24,000,000,000-a-year Townsend old age pension bill was introduced in the House.

2. Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, besought a House committee to approve his $2,000,000,000 bonus proposal.

3. Speaker Byrns announced he would support the movement for a House bonus vote within the next ten days.

4. A petition to blast the $3,000,000,000 Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing measure out of committee was prepared for introduction in the House.

5. Representative Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio, advanced a bill for creation of a central bank, reputedly drafted by Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit "radio Priest."

Sound money advocates were heartened by Richberg's speech. Significance was attached to the answer he fired back when asked at the Boston Old South Forum

House Defeats Bill to Provide Additional Clerks for Members

Chagrined, Speaker Byrns all but broke his gavel yesterday vainly seeking to maintain order as an aroused House rejected a proposal to grant each member an additional clerk.

Speeches by Congressmen intent on outdoing each other in telling of the bags of depression mail dumped on their desks daily were to no avail. The Democratic leadership cracked the whip and emerged victorious by 242 to 146.

With more members present and shouting questions than since the opening session two months ago the Speaker got the most vigorous workout he has had since his elevation.

The greatest confusion flared when Representative Taber (Republican), New York, charged the House with "going haywire." Mock cheers from the Democratic side of the aisle made Taber's booming voice inaudible. He was drowned out every time he sought to resume.

Byrns rallied to Taber's defense. Amused spectators in the crowded galleries got an eyefull. The Speaker pounded his gavel incessantly for two minutes by the clock. His arm gave a first-class imitation for a locomotive piston.

When the turmoil subsided Taber good-naturedly remarked:

"It's evident a lot of them are trying to get in on my speech."

Earlier, Taber insisted he received as much mail as any and found no need for an extra typist. He declared there was "no reason" to spend $500,000 a year for such a purpose.

Representative Isabella Greenway, soft-voiced member from Arizona, was the only participant in the torrid debate who escaped the hecklers. She said the bill should be passed "so we can answer our letters."

Leather - lunged Representative Kramer (Democrat), California, dismissed as "a lot of hooey" complaints that passage of the measure would encourage another $500,000

U.S. Builds Deadly 'War Birds;' Britain Increases Army Budget

30 Steel-Plated Planes Built on Coast and Readied for Tests.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Los Angeles, March 4.—Army pilots will roar into the sky within the next few weeks in final test flights for a new type of armored attack plane that may revolutionize warfare in the air.

Under command of Capt. E. M. Robbins, chief Army test pilot, they will wheel a fleet of 30 steel-plated silver hornets of the sky out of a gloomy, gray structure of the Northrop Corporation, far out on the flats south of Los Angeles.

They will put the planes through their paces, and if the new war birds live up to expectations, the United States Army will have devised the deadliest of modern air weapons.

Thirty planes are being built, and 30 more will be built if these prove successful. Much secrecy surrounds their construction. Officials of the Northrop Corporation, which has the contract, refer all queries to the Army officers supervising construction.

If you walk near the construction unit at the Northrop plant, where the new plane is being built, some one will say to you:

"I'm sorry, but you're not sup-

$19,750,000 Available to Build Up Defenses of England.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 4.—Great Britain added $19,750,000 to the 1935 Army budget estimates today and blamed the increase on Germany's increased amaments.

A new elastic policy of expansion for British Empire defenses was initiated in a white paper presented to Parliament by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald almost on the eve of Sir John Simon's peace mission to Berlin.

MacDonald, in an unexpected attack, attributed Britain's feeling of insecurity, particularly upon German rearmament, but also included to some extent American, Russian, Japanese and other increases in arms.

Added increases for the British air force and the navy will be made known during the week.

The British government jumped on the force and spirit with which the German people are being organized, and warned that peace was endangered. While such criticism has been made before in various ways, it takes on new significance just when Britain is trying to bring about a new foundation for peace by a cooperative security system on the continent.

Moratorium on Private Debts Of Reich Asked by Schacht

By the Associated Press

Leipzig, Germany, March 4.—A moratorium of several years on interest payments for German private debts abroad was strongly urged today by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, economic dictator and head of the Reischsbank.

He also recommended reduction of the interest rate to a "reasonable basis" when payments are resumed, and creation of normal international trade conditions meantime, in order to regulate the problem of German indebtedness amounting to some 25,000,000,000 marks.

Addressing participants in the annual spring fair here, Schacht said "the solution of the transfer problem in connection with the German debt is possible along two lines only—either reducing interest and amortization rates in connection with a temporary moratorium or through sufficiently increasing Germany's excess profits over imports."

"I am glad to note," he continued, "that Mr. Grady (Henry F. Grady, chief of the trade agreement section of the American State Department) apparently also clearly sees this alternative and urges a compromise based upon both measures. That would be in accord with the method I have repeatedly urged upon our creditors, namely to cease paying service on the German loan for a few years and then resume it at a reasonable interest rate.

"The time intervening would have to be used in order to again build up normal international trade relations. Interest accruing in the meantime could be funded and added to the loan.

"In order to demonstrate our honest intentions I would even go so far as to concede resurrection of all the original claims of creditors upon these loans if later such an agreement should not be lived up to by us."

Schacht, who referred to the United States as "the great American war profiteer," laid the world's

Mellon Probers Review Returns Of Mrs. Bruce

Record of Sales Between Daughter's Firm and Father Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 4.—The Government threw a spotlight on the private finances of Andrew W. Mellon's daughter today as it strove before the Tax Appeals Board to sustain a $3,089,000 assessment placed on the former Treasury Secretary's 1931 income.

Spending his ninth day on the witness stand, Howard M. Johnson, trail secretary of the multi-millionaire, had first brought out on redirect questioning, that his chief could have established $15,747,000 loss that year instead of $3,625,000, if he had sold all the stock on which the market was below his cost price.

Robert H. Jackson, Government counsel, quickly dismissed this contention as a "hypothetical proposition without standing in law" and dug into the records of sales between the father and his daughter's Ascalot Co., her personal holding concern.

"Shadow Sales" Charged.

The Government contends that both Ascalot and Mellon established losses for income tax reductions through "shadow sales"—as it contends many other sales by him were not real sales.

Jackson brought out that the daughter, Ailsa Mellon Bruce, paid no income tax herself in 1933, although she received a reputed dividend from the $14,000,000 Ascalot Co. of $150,500, and that she is asking refunds on payments made in 1931 and 1932.

In each instance the claim was made by Mrs. Bruce that stock sales by Ascalot—many of them to her father—resulted in heavy losses to the capital of her company and that payments made to her actually were from capital and therefore not taxable.

Paid Tax in 1931.

Johnson said Ascalot in 1931, the only year it paid a tax, had a net profit of $4,988.55 from stock sales and other taxable income. Dividends paid to corporations not being taxable, the $328,494 it received was not included. It paid Mrs. Bruce $321,000.

In 1932 the company lost $238,538 from stock sales, received $156,697 in nontaxable dividends and paid Mrs. Bruce $163,000. In 1933 it reported loss of $347,609 from sales, principally through disposal of 46,000 shares of Southern Pacific stock at a loss of $375,000, received $125,768 in nontaxable dividends and paid Mrs. Bruce the $150,500.

Mrs. Bruce, Johnson said, reported a net income of $86.98 in 1933, not listing the money, received from Ascalot on the contention it was a draw on capital. Jackson brought out that capital losses suffered are cumulative, and that until the capital is replaced, Mrs. Bruce still may receive deductions from her income.

Jackson said he "hoped" to complete the testimony of Johnson tomorrow. Mellon's attorney, Frank J. Hogan, who is presenting his side first, said he expects to call H. A. Phillips, oldest employe of Mellon and keeper of his securities, as the next witness.

Morgenthau Gets the Ha-Ha; Modest Mellon; The 'Liquidative' Jesse Jones.

By Raymond Clapper

EVERYONE can join in the argument as to why the Government is able to issue bonds at the lowest interest rate in Government history.

Secretary Morgenthau started the discussion at his press conference yesterday by saying the low interest carried in the new bond issue was due to the confidence of the country in the soundness of the Government's credit.

Several skeptical reporters laughed out loud. Morgenthau took it very well.

"I know I oughtn't to say anything like that before such a hard-boiled crowd, but I'm going to make a stump speech since you asked for it."

Which he did. The skeptical reporters listened patiently. When he finished, one of them asked:

"Isn't the real reason due to the fact that the supply of money is greater than the demand?"

"That may have something to do with it," Secretary Morgenthau replied, "but——"

The reason the reporters were so cock-sure was that they got their point of view recently from another high Government fiscal official. He was making a different point and used the supply and demand argument to explain the low interest rate.

Andrew W. Mellon has made plans for establishing a great art collection in Washington, but he apparently has neglected to ante up a portrait of himself to be hung in the Treasury Building along with those of other former Secretaries of the Treasury. There is no Government fund for these portraits and the subjects or their relatives have to provide them, at their own expense. Nobody around the Treasury knows why Mellon hasn't sent in his picture.

Ogden Mills is the only Republican former Secretary who hangs in oil in Morgenthau's reception room. Woodin's went up yesterday, on the second anniversary of his plunge into the bank holiday maelstrom. His long hours during those wild nights unquestionably undermined his already frail health and hastened his death.

The House rose to new heights of self-sacrifice yesterday, but there was a catch in it. In one of the most heavily attended sessions of the year, the House voted down a resolution to give each member an additional clerk.

However, the resolution would have prohibited the use of any congressional clerk hire funds for relatives of members. That would have completely closed down the family pie counter in the House. Although nepotism has been declining in Congress for several years as a result of public criticism, a goodly number of Representatives still carry their wives, children and in-laws, and no doubt a sweetheart here and there, on the House pay roll as clerks. Some have to work for their money and some don't.

In 1932 at least 170 Senators and Representatives were known to have had relatives on the congressional pay roll. A check-up last month by the Associated Press indicated the number of cases in the House had been cut down to 34.

The government has spent between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 on subsistence homesteads and now has 555 families planted as homesteaders on 14 different projects. In all 2,396 men, women and children are starting life over as New Deal homesteaders.

They have some advantages that earlier homesteaders were denied. These modern-day homesteaders start out with electric lights and plumbing which thousands of the third-generation descendants of the sod-house pioneers, who went out to the plains in prairie schooners, haven't got yet.

Jesse Jones and his RFC persist in keeping out of step with the Administration. His books continue to show that more money is being taken in than goes out on new loans. In January, for instance, Jones lent $66,000,000, whereas $94,000,000 was paid back by borrowers.

However, the hefty chairman of RFC does not accept full blame for so flagrantly transgressing the spending rules of the New Deal. Part of it is due to the fact that regardless of the missionary work done by the Administration, some persons still exist who are cursed with a vestigial instinct which causes them to abhor being in debt. It is these benighted persons who insisted on paying the Government back its money and that's what gives Jones a black eye among the other alphabetical spenders.

But is doesn't bother him at all. He looks as proud as the goat on a bock beer sign.

Starting in the Hoover Administration as a temporary emergency agency, the RFC is gradually acquiring the same sort of immortality which most Government bureaus manage to achieve. Recently the power to make loans was extended for two years, running until February 1, 1937. The agency is given 15 years from the date of its last loan in which to liquidate its business. So at best the RFC will not go out of business before February 1, 1952.

Order Signed For Restraint Of TVA Moves

Appeal of Alabama Rule May Lead to Supreme Court Test.

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., March 4.—The signing of Federal court orders to halt "illegal proprietary operations" of the Tennessee Valley Authority in transactions with the Alabama Power Co. today moved another New Deal project toward the United States Supreme Court for a test of its constitutionality.

Judge W. I. Grubb handed down the restraining orders in United States district court here. Counsel for the TVA said they would go immediately to the Federal Court of Appeals at New Orleans with the case, which involves the Administration's "yardstick" electrification plans in the Tennessee Valley.

One of two formal injunctions signed by Judge Grubb restrained the Alabama Power Co. from transferring North Alabama properties to the Tennessee Valley Authority, holding the contract for such sales "in furtherance of illegal proprietary operations of the Tennessee Valley Authority."

In the same decree Judge Grubb enjoined the Alabama Power Co. from operating as an agency for the Electric Home & Farm Authority, Inc., a subsidiary of the TVA, through which cheap electrical appliances were sold on long-term rates to purchasers.

A third injunction contained in the order prohibited 14 north Alabama towns and cities receiving current from the Alabama Power Co. from entering into or performing any contract with TVA for the purchase of electric energy, either directly or indirectly.

The order pertaining to the towns also prohibited the borrowing of funds from any Federal agency to build a distribution system to obtain TVA current.

In an oral decision ten days ago in which he held the TVA without Constitutional authority to sell surplus power, Judge Grubb also ruled that the construction of Joe Wheeler Dam "was legal" and the TVA was entitled to the site, bought from the Alabama Power Co. in a contract annulled today.

The order prohibited the utility from seeking to recover the site either through suit or otherwise, or to interfere with construction work on the dam.

Forney Johnston, counsel for a group of preferred shareholders of the Alabama Power Co. on whose petition the order today was granted, indicated last week that negotiations could be opened for transfer of the dam site, or the Government could institute condemnation proceedings.

Elaborate Festivities in Texas Will Honor Mothers-in-Law

Elaborate Party Arranged by Gene Howe, Amarillo Editor.

By the Associated Press.

Amarillo, Tex., March 4.—The much-maligned mother-in-law—Gene Howe calls her a "mother who has made good"—will be honored tomorrow in festivities fit for a conquering hero.

About 4,000 mothers-in-law are expected here for the second annual "mother-in-law day" sponsored by Howe, editor of the Amarillo Globe and News.

Gov. Jame. V. Allred will make two addresses.

Ben Turpin, uncertain-eyed film comedian, whose likeness appears at the head of Howe's column, "The Tactless Texan," will be master of ceremonies.

There will be a 5-mile parade with 17 bands, 2 National Guard units and cowboys and cowgirls.

Howe started the observance last year after learning he had offended his own mother-in-law, Mrs. W. F. Donald, through "mother-in-law jokes" in his column.

Now derogatory references to mothers-in-law are banned from Howe's papers.

"A mother-in-law is a mother who has made good," Howe said in explanation of the occasion. "The truth is that on the whole we love and cherish our mothers-in-law.

"For every home they've broken up they've saved a hundred. They have brought up more children than the mothers themselves. A good part of the young people could not have made out if it had not been for mothers-in-law.

"The average mother-in-law is not a mother who has merely given birth to a child. Almost any woman can do that.

"But it takes a real woman, a woman with a heart and head and wisdom, to see that her children are married right, and then to see that their home fires are kept burning, and to see that the children that come along are brought up properly."

Gov. Allred's mother-in-law, Mrs. Claude Miller, of Wichita Falls, will be crowned with a garland of sweet peas as the most distinguished mother-in-law in Texas.

Each mother-in-aw who registers will receive a corsage of sweet peas, her badge of honor—entitling her to free ice cream, coffee, picture shows and dances.

'Pirate Treasure' Find Turns Out Gold Brick

By the Associated Press.

Mexicali, lower California, March 4.—Mexican officials unsentimentally gave the lie today to reports a huge chest of pirate gold had been found on Santa Margarita Island off Magdalena Bay.

What had been described as precious treasure, the officials said, was lumber and steel.

Gov. Juan Dominguez, executive of the southern district of lower California, with headquarters at La Paz, reported the story of the find of a chest with $1,000,000 worth of gold in it three months ago was born apparently in the imaginative minds of fishermen who arrived at San Diego yesterday.

Fights Feared, Troops Sought In Mill Strike

1,069 Workers and Public Officials Sign Petition Sent Talmadge.

By the Associated Press.

La Grange, Ga., March 4.—Textile mill workers who want to stay on the job, and public officials who feared violence in a mill strike, today asked Gov. Eugene Talmadge to send National Guardsmen to La Grange and Manchester.

The petition, bearing names of 1,069 operatives in seven local plants of the Callaway group of mills, and a telegram urging troops be sent to Manchester were taken under advisement by the Governor in Atlanta.

A plea for troops came from Manchester after a strike leader there, W. L. Stroup, reported he was adducted from his home by several masked men, taken to an orchard several miles away, and beaten. He said he was told:

"We want to stop you from making speeches to mill workers."

The strike has affected only the Callaway mills, which have seven plants here, one at Manchester and one at Milstead. Strikers say they are protesting a wage cut and initiation of a speed-up system of work.

The mill management in a telegram to Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday offered to do away with the newly installed work system and to put in a scale of wages no higher than NRA code requirements, to be determined by proper labor authorities in Washington. The proposal was referred to the Textile Labor Relations Board in Washington for study.

The mill management said it was paying wages 8 per cent higher than code requirements.

A statement at the mill offices said 55.6 per cent of the workers in La Grange plants of the company were on the job. Labor leaders said that only about 15 to 2 per cent were at work.

The mill normally employs abo 3,000.

She Lost Her Man So Jury Votes Her Doll.

Chicago, March 4 (AP).—A jury today awarded a dollar to Mrs. Florence Kellogg in her $50,000 alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Ruth Ritze Kellogg, third wife of Attorney George Kellogg, jr.

The plaintiff, second wife of Kellogg, charged the third with having stolen her former husband's affections, causing him to divorce her and remarry the defendant within a week.

Repayments Exceed Loans, RFC Reports

$66,000,000 Disbursed in January; $94,000,000 Paid Into Coffers.

Despite the fact that terms under which the RFC will lend money have been liberalized from time to time ever since last summer, Chairman Jesse H. Jones yesterday reported that his agency is collecting more in repayments than it is disbursing in new loans.

Figures for the month of January, the latest available, showed that the RFC disbursed only $66,000,000 that month, compared to an income of $94,000,000. The RFC also transferred $30,000,000 to the Relief Administration, but this bore no relation to its general business.

Mr. Jones interpreted the flow of money back to the coffers of the RFC as symptomatic of business improvement. He explained that conditions appeared to be better for the reason that there is a slackening in demands on the RFC for new loans.

Loan Regulations Revised.

At the same time the chairman made public a circular of regulations for loans to industry, revised to embody changes approved by Congress in extending the life of the RFC two years. Chief among the changes is the abolition of "adequate security" as the requirement for loans and the substitution of the phrase, "so secured as reasonably to assure repayment."

Mr. Jones and others, including Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, have contended there is slight, if any, difference between the two requirements, but in the preparation of new regulations the RFC took a broader view of Congress' action.

"It is the opinion of the corporation," declares the circular, "that the amendment was intended to allow greater latitude, as to what shall constitute security, than the words 'adequate security.'"

"Character" a Consideration.

Continuing, the RFC interprets the changes as contemplating that loans should be made with "character" as a consideration. To this extent the former loan policy will be altered, Mr. Jones said, adding that he expected some increase in the number of loans for that reason.

The amount of money the RFC has advanced directly to industry is mounting slowly, but steadily. With $300,000,000 available for this purpose, the RFC has authorized 840 loans, totaling $44,000,000. Only $11,000,000 has actually been disbursed.

Parole Job Up Today At Commission Session

A successor to the late William W. Bride, as chairman of the District Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, will be considered today at a meeting of the Commissioners. No appointment is expected until Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who is ill at his home, has been consulted.

"We want a man of the highest integrity and competence for this position," said Commissioner George E. Allen. He has no particular candidate in mind, Allen said.

Former Veterans End Florida Road Strike

Key West, Fla., March 4 (AP).—A strike of 425 former service men, engaged in highway construction in the Florida Keys, ended peacefully today. National Gaurds, called out to preserve order in the strike area on lower Maatecumbe Island, are expected to be removed shortly.

A strikers' committee sent a communication to camp officials saying they would go back to their posts if given a satisfactory statement concerning the future of their former "grievance" committee. Strikers claim the committee was run out of camp.

'Slain' Man Lives; 2 'Killers' in Cell; 'Lovely,' Says He

By the Associated Press.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., March 4.—Arthur Robinson, for whose supposed murder two men are serving prison sentences, was reported "alive and well" today.

Belmont Ham, 14-year-old orphan, told Sheriff Lester Massingham he recently talked with Robinson in Little Rock, Ark. Robinson was supposedly slain in February, 1934.

"I told him George Shanks and Earl Wiseman were in the Missouri Penitentiary for killing him and his only comment was that they ought to be there for life," the boy said.

Sheriff Massingham said further he had learned another person, a neighbor of Robinson, had talked wih him in Poplar Bluff only two weeks ago.

An investigation was started in Stoddard County, where the crime allegedly was committed.

Wiseman pleaded guilty to charges of implication. He said Shanks killed Robinson over a girl. Shanks denied the charge, but a jury gave him 20 years. Wiseman received 10 years.

Shanks and Wiseman were arrested after parts of a body, identified as that of a human being, were found in a fire near Robinson's one-room cabin.

State Department Asserts Neither Party Favored, Won't Interfere.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In an obvious effort to allay the discontent spreading over Cuba, the State Department last night issued a formal statement disclaiming any interest whatever in the activities or aspirations of political parties or groups in the forthcoming elections in the insular republic.

For some time many Cubans have professed the belief that, despite the abrogation of the Platt amendment, the United States Government wished to dictate their domestic political course.

The belief has been fed on widely circulated reports and rumors, perhaps spread for partisan purposes, that the United States does not wish any adherents of the deposed Grau faction to participate in the election. It also has been rumored about the island that this Government wishes all revolutionary groups excluded from the balloting and that it supports the Mendieta decree to bar the followers of former President Machado.

Points to Treaty.

In its statement last night the State Department, speaking for the United States Government, indicated that none of these reports was true. In fact, the statement was regarded here as a strong indication that this Government is out of Cuba, definitely and for all time, except to cooperate in its economic rehabilitation.

This Government pointed out that the new treaty with Cuba, governing relations between the two countries and abrogating the Platt amendment "abolished the special relationship previously existing between our two countries."

"The consummation of the present Treaty of Relations," the department's statement continued, "has made it emphatically clear that this Government will not intervene directly or indirectly in the political concerns of the Cuban people.

"It consequently neither favors nor opposes the participation in Cuba's national elections of any particular party or group. It does hope sincerely, however, that because of the peculiarly close friendship existing between our two peoples, that when national elections are held the result thereof may represent the effective will of the Cuban people, freely expressed."

Economic Trend Applauded.

"The continuing reports which the Department of State has received of the rapid strides which Cuba has made toward economic and social rehabilitation have caused the Government of the United States the deepest gratification," the statement asserted.

"It is this government's most earnest hope that this encouraging trend may neither be retarded nor blocked by any failure on the part of Cuban political parties and groups to agree upon these measures of electoral procedure necessary to insure the orderly return by the republic of Cuba to representative government."

The forthcoming elections, now scheduled to take place between the middle of July and mid-August, are to provide for the passage from the existing provisional government to that of a constitutional government. The elections first scheduled for last December were postponed until this month and then postponed until summer.

Meanwhile the Cubans are in a controversy as to whether only delegates to a constitutional assembly shall be elected or whether a new regime also should be elected.

Charter Day Dinner Held at Howard U.

The annual charter day dinner under auspices of the Howard University Alumni Association was held last night in Sojourner Truth Hall on the university campus, the principal speaker being Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Interior Department, adviser on the economic status of Negroes. Mrs. Myrtle R. Phillips spoke on behalf of the faculties of the university.

Charter day addresses were made by members of the faculty in nearby cities. Dean Dwight O. W. Holmes, of the graduate school, spoke before the Baltimore association of alumni, while Dean Lucy D. Slowe and Dr. Ralph Bunche addressed alumni in Philadelphia, and Dean Kelly Miller was the guest of honor at the assembly of the North Jersey Association in Newark.

N. Y. Murders Held 'Cover-Up'

Theory Racketeers Slew Three, Fearing 'Break' in Jury Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 4.—Swift steps to stamp out lucrative policy and gambling rackets and vice in New York City were taken by authorities today, following a sanguinary 24 hours, in which five men were slain.

With the policy racket, which has an annual "take" in the millions, as the focal point of its investigation, the March New York County grand jury was sworn in.

The bloody week-end caused District Attorney William C. Dodge to remark that it would be "just too bad" if the inquiry into gambling and vice rackets develop into "another Becker episode."

At least three of the men were slain, police believe, in a frantic underworld drive to remove persons who might be able to submit incriminating evidence to the grand jury.

While the grand jury prepared for its inquiry, Charles Galassa, 33, was arrested for allegedly taking policy slips in the same building.

"This defendant has been observed taking plays in this very building every day, while this publicity on the policy racket has been going on," said Samuel Marcus, special assistant district attorney.

Large Part of Europe's Royalty Sees Alfonso's Son Take Bride

By the Associated Press

Rome, March 4.—Emanuela de Dampierre, American-French girl, became a royal princess at a brilliant wedding today uniting her to Don Jaime, son of former King Alfonso of Spain.

The granddaughter of the former Josephine Curtis, of Boston, whose ancestors played an important part in United States history, and the tall son of Spanish royalty, were married in a regal ceremony in the presence of scores of members of royalty, hundreds from the artistocracy of France, Spain and Italy and a number of Americans.

Don Jaime has long suffered from an auditory ailment for which he has received treatment in a number of European medical centers, and an accompanying impediment of speech.

After being received in a private audience by Pope Pius, who presented them with a rosary and a prayer book, the royal couple were guests of honor at a brilliant breakfast reception at an aristocratic palace in Rome.

Tonight the former King's son and his bride dined quietly with the two families at Alfonso's villa here. Tomorrow they plan to leave for London to visit the bridegroom's mother, the former Queen Victoria. After a honeymoon cruise up the Nile, they said they hoped to visit the United States.

Crown Prince Umberto and Princess Marie Jose represented King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helen of Italy. There were more than 2,000 wedding guests, including Queen Marie Amelie of Portugal, Grand Duke Dmitri of Russia, the Count of Paris, heir apparent of the Duke de Guise, pretender to the French throne; his sister, Princess Francoise, and her husband, Prince Christopher of Greece, and scores of others.

Former Queen Victoria remained in London, absent from this wedding as she was from the wedding of her daughter, the Infanta Beatrice, to Prince Torlonia recently. The bride's father, Count de Dampierre of Paris, also was absent.

Supreme Court Rules Against Fox on Patents

Preparing again to turn its attention to New Deal legislation, the United States Supreme Court yesterday handed down 12 opinions and issued orders in another dozen cases, thus reducing the miscellaneous business before the tribunal.

Outstanding in the opinions rendered yesterday was one holding invalid a provision in the New York State milk law which undertook to prevent the sale of low-cost milk in the State purchased outside of its borders. Another held invalid motion picture sound patents on which William Fox sought to collect $100,000,000 for infringement.

In another case involving the validity of a statute of Tennessee requiring railroads to defray one-half the cost of grade crossing elimination, the court held that changed economic conditions might result in a previously valid law becoming invalid. It remanded the case back to the State courts to inquire into the force of changed economic conditions applying to railroads.

New Deal Test Set.

The only New Deal case touched on by the Supreme Court concerned the constitutionality of the Frazier-Lemke mortgage moratorium act, which, it is estimated, affects $12,000,000,000 of farm property. The court agreed to review a decision by the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the act and scheduled the case for argument on April 1.

The Frazier-Lemke act, which gave insolvent farmers the right to obtain a five-year mortgage moratorium by application to a Federal court, has been held constitutional by five district courts and unconstitutional by two—in Maryland and Virginia.

The court this week is scheduled to hear arguments in the case of the Spielman Motor Sales Co., Inc., of New York, challenging the validity of the NRA act.

Housing Action Delayed.

The Supreme Court yesterday took no action on the Government petition for a review of a Federal court ruling at Louisville, Ky., that the Federal Government and the PWA lacked authority to condemn land for low-cost housing projects. A final decision on this question is of vital importance to the Administration's housing plans. The ruling may come next Monday.

The court rejected Mr. Fox's claims of patent infringement made through the American Tri-Ergon Corporation, owned by the motion picture magnate, on the ground that there had been no invention that was patentable. The lower courts had upheld the validity of the patents. The case revolved around the process of producing on a single film sound and pictures.

The court's decision, given in three cases, was but one of several blows received by Mr. Fox in recent years. Several years ago he lost his motion picture companies due to financial difficulties, although he received some remuneration in return.

Army Building Deadly Planes On West Coast

posed to look at that plane. That's the new Army job."

Frank Hawks, internationally known speed flier, was recalled from the East, presumably to make speed tests of the new plane, although company officials were silent on that. Hawks' plane, the Sky Chief, is of the same "Gamma-type" low-winged monoplane as the new attack plane.

Sheathed in tempered steel over all its vulnerable parts, the snub-nose, cocoon-like metal coat and tapering, upcurved wings give the plane a distinctly wicked appearance.

Instead of fighting high in the amphitheater of the sky in spectacular skirmishes, the new plane will be less dramatic but a more deadly weapon. Its low, swallow-like wings will enable it to fight close to the earth.

With a bullet-proof shell of armor to protect it from ordinary rifle and machine-gun fire, the planes are designed to level off near ground and mow down regiments as a scythe shears off wheat.

The planes carry six machine guns and several hundred rounds of bombs.

Pursuit planes, buzzing wasps of the air which harass and destroy heavier and clumsier bombers, may be rendered virtually obsolete by the new attack planes. Improved types of bombers have made pursuit ships far less effective, and the new plane, with its equipment of guns and bombs, can outmaneuver the pursuit plane, which fires over its tail and through the propeller.

Pursuit planes are able to attack ground troops only in a single line of fire, while the new armored attack planes can dart down in formation, unload their charge of death in all directions, and mount into the sky again.

They will carry four guns on the wings and two aft in the fuselege. The pilot will control the guns on the wings. The man in the rear will control the two guns on the fuselage and handle bombs.

The planes, with a speed only slightly less than that of the fastest pursuit ships, travel about 250 miles an hour.

Schacht Advises Debt Moratorium

economic troubles at the feet of the treaty of Versailles. So long as this treaty existed, he said, Germany was bound to save herself by her own efforts.

"The fundamental principle underlying our 'new plan' is: Not to buy more than can be paid for and primarily to buy only what is essential."

It was nonsense, he emphasized, to say that he was in conflict with National Socialist economic policies.

"All that I say and do has the full approval of Der Fuehrer," he said. "I would do or say nothing without his approval."

After showing how Germany has changed from a country with credits abroad totaling 25,000,000,000 marks before the war to one with 25,000,000,000 marks in debts abroad today, Schacht charged foreign nations with nullifying Germany's efforts to meet her obligations by "trade restrictions and exchange dumpings."

British Boost Fund to Build Army Strength

Nearly 20 Million Added to Budget as Fear of Germany Grows.

Some quarters took this to mean that the foreign secretary intends to spare no words in stating the situation plainly to Reichstuehrer Hitler when he and Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, go to Berlin on Thursday. The proposed extension of the trip to Moscow, it appeared today, is off.

The government's statement in Parliament admitted failure of what it termed its own unilateral disarmament policy and urged a new naval agreement avoiding a naval race. It reiterated the capital ship foundation of British naval policy and renewed the view that Britain's frontier has moved outward from the English Channel.

"From the point of view of aerial defense the integrity of certain territory across the channel is more than ever before the vital interest of this country," said the statement.

Sharply rebuking Germany's methods, the government said "the desire for peace expressed by the leaders of Germany has been welcomed by His Majesty's government, but they can not fail to recognize that not only the forces but the spirit in which the German people are being organized contribute to the general feeling of insecurity."

The statement said that "if this rearmament continues at the present rate the existing anxieties of Germany's neighbors will increase, and peace itself may be imperiled."

3 Farmers Defy Census Takers

'Won't Talk,' They Say in Illinois, Are Held for Federal Jury.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., March 4.—Three Green Valley farmers told the Government today it was nobody's business what their farms were worth nor how heavily mortgaged, but they ran into Federal prosecution for refusing to talk.

The trio, who defied the right of the regular United States farm census takers to ask them questions, were John Fisher and Fred and Phil Fornoff.

United States Commissioner William H. Moore held all three to the Federal grand jury on the charge of violating the census act, punishable by 60 days in jail and $100 fine.

Thirteen sympathetic farmers from the neighborhood came to court with them and supplied the $500 bond required for each.

The questions were contained in the census blanks used by the Department of Agriculture in its quintennial survey, prescribed by Congress years ago. They refused to answer these queries:

"Total value of this farm, land and buildings.

"Was there any mortgage debt on land and buildings so owned by you January 1, 1935?

"Amount of mortgage debt."

Said Fisher: "We are going to find out what our rights are."

outlay to provide new desks and typewriters for members.

Before the final vote the House turned thumbs down on the practice of hiring relatives. The anti-nepotism amendment of Representative Ford (Democrat), California, was adopted, 214 to 16.

Representative White (Democrat), Idaho, author of the bill, protested the clerks had more work to do than they could hope to accomplish and needed help.

Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee was the only leader who supported the bill.

to action of Secretary of Interior Ickes in holding up $6,000,000 already allocated toward a $20,000,000 highway between Great Smoky and Shenandoah National parks, and transferring this and other money to the FERA.

Senator Byrd, who already has condemned the proposed "$5,000,000,000 works and relief appropriation" as excessive, claims $1,600,000,000 still remains unspent from the original recovery outlay. He proposes an additional appropriation of only $1,880,000,000.

Byrd asked immediate action on his latest resolution when offered yesterday. Majority Leader Robinson asked that it go over until today. It may prove a rallying point for foes of the $4,880,000,000 bill, and bring to the surface much smoldering Senate resentment against Administration tactics in handling the delayed works measure.

New Highs Are Reached For Hogs and Cattle

Chicago, March 4 (AP).—New high prices for hogs and cattle in more than four years were established in the live stock trade again today. Hogs gained 10 to 15 cents, the top reaching $9.65 a hundredweight, exclusive of the processing tax, highest price since October, 1930. Best steers brought a peak of $14, highest since December, 1930, with most cattle ruling 25 cents above late last week.

The live stock supply situation, farm hog population being the smallest in 50 years, and cattle and calves the lowest in numbers since 1931, is the important factor in the present meat trade.

House Bill Asks 'Pink-Slip' Repeal

Approval Held Likely but Senate Threatens Fight.

A bill to repeal the "pink slip" publicity clause in the income tax law was introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Doughton, Ways and Means Committee.

Representative Bacon (Republican), of New York, offered a similar measure several weeks ago.

Observers believed chances for House passage of the Doughton bill were good, but the Senate has threatened to vote even wider publicity if the House repeals the pink slip law.

Daniel L. Haynes, who plays the role in "The Green Pastures," pleaded not guilty before Federal Judge John C. Knox to an indictment he made false statements in a bankruptcy schedule and before Bankruptcy Referee Harold B. Coffin. A trial was set for later this week.

whether there would be monetary inflation within six years. He retorted:

"If we are to assume that President Roosevelt will be President for the next six years, I can tell you this—I can guarantee that there will be no inflation in this country while Franklin D. Roosevelt is President.

Only 18 of the required 218 signatures were obtained the first day on the Townsend petition, offered by Representative Monaghan (Democrat), Montana.

Representative McGroarty (Democrat), California, author of the bill embodying the Townsend program, insisted the measure should be brought to a vote.

"Members who refuse to sign the petition," he threatened, "will just be putting themselves on the spot with the voters back home."

Owen Indorses Patman Bill.

Among those who indorsed the Patman bill before the House Ways and Means Committee in addition to its author were James E. Van Zandt, Veterans of Foreign Wars national commander; former Senator Robert L. Owen, Oklahoma, and Edward E. Kennedy, Farmers Union.

Witnesses favoring the opposition measure of Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, will testify today. The Vinson bill differs from the Patman plan in method of payment, in effect providing for bond issues rather than additional currency.

Patman contended two-thirds of the House membership were behind his proposal and, if necessary, would vote to override a presidential veto. He added there was enough gold and silver in the Treasury to "back up" the printing press money. He protested his measure did not contemplate inflation, but "controlled expansion."

Letter From Garner.

Van Zandt sought to capitalize on a letter written to a Chicago resident in 1931 by Vice President Garner. A paragraph quoted read:

"I am of the opinion that if it had not been for the billion dollars distributed through the country as a result of the bonus action of the last Congress the effects of the depression would be far more intense in many parts of the country."

Sweeney said the Coughlin central bank measure would "correct the abuse such as occurred in 1929 when the Federal Reserve Board apparently encouraged gambling with other people's money."

The measure would call for establishment of "the Bank of the United States," to be managed by a six-man commission. The board would be named by one director from each State, who would be elected by popular vote. One of the bill's cardinal purposes would be to restore the 1926 price level.

Group to Ponder Library Tax Plan

Silver Spring Body to Meet Thursday Night.

A special meeting of the Silver Spring (Md.) Public Library Association will be held in Jesup Blair Community House at 8 p. m. Thursday, when a definite plan of tax support for the library will be considered.

Recommendations for the form of support will be submitted to the association by a committee appointed in January to make a study of the situation. A tentative report by Stephen James, chairman of the committee, recommends that authority be sought from the Legislature for an enabling act to permit the county commissioners to assess a tax in the area served by the library.

The committee also considered establishment of a central county library at Rockville with branches in the more populous districts. In addition to James the committee is composed of Dr. L. M. Christie, Joseph C. Cissel, Mrs. Erskine Miller and Miss A. R. Hasse.

Japan to Hear Of U. S. Moves In China Crises

Far East Situation Topic of Session With Sze and Saito.

By the Associated Press.

The American Government's reaction to developments in the Far East—chiefly revolving around China's economic and financial crisis—was briefly outlined to the Japanese and Chinese envoys yesterday by Undersecretary Phillips.

Hirosi Saito, the Japanese ambassador, was reliably reported to have been assured that the United States has no intention of entering into any diplomatic negotiations with other powers concerning China without keeping Japan fully informed of all developments.

Dr. Sao-Ke Sze, the Chinese minister, declined any comment on his discussion with Phillips. Questions raised by China's financial situation, however, were understood to have been the general subject of the discussion.

The Japanese ambassador, who conferred for less than 10 minutes with Phillips, at his invitation, said he had not discussed any suggestion that Japan and the United States join in making a loan to China.

While not denying that overtures designed to explore all possibilities of assisting China are in diplomatic circulation, Saito said that, in his opinion, it was mostly talk.

No phase of the American silver purchase program was discussed with Phillips, Saito added. It was reliably indicated also that the silver question was not raised by Sze.

Great Britain is understood to have made cautious overtures to Japan and the United States concerning China's financial crisis and suggested the possibility of exploring ways and means through which the powers might assist China.

Observers here have received intimations that the discussions already held have been purely exploratory and there has been no indication the United States or other Western powers will join in making a loan to China in the immediate future.

PinehurstHints Murder Clews In Bride Death

Prosecutor Has 'Hole Card' Ready for Inquiry Today, He Says.

Women, according to some experts on suicide, never take their lives without first putting on their best clothes.

Investigations hereabouts are extremely rare. Therefore, the local coroner and the local police were not very well prepared when the death of Mrs. Davidson upset the perennial calm. It is understood they did not examine the garage for clews until two days after Mrs. Davidson's death.

The principal investigator has been L. P. Whitfield, southern ace of the Burns Detective Agency. He was hired by the Statler family, but he has been reporting to Pruette.

Questions for Inquiry.

Other questions which Pruette wants answered tomorrow are:

What happened from the time that Mr. and Mrs. Davidson, following the charity party, left the spaghetti restaurant about 4:15 a. m. until the body of the heiress was found at 9:05 a. m.?

Why was her body in a cramped, kneeling position on the running board of her automobile?

Why was the motor of the automobile stopped and the switch still on, at a time when there was still gas in the tank?

Why Mrs. Davidson should be so scantily dressed, if she was going to take a ride, as claimed?

The temperature, according to natives, was in the "low twenties," which is considerably below freezing.

Question of Attire.

Solicitor Pruette thinks that in either case—accident or suicide—the attire would have been more adequate.

He feels that if she had been going for a drive, she certainly would have put on more clothing.

He feels that she would have done likewise if she had been contemplating suicide.

Tomorrow's inquest will be held in the town hall, with a gallery of millionaires as witnesses.

The first witness will be Pearl Watson, maid to the deceased heiress.

She will be followed by Emanuel Birch, colored butler, who discovered the body a week ago this morning.

Officials Say Evidence Points to Murder

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 4.—Every scrap of evidence they have been able to piece together indicates that Mrs. Elva Statler Davidson was the victim of a strange and scientific murder, officials said tonight.

All day they labored—lawyers, physicians and the coroner—and at evening said the possibility that the beautiful heiress walked out of her white house among the pines to take her own life was growing dimmer with every passing hour. They already have eliminated the theory that she died accidentally.

Tomorrow a coroner's jury convenes in Pinehurst's community house to try to dig out all the facts of this puzzling tragedy in the midst of the winter playground of the wealthy.

Pruette at Pinehurst.

Solicitor Pruette arrived here today from Wadesboro to take charge of the inquiry. He went back over the known facts of what happened last Wednesday between 4:15 and 9:05 a. m., when Mrs. Davidson's body was found. Then Pruette said:

"This investigation would not have progressed as far as it has if we were not convinced that there was strong suspicion of foul play here.

Pruette said it had been determined that Mrs. Davidson and her husband of two months arrived home at 4:15 a. m. Obviously she changed from her evening clothes, but no one knows what happened then, because Davidson said he retired to his own room, and that the next time he saw his wife was at 9:05 a. m., when the butler raced into the house bearing the news that she was dead.

Pruette said from what he learned today that Mrs. Davidson apparently died between 7 and 8 a. m.

All officials declined to say what they were using as the basis for their belief that murder was committed.

"We have learned that Mrs. Davidson paid $35 for a painting at the charity ball Tuesday night, and women with suicide on their minds don't go around bidding on pictures," Pruette said.

The theory was that Mrs. Davidson went into the garage and deliberately started the motor of an automobile with the idea of taking her own life or was trapped in the garage by a jammed door and died before she could summon help.

Monoxide Gas in Lungs.

But when the vital organs were taken to Duke University for analysis, it was learned that while carbon monoxide was in the lungs, there was a chance that a more subtle poison might have been the actual cause of death. Physicians and chemists at Duke have been working on the vital organs for more than 48 hours and still are not ready to report.

Attorneys for the Statler estate—William Marcy and Edwin Jaeckel—will attend the inquest tomorrow.

Friends described Mrs. Davidson tonight as being temperamental, with tendencies to become either gay or depressed. Virtually everyone agreed she was melancholy the night before she died.

The first witness tomorrow, Pruette said, would be Birch, the butler; Pearl Watson, the maid, and Curtis Campaigne, of Montclair, N. J., guest of the Davidsons.

ernors of the Federal Reserve banks to advise with the board in this matter. The board should be required to obtain the views of this committee of governors before adopting a policy for open-market operations, discount rates or changes in reserve requirements."

Centralization of open-market policies in the board is one of the main points in the highly controversial Federal Reserve section of the bill.

Open-market operations refer to the direct purchase by the Reserve banks of Federal securities offered for sale on the open market. Such buying is designed to make money more plentiful and increase credit reservoirs for business purposes.

Tobacco Law Hit By Farm Bureau

Maryland's tobacco grading law yesterday was branded by the executive committee and board of directors of the Prince Georges County Farm Bureau as entirely inadequate for local needs.

Meeting in the office of P. E. Clark, county agent, at Upper Marlboro, the executive body decided to ask the Legislature to change the law to suit the county's needs.

The Farm Bureau representatives also passed resolutions urging favorable action on the proposed congressional action regulating the exchange of eggs between United States and China and on the proposed "fresh egg law" for Maryland.

April 6 was set as the date for the next county-wide Farm Bureau meeting at the new Marlboro High School.

Prevailing Wage Scale Denounced by Farmers

The Montgomery County Welfare Board will be urged to favor payment of wage scales less than the prevailing scale for persons on relief by a commitee of the Montgomery Farm Bureau at the meeting of the board Monday at Rockville, Md.

Members of the committee are J. W. Jones, chairman; James King, William Hines, W. W. Hodges, Chester Clagett and O. W. Anderson. The Farm Bureau adopted a resolution at its annual meeting recently opposing payment of the prevailing wage scale and urging more representation for the farmer on the welfare board.

Roosevelt Asks Direct Subsidy ToAidShipping

Commission all forms of carriers—on land, on sea, and in the air. A general message, summing up into one plan the various proposals already set forth, is expected next week.

Mr. Roosevelt gave three reasons why he favors an "adequate merchant marine." First, he expressed a fear that American shippers might suffer from discrimination if American ships did not carry sufficient tonnage to assure "fair competition."

Secondly, this country might find itself "seriously crippled" by want of bottoms if other nations become involved in war. Thirdly, he warned that naval auxiliaries are indispensable in the event the United States itself should go to war.

Efforts Have Failed.

Both the lending of money at low interest rates and the inclusion of subsidies in ocean-mail contracts have been failures as a stimulus to shipbuilding, the President said. He pointed out that close to $30,000,000 is being paid annually for carrying mail that would cost, under customary rates only $3,000,000.

"The difference, $27,000,000," he added, "is a subsidy, and nothing but a subsidy."

Declaring that "under this disguised form it is an unsatisfactory and not an honest way of providing the aid that Government ought to give to shipping," Mr. Roosevelt said that, on the other hand, a frank subsidy is "a comparatively simple thing."

A new subsidy system, he said, should embrace the difference between building ships in this country and in other countries; the difference in the cost of operating ships under American standards, and, finally, allowance should be made for the subsidies other governments provide for their shipping.

Mr. Roosevelt proposed that Congress bring about the "termination of ocean-mail contracts as rapidly as possible" and that the lending of Government money for shipbuilding be stopped. It was regarded as significant that the Administration did not itself, as in the case of the air-mail contracts last year, abrogate the ocean-mail awards, but leaves that as a matter for action of Congress.

The legislation, he said, should do away with certain "practices and abuses" of shipping companies and should, in addition, revamp the machinery of administration. He proposed "for the present" that "the qdisi-judicial and quasi-legislative duties" of the present Shipping Board be invested in the Interstate Commerce Commission, but that such other functions as ship inspection be retained by the Department of Commerce.

In this respect the President was in disagreement with the report of a special committee on shipping policy, which proposed the creation of a Federal Maritime Authority to have general charge of the merchant marine. By his disinclination to follow this suggestion the President again showed his disapproval of increasing the number of administrative agencies. In submitting the report of the Federal Aviation Commission, it was recalled, he brushed aside a similar proposal for civil aviation.

Committee's Report.

The shipping policy committee, which was composed of an interdepartmental group headed by South Trimble, jr., solicitor of the Department of Commerce, submitted 18 recommendations for improving the merchant marine. It reported that the Navy alone would need 140 auxiliary vessels, such as passenger and cargo ships, tankers and refrigerator ships, in addition to the number now available in case of emergency.

The second report was prepared by Postmaster General James A. Farley, and was based on the ocean mail contract hearings concluded in January.

Condemning the letting of ocean mail awards by the administration of Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, it made the flat charge that the contracts were "negotiated" in violation of law. In addition, Farley charged that most of the millions advanced as a subsidy to shipping had been deliberately "squandered."

The total Government aid given the merchant marine so far was figured by the Postmaster General at $162,139,999. Shipping companies still owe the Government $112,514,000, more than half the book value of the vessels, yet few ships have been built and the companies are unable to construct those they have contracted for, he declared.

Truck Driver Is Fined For Hitting Police Car

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 4.—Damage to a State police car by a truck driven by George E. Snyder, of Kearneysville, W. Va., on a State highway near here, resulted in a fine of $25 and costs for Snyder and he was convicted in a magistrate's court of reckless driving.

Corpl. Ancell, driving the police car en route to headquarters in Harrison County, testified Snyder drove a truck onto the highway from a side road without warning. The police car crashed into the middle of the truck, damaging the car to an estimated extent of $50, the costs of which were later shouldered by Snyder, and damaging the truck slightly. Ancell and Snyder and a companion in the truck escaped unhurt.

Text of Message on Shipping

To the Congress of the United States:

I present to the Congress the question of whether or not the United States should have an adequate merchant marine.

To me there are three reasons for answering this question in the affirmative. The first is that in time of peace subsidies granted by other nations, shipping combines, and other restrictive or rebating methods may well be used to the detriment of American shippers. The maintenance of fair competition alone calls for American flag ships of sufficient tonnage to carry a reasonable portion of our foreign commerce.

Second, in the event of a major war in which the United States is not involved, our commerce, in the absence of an adequate American Merchant Marine, might find itself seriously crippled because of its inability to secure bottoms for neutral peaceful foreign trade.

Third, in the event of a war in which the United States itself might be engaged, American flag ships are obviously needed not only for naval auxiliaries, but also for the maintenance of reasonable and necessary commercial intercourse with other nations. We should remember lessons learned in the last war.

Disguised Subsidies.

In many instances in our history the Congress has provided for various kinds of disguised subsidies to American shipping. In recent years the Congress has provided this aid in the form of lending money at low rates of interest to American shipping companies for the purpose of building new ships for foreign trade. It has, in addition, appropriated large annual sums under the guise of payments for ocean mail contracts.

This lending of money for shipbuilding has, in practice, been a failure. Few ships have been built and many difficulties have arisen over the repayment of the loans. Similar difficulties have attended the granting of ocean mail contracts. The Government today is paying annually about $30,000,000 for the carrying of mails which would cost, under normal ocean rates, only $3,000,000. The difference, $27,000,000, is a subsidy and nothing but a subsidy. But even under this disguised form it is an unsatisfactory and not an honest way of providing the aid that Government ought to give to shipping.

I propose that we end this subterfuge. If the Congress decides that it will maintain a reasonably adequate American merchant marine, I believe that it can well afford honestly to call a subsidy by its right name.

Approached in this way a subsidy amounts to a comparatively simple thing. It must be based upon providing for American shipping Government aid to make up the differential between American and foreign shipping costs. It should cover first the difference in the cost of building ships; and, finally, it should take into consideration the liberal subsidies that many foreign governments provide for their shipping. Only by meeting this threefold differential can we expect to maintain a reasonable place in ocean commerce for ships flying the American flag, and at the same time maintain American standards.

Annual Appropriations.

In setting up adequate provisions for subsidies for American shipping the Congress should provide for the termination of existing ocean mail contracts as rapidly as possible, and it should terminate the practice of lending Government money for shipbuilding. It should provide annual appropriations for subsidies sufficiently large to cover the differentials that I have described.

I am submitting to you herewith two reports dealing with American shipping: A report on an interdepartmental committee known as the committee on shipping policy, appointed June 18, 1934, by the Secretary of Commerce, and a report to me from the Postmaster General on ocean mail contracts prepared pursuant to an executive order of July 11, 1934.

Reports which have been made to me by appropriate authorities in the executive branch of the Government have shown that some American shipping companies have engaged in practices and abuses which should and must be ended. Some of these have to do with the improper operating of subsidiary companies, the payment of excessive salaries, the engaging in businesses not directly a part of shipping and other abuses which have made for poor management, improper use of profits and scattered efforts.

Suggestions on Legislation.

Legislation providing for adequate aid to the American merchant marine should include not only adequate appropriation for such purposes and appropriate safeguards for its expenditure, but a reorganization of the machinery for its administration. The quasi-judicial and quasi-legislative duties of the present Shipping Board Bureau of the Department of Commerce should be transferred for the present to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Purely administrative functions, however, such as information and planning, ship inspection, and the maintenance of aids to navigation should, of course, remain in the Department of Commerce.

An American merchant marine is one of our most firmly established traditions. It was, during the first half of our national existence, a great and growing asset. Since then it has declined in value and importance. The time has come to square this traditional ideal with effective performance.

Free competition among the nations in the building of modern shipping facilities is a manifestation of wholly desirable and wholesome national ambition. In such free competition the American people want us to be properly represented. The American people want to use American ships. Their Government owes it to them to make certain that such ships are in keeping with our national pride and national needs.

The Gossipel Truth

MARLENE DIETRICH hasn't been out stepping since the preview of "The Devil Is a Woman," and since has told friends that she is angry with Director von Sternberg because of the picture . . . the leading man in this picture, Lionel Atwill, is made up to look like Von Sternberg, even to the drooping moustache . . . Constance Bennett went out with the Marquis de la Falaise—and that is news . . . Eric von Stroheim gets a chance again; he will be the assistant director on the next Greta Garbo flicker, "Anna Karenina" . . . Garbo is having difficulty getting a leading man. Ronald Colman, who was first offered the job, demanded the billing read: "Coleman-Garbo in" and Greta said plenty. Fredric March asks for equal billing and a terrific salary . . . Jack Doyle is in the clinches with Judith Allen, which is one way for Doyle to follow Max Baer . . . "Redheads On Parade" started shooting, and the only redhead on the set was the script girl.

It was at a call for chorines for "The Great Ziegfeld." Dance Director Seymour Felix addressed the chorines before making his selections. He said: "Before I pick any girls, I want to tell you that in several numbers you will have to wear abbreviated costumes. If any of your mothers will object to you appearing in these costumes I want you to step out now. I don't want to have any trouble after the picture starts shooting." He no sooner finished saying this than one of the chorines started laughing aloud. Seymour walked over to the chorine, Jean Gale, and said: "What's the idea of laughing at what I said?" Miss Gale replied: "You'll have to excuse me, Mr. Felix, but my mother is also standing in this line."

TOBY WING and Jackie Coogan are playing kissing games again, if you're interested in doings of young love . . . The original song Grace Moore will sing in her picture, is called "Love Me Forever," and it was written by Director Victor Schertzinger, who composed "One Night of Love" for her . . . Miss Moore is still recording; the scenario was handed to Jo Swerling for a hasty job of rewriting . . . Gus Van will play a bit in the Joe E. Brown flicker, "Alibi Ike," and sing a ditty in a hotel lobby sequence . . . Marc Connolly has purchased the dramatic rights to Thornton Wilder's "Heaven's My Destination," and will fashion a play from it . . . Felixe Rollo and Peggy Fears have been Club Trocodaring . . . David Selznick asked Jed Harris if he would look at the Helen Hays' flicker, "Vanessa," in a projection room and suggest what scene could be eliminated as the picture was too long. Jed looked at it in the projection room, came out, and handed Selznick a list of eliminations—a list which was thicker than the original scenario of "Vanessa."

Ross Alexander tells of a man who was out driving and saw a farmer plowing a field with a bull pulling the plow. The farmer was having great difficulty, and the man stopped his auto and got out to speak to him. "Don't you know," he told the farmer, "that in these modern days you don't have to have a bull pull a plow. There are horses for that, and better yet, there are tractors." The farmer thanked him and said: "I have a horse to pull this plow and I also have a tractor, but I want to teach this bull that there is something else in this world besides leisure" . . . Robert Hopkins, the scenario writer, bought a new house, and is now actually telling people that he wants to buy a second-hand swimming pool to install there.

REUBEN MAMOULIAN'S favorite actress off the screen continues to be Gertrude Michaels . . . George Arliss wants to do Samuel Pepys on the screen next . . . Irving Berlin has written a grand score for "Top Hat," and a number you're certain to love is the ditty titled, "Isn't This a Lovely Day to Be Caught in the Rain" . . . Several months ago there was a big fire at the Warner studio. It took a month to rebuild the set which was destroyed. And what do you think they built on the site of the burned area? They built a burned Chinese village, which is now being used in "Oil For the Lamps of China" . . . Edna Purviance is still on the weekly pay roll of the Charlie Chaplin studio . . . Incidentally, Charlie, immediately after shooting a sequence, runs it in the projection room, studies it, and then reshoots it.

O'Conor Goolrick of this city today that the Marine Corps would send 600 officers and men and the Fleet Marine Force Band here on May 2 to engage with cadets from the Virginia Military Institute in reenactment of the famous Battle of Chancellorsville.

It will be the seventy-first anniversary of the engagement that resulted in a smashing victory for the South.

The Marines will arrive in the Chancellorsville sector, 12 miles west of this city, on April 30, and go into camp with the V. M. I. Cadets. They will make up the two opposing forces that will reenact parts of the Battle of Chancellorsville, including Jackson's dramatic march around Hooker's Army, between two Confederate forces and resulted in a victory for the South.

A committee from this city will shortly visit President Roosevelt to invite him to attend the exercises. Other notables will be invited to attend as plans to make the affair a gigantic celebration begin immediately.

The night was black. Every shell-burst that hit the canopy of heaven lighted the sector for miles around as bright as sunlight. And during these brief periods of "daylight," snipers set their guns anew on any unfamiliar object revealed through the powerful lens of the binocular.

The messenger grabbed a wire-post and pulled himself along the ground to another shell-hole just as one of those flares hit the sky. "This is risky business!" he thought. A sniper's bullet whizzed through the air as if meant for the messenger. Maybe it was. The air was thick with death-lead, and none of the shells had any tags on them.

Soon it was black again, the messengeer crawled out of the hole and struggled through a barbed-wire entanglement. Suddenly the air was rent with machine-gun fire. The messenger dropped to his knees. "Oh, merciful God," he pleaded, "If you can make her happy, please do it for —me." The messenger toppled.

It was days before the messenger's body was discovered. Sergt. Atkinson ripped open the officer's coat on the body and took out the identification tag. It read: "Capt. Albert Wellborn, Co. G, 110th Infantry, 5th Division."

West Virginia's House Rejects Series of Bills

Votes Down Proposals on Liquor Law and Justices of Peace.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., March 4.—Proposals for constitutional amendments to abolish the office of justice of the peace and repeal all restrictions on enactment of laws regulating liquor sales were beaten down in the House of Delegates today.

A bill to set up a "State board of higher education" also was defeated by the House after long debate that included assertions the measure would permit closing of smaller colleges.

Between the tides of negative votes the delegates voted, 61 to 8, for a measure to outlaw the "numbers game" in West Virginia by making participation in the "game" in any way a misdemeanor.

A motion by Delegate Russex (Democrat), of Ohio, to postpone consideration of the "numbers" bill until tomorrow to permit a study of its provisions was shouted down after its sponsor, Delegate Rairdon (Republican), of Mason, declared:

"Clear-Cut Issue."

"Unless there is a declaration wanting to be heard I can see no reason for holding up this bill. It's a clear-cut issue to outlaw the numbers racket.

"We can't stop petty gambling by legislation, but we can protect our children from a bunch of gamblers who are teaching them to become racketeers."

The State liquor control commissioners hung a "busy" sign on their front door today and began an intensive study of their job of setting up a system of State stores to sell liquor.

"We're not in," was the answer they gave to all who rapped on the door.

Go Into Seclusion.

Chairman D. Homer Stephenson, John B. Wilson and A. Spates Brady, the three men appointed to the commission to control liquor sales under the new act which replaced prohibition, held a brief meeting with the Governor at 1 p. m., attended to the details of taking office and then went into seclusion in another part of the building.

At 6 p. m. they were still hard at it.

The sale of legal liquor awaits their order.

Under the liquor control act adopted by the Legislature all sales are under the control of the commission and until it is ready to put its system into operation, beer of 5 per cent alcoholic strength is the strongest drink available legally.

Mrs. Viola M. Walzl, vice president of the Maryland Auxiliary, for the Southern district, will be the installing officer.

Those to be installed include Mrs. Karl A. Young, president; Mrs. Harry Miller, first vice president; Mrs. Susie A. Bell, second vice president; Mrs. Robert Forkish, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. W. M. Howard, chaplain; Mrs. Lillian Plumer, sergeant at arms and Mrs. H. C. Espey, historian.

It has been announced that the list for charter members will be held open another 30 days and that all mothers, wives, widows and sisters of World War veterans who served between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, are eligible to membership.

Mrs. Lloyd Henry, chairman of the committee on by-laws and constitution, is expected to report at this meeting.

Landlord to Face Threat Accusation

Sterling Riley, 27, proprietor of a rooming house at 748 Sixth street northwest, will be brought before Police Court this morning to answer a threat charge placed against him by Mrs. Katherine Lewis, a tenant, who claims he tried to evict her and two young sons with formaldehyde fumes following an altercation.

Sergt. E. M. Warfield, of the First precinct emergency squad, entered the rooming house late Saturday and found 3-year-old Alvin Lewish unconscious and his 7-year-old brother, Clyde, and mother, nearly overcome. A formaldehyde candle was burning in the next room.

Riley told police he burned the candle to fumigate a room formerly occupied by a sick tenant.

...w Catholic Club Hears Aim Outlined

The newly-organized Calvert Club, composed of prominent Catholic laymen, held its first meeting last night at the Willard Hotel. Lewis A. Payne, president, in outlining the club's purpose, said:

"We have long felt the need of an organization of prominent Catholic laymen in Washington and the Calvert Club is the answer. We propose to have various meetings throughout the year with at least one outstanding banquet. We will be ready to entertain visiting notables of the Catholic faith, either at a luncheon or a dinner. The club is a strictly non-profit organization and any surplus funds that accrue in the treasury will be devoted to charity."

Virginia Protests Rates on Spinach

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 4.—People who like their spinach should be able to buy it from Virginia as well as Texas, the State corporation commission contends.

H. E. Kethet, commerce counsel for the body, has filed protest with the Interstate Commerce Commission against what he charges are freight rates discriminating against Virginia truckers in comparison with Texas. He asserts rates from this State on spinach are computed at 25 pounds per bushel, and from the Western State at 20 pounds.

Johnson Flays Coughlin, Long For 'Demagogy'

tration has been consulted about this speech, and that his wisest friends outside the Government counseled against his attacking Long and Coughlin.

"If demagogy has reached a point where a man may risk his public standing by attacking it, it is time for somebody to get up on his hind legs and howl," he rasped.

"Nerts" to Critics.

"I am well aware what the papers will say about me—that I am crazy—that once worked in New York myself, that I am a tool of the interests. Nerts to that!"

Then, with broadly caricatured passages in Southern accent in imitation of the Kingfish, Johnson fore into Long's "share the wealth" program. "Share the wealth would do no more than distribute poverty," Johnson declared.

"And added to that comes burring over the air the dripping brogue of the Irish-Canadian priest pounding home points of pure political propaganda by calling on the lives and sayings of all the saints, and the very precepts of the Master, in accents mello with human sympathy, musical, blatant bunk about the very nostrum of religion * * * Father Coughlin's plan to make money out of nothing would make money worth nothing, and that would confiscate the wages of every worker, the savings of every family, the life insurance of every widow * * *

Pastor Called "Bad Fish."

"The founder of Christianity likened the church to a net containing good and bad fish * * * Father Coughlin, by the cheap strategy of appealing to the envy of those who have nothing for those who have something, has become the active political head of an active political party * * * and I think that makes him another bad fish in the net of the holy church."

Johnson asserted there is an "open alliance between the great Louisiana demagogue and the political padre."

He charged Coughlin had been an enemy of the Administration since publication by the Treasury Department a year ago of a list showing that the Radio League of the Little Flower was a large holder of silver.

"When a priest vowed to poverty," Johnson continued, "and preaching to the poor flays the faith of a people to advance a monetary interest—his own or another—you can just about conclude that Judas Iscariot was a poor piker * * *

"We can neither respect nor revere what appears to be a priest in holy orders * * * demanding that we ditch the present for Huey Long, bastardize our American system and destroy the Government of our country."

Tobacco Growers Warned on Disease

University Services Aid Tells of Plant Protection.

Maryland tobacco growers have been warned by the University of Maryland Extension Service to start fighting "wildfire" and "rowny mildew," diseases expected to appear early in their seed beds.

Dr. Robert A. Jehle, plant pathologist of the extension service, said that one of the first steps is to locate the seed bed so that there will be a free circulation of air.

The air will dry the young plants from rains and dews. It is also necessary that the proper amount of seed be planted, usually one ounce to every 200 square yards of bed, he said.

In addition, Dr. Jehle advised a careful spray program, to begin as soon as the plants show through the ground. He recommended a Bordeaux mixture, to be applied once a week until rapid growth starts, after which it should be applied twice a week until the tobacco is ten days or two weeks old.

'Base' Untruths, Farley Replies To Long Charge

ject in New York. Ickes said he had no record of contractors, subcontractors or persons supplying materials on projects directed by other Government agencies.

Long told the committee he could not recall the names of witnesses he would produce in support of his statements, but promised to supply them. Later, Senator McKellar wrote him a letter, demanding that before noon today he furnish "the names of the witnesses whom you propose to call and the substance of the evidence which you propose to elicit from each."

Says Murphy Chosen.

Resuming his tattoo of floor attacks on the Postmaster General, continuous now over a period of weeks, Senator Long yesterday loudly informed the Senate of word from "close to the throne" that Mr. Farley's resignation has been "arranged" and that Frank Murphy, Governor General of the Philippines, would take his place.

This was too much for Senate Democratic Leader Robinson, who in the past has tolerantly allowed Long to harrangue the Administration unmolested, except for infrequent sardonic questioning. Robinson hurriedly left the chamber and phoned the White House.

When he came back he belligerently faced the Louisianan.

"I am informed by the highest authority that there is not one word of truth to the statement; nothing upon which such a declaration could be based," he said.

Taken aback, Long fumbled for a reply.

"The Senator may have been informed recently from the highest authority," he said. "I have had some information from there too, once or twice."

"President Sometimes Mistaken."

His face flushed, Robinson asked if the Louisianan doubted the reliability of his statement.

"I will say this," countered Long, "that the President of the United States is sometimes mistaken."

"The President could not be mistaken about a matter of this sort," came back the leader.

The chamber was plunged into confusion as Senator M. M. Logan, of Kentucky, shouted for the regular order and Vice President Garner pounded loudly with his gavel.

Order finally was restored, but not before Robinson had accused Long of "abusing" Mr. Farley, "employing language which I think it is questionable should be employed."

The Postmaster General in his letter to the committee went to some pains to answer each of the charges brought by Louisiana's so-called "dictator." He said he has never solicited business for any corporation or any contractor; has never interested himself in helping any contractor to secure contracts, either from the Federal Government or private parties.

Murphy Denies Report.

"There is not a word of truth in the insinuation that I participated in any way in having bids of any contractor rejected by the Treasury Department or by any other department," Mr. Farley said.

From New York Governor General Murphy brushed aside Long's predictions that he will succeed Farley as Postmaster General, according to Associated Press.

Murphy said he is satisfied with his present post and is returning to Manila.

4 Probers Report Liquor Smuggling

Estimate 1,000 Gallons Brought Here Daily.

With four investigators from the alcohol tax unit giving the special grand jury evidence they uncovered showing the machinations of a group of 34 alleged rum-ring conspirators, the Government yesterday moved a step nearer to checking the flow of illicit liquor into Washington.

The four men, Karl O. Speiss, Francis J. Sweeney, C. A. Hood and W. P. Lance, are reported as having estimated that the gang was smuggling into Washington approximately 1,000 gallons of illegal corn, rye and alcohol daily. They are said to have discovered that the gang was running liquor into the District from points in nearby Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey.

Following the appearance of the investigators, Henry A. Schweinhaut, assistant United States attorney in charge of the case, plans to present telegraph and bank representatives from New Jersey. They will testify, Mr. Schweinhaut said, about payments made to members of the ring in New Jersey.

Peery Indorses Move to Start And End Night Parties Earlier

Plan Will Tend to Reduce Auto Deaths, Drinking, He Declares.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., March 4.—A movement among Richmond parents to start and end their evening parties at earlier hours today was strongly indorsed by Gov. George C. Peery.

Commending the policy at the University of Richmond of terminating Saturday night dances "before Sunday begins," the Governor said that he believes the younger people of Virginia will support a united move to have dances begin between 7 and 9 and end at a reasonably early hour.

"I believe such a plan will tend to reduce the shockingly large number of automobile fatalities," the Governor said. "I believe that it will mean less drinking, for some people now drink too much in an effort to keep awake at these affairs which begin at about the hour most parties should be breaking up."

The Governor predicted that many hostesses will welcome early starting parties, and that certainly the boys and girls who work will welcome them.

He said that not a few young people who would make most attractive additions to the social life of the State have barred themselves from most functions because they can not, under the present system of late hours, engage in social pursuits and at the same time maintain their efficiency as workers.

Text of Farley's Reply to Long Charges

The letter of Postmaster General Farley to the committee considering Senator Long's investigation resolution follows in full:

March 1, 1935.

Hon. Kenneth McKellar, chairman, Post Offices and Post Roads Committee, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Senator McKellar—In relation to Senate Resolution No. 74 and certain charges contained therein and uttered upon the floor of the United States Senate, I desire to submit the following:

1. The resolution states that "Whereas, it has been reported that James A. Farley, acting as Postmaster General and in various other capacities for the United States Government, has conducted a private business for the selling of materials to persons engaged in doing public construction work for the United States Government, and that in some instances concerns buying materials from the said concerns in which the said James A. Farley is interested have received contracts through as many as three low bidders being disqualified;"

I have conducted no private business since I have occupied the position of Postmaster General of the United States. Prior to March 4, 1933, I resigned as president and director of the General Builders Supply Corporation and since that time I have had no part in the management of that company or participation in its affairs, nor have I received any sums, salaries, commissions or anything else from this source since that time with the exception of a dividend of five hundred and twenty-five dollars ($525.00) out of the total earned dividends on my preferred stock which consists of approximately one-fourteenth (1-14th) of the outstanding preferred stock of the company. No dividends have ever been paid or earned on the common stock, of which I own less than one-eighth (⅛th).

Says "Not Word of Truth."

Mention has been made of a certain holding company which carries my name. That company was organized in 1929 to collect the slow assets of James A. Farley & Co., Inc., a corporation which went out of existence at that time. This holding company does not own stock in any corporation whatsoever, has never engaged directly or indirectly in the sale of builders' supplies, in contracting or in any business whatsoever except in what has been to date a rather fruitless effort to collect old debts.

The stock which I own in these two companies represents all the stock which I own in any corporation whatsoever.

I have not solicited business for any corporation or any contractor. I have never interested myself in helping any contractor to secure any contracts from the United States Government or from any other person or corporation.

There is not a word of truth in the insinuation that I participated in any way in having bids of any contractor rejected by the Treasury Department or by any other department or agency of the Government.

Denies Using Influence.

The resolution also states that "Whereas it is further alleged that the said concerns favoring the firm of the said James A. Farley with business have been able to secure changes in specifications netting them large sums in profits after the award of contracts, and it being alleged that such changes are deliberately made for the purpose of allowing large profits and avoiding competition;"

This I understand refers to certain contracts for the building of the annex to the New York City Postoffice Building. The only part the Postoffice Department played in this matter consisted in advising the Treasury Department, which let the contracts, of the need of postal requirements so far as a building in New York City was concerned. I am sending you herewith the full file of correspondence between the two departments, including letters that were canceled because of the request of the proper Treasury official that the Postoffice Department be more specific in the statements of its requirements.

There was a question concerning the erection of a completed building, the cost of which was in excess of the amount of funds allocated for the project or an incompleted building in which two floors were not to be finished, alternative bids having been called for by the Treasury. The details of this are shown in the accompanying correspondence.

I did not at any time attempt to exercise any influence on the Treasury Department with respect to the letting of this or any other contract. I had no knowledge that there had been any changes in specifications or materials until I read of them in reports of the charges made by the Senator from Louisiana. In any event, I have no connection whatsoever with respect to such changes in relation to any building or any contract.

Says Stamp-Giving Old Custom.

Again the resolution reads: "Whereas it is further publicly known that the said James A. Farley has used the printing office and facilities of the United States Government for the purpose of gratifying personal whims and caprices of personal and political friends, even to the printing of stamps never to be used;"

With respect to this matter, I followed, as Postmaster General, a custom that has existed in this department for many, many years; that is, the presentation as souvenirs of new issues of stamps. I attach herewith a memorandum showing how long and how extensively this practice has been pursued. On January 23, 1905, the then Third Assistent Postmaster General, Edwin C. Madden, wrote an official letter to the Postmaster General, from which I quote the following:

"* * * In this connection, I deem it proper to say that the giving away of specimen stamps, proofs, etc., is a practice of upward of 40 years' standing. * * * No record was kept of the persons to whom these stamps were distributed prior to my coming into office, but since November, 1899, I have caused to be kept a record of every stamp given away, and can furnish, should it be so desired, a complete list of those who have received them during my incumbency, except for the four months between July 1, 1899 (the date of my appointment) and November 1, 1899, when the record of distribution was begun."

Calls Wire Charge Baseless.

Again the resolution reads: "Whereas it has been further charged that the said James A. Farley is implicated in a wire service leading into the gambling houses in the United States from the race tracks, and is using the functions which he supervises for the Government to pursue said businesses for profit to himself and to his friends;"

The above charge is utterly untrue and is as ridiculous and baseless as are the others. The only wire service in the Postoffice Department, except the ordinary commercial telephone and telegraph lines, is a teletype press service such as you will find in many other Government departments, in most newspaper offices, and in many business offices. It is a bulletin of the day's happenings as they occur, embracing the proceedings of Congress, and other news of the day. This teletype machine is connected only with a news service office. It leads to no gambling house and nothing is transmitted by it except that which is written for the news service which operates it, namely, the Washington City News Service. Personally, I have no connection, direct or indirect, with this or any other wire service.

Again the resolution reads: "Whereas it is further alleged that without pay or compensation for the same, the said James A. Farley has commandeered for his personal use, facilities of public-service corporations borrowing money from the United States Government;"

I have never commandeered the facilities of any public-service corporation. I assume that the Senator from Louisiana refers to the fact that I have at various times accepted the invitations of railroad officials to ride in their business cars with them when I was traveling by train. It is well known that as Postmaster General I have a postoffice commission which entitles me to ride in any conveyance operated by any mail contractor. The Government is put to no expense, nor is it saved any expense, by my occasional acceptance of these invitations, and I am not put under the slightest obligation thereby. In no case, however, did I at any time commandeer any such service.

"Political Loan" Denied.

Again the resolution reads: "Whereas it has been charged that the said James A. Farley on the eve of a loan being granted to a railroad in West Virginia, telephoned the leading factor of that concern that it was to his interest to take a certain political position affecting the election of a United States Senator;"

I never telephoned anybody in West Virginia that it would be to the interest of any railroad to take a certain or any political position affecting the election of a United States Senator or anyone else. I did converse with various political leaders, including former Gov. Cornwall of West Virginia, with the idea in mind of promoting party harmony. I did not know that the B. & O. Railroad was endeavoring to secure an RFC loan, and I do not know now if it ever received a loan, but I do know that whether it did or did not receive a loan had nothing to do with any conversation in which I took part. I knew the gentleman only as a former Governor of West Virginia and a Democratic leader in the State.

Declares Fund Donor Jailed.

As to the final omnibus section of the resolution, alleging general misconduct, irregularity, etc., I can only make my denial as general as the accusation itself. With respect to the statements made by the Senator from Louisiana on the floor of the United States Senate in the effort to imply that I solicited contributions from Federal office holders for the Democratic National Committee and that in a particular instance immunity from prosecution was extended in exchange for a political contribution, I declare that the charges are absolutely false. On March 3, 1933, before the beginning of this Administration, Clyde O. Eastus, then a practicing lawyer in Texas, handed me at the Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C., for the Democratic National Committee, a cashier's check for $1,000, which he told me was the contribution of E. P. Knotts, of Fort Worth, Tex., whom I did not know and of whom I had no knowledge. I accepted the check for the committee and immediately wrote to Mr. Knotts acknowledging its receipt. Some time in May, 1933, Mr. K. P. Aldrich, the newly appointed chief inspector of the Postoffice Department, reported to me that charges of the improper use of the mails had been pending for several years in the department against Mr. Knotts and that the hearing had been repeatedly continued. I immediately instructed the solicitor of the department, who has immediate jurisdiction over matters of this kind, to proceed without delay to dispose of the case. A photostatic copy of this order is transmitted herewith. This order was complied with, the hearing was held before the end of the month, and a fraud order was issued against Mr. Knotts. As a result of it, criminal charges were preferred in the Federal courts, and Mr. Knotts pleaded guilty and was sentenced to imprisonment, five years in the penitentiary. He is now serving his term.

According to the Congressional Record, the Senator from Louisiana read from what purported to be a letter issued by the National Democratic Council of the District of Columbia in its effort to raise funds for the Democratic National Committee, which letter is alleged to have borne my name as Democratic chairman on the letterhead and which is also alleged to have been sent to Federal employes. I did not sign the letter, I did not authorize its issuance and to this date I know nothing whatsoever about it or to whom it was sent.

Let me repeat that in the most complete and explicit manner I deny the base insinuation of the Senator from Louisiana that I have at any time used the power and prestige of my office for personal financial gain or private interest.

Very respectfully yours,
JAMES A. FARLEY,
Postmaster General.

Does the Comfort in Your Home Depend on the Weather Man

Are there rooms in your home that are hard to heat properly in Winter—cold, drafty, and uncomfortable? In Summer, do you find the upper floors of your home unbearably hot—hotter than the outdoor air?

These household discomforts can be avoided by having your home insulated with Johns-Mansville ROCK WOOL INSULATION. This Rock Wool insulation—made from molten limestone poured into a jet of live steam—reduces the heating bill in Winter by keeping in the heat, and makes the house cooler in Summer by keeping out Summer's heat. It is blown into your home's walls and crevices by carefully regulated pneumatic pressure machines.

Chicago Opens $66,000 Theft Trial of Insull

Selection of Jury Begun to Hear Charge of Embezzlement.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 4.—Samuel Insull, who used to account to his stockholders for billions, was called to account by the State today for $66,000.

Technicalities were waved aside by Judge Cornelius J. Harrington in criminal court and selection of a jury was begun to try Insull for the alleged embezzlement of $66,000 from the once $300,000,000 Middle West Utilities Co. He did it, the State said, to bolster the depreciating brokerage account of his brother, Martin.

Cost Has Topped Million.

The Insull world did its mammoth Humpty Dumpty act nearly three years ago.

The cost of trying to put Humpty Dumpty together again, of dividing his shell among the nearest creditors, and of prosecuting those charged with responsibility for his fall, has topped $1,000,000, and the end is not yet.

Fees paid or asked by receivers and attorneys alone exceed $1,250,000.

Yet the hunt for assets has yielded little, the hope that Insull and his younger brother could aid in discovering something for the stockholders and creditors has proved empty, and attempts to convict either Insull thus far futile. After the United States had spent a small fortune to bring him back from the Mediterranean, Samuel was acquitted of a gigantic mail fraud charge by a Federal court jury. Martin, whose extradition from Canada, too, was costly to the State Department, had been acquitted of an embezzlement charge in State court.

Trial Cost Put at $100,000.

Unofficial estimates put the cost of Samuel Insull's trial at $100,000, including auditing of company books, bringing in witnesses and paying investigators, prosecutors and jurors. What the Government spent in chasing Insull from Rome to Athens and Istanbul and fighting in Greek courts for custody, then escorting him here, the Government refuses to disclose.

Of the four huge utility investment companies that went down, none has been liquidated.

Middle West Utilities has dwindled from $300,000,000 to about $18,000,000 in assets. Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment Co. once ranked as a $50,000,000 concern. Recent estimates of its worth are lacking. Insull Utility Investments, Inc., boasted a book value of $238,000,000 before the debacle. About $1,500,000 assets have been collected.

Corporation Securities Co. held a $100,000,000 portfolio. When it was opened three years ago the dregs were $15,000 in tax warrants. The court already has allowed $17,576 in fees to the liquidators.

Lady Young, Dr. Kerby Safe; Trod 60 Miles After Air Crash

Planes Speed to Wife of Rhodesia Head; Natives Cheer.

By the United Press.

Livingstone, Rhodesia, March 4.—Lady Young and her flying companion, Dr. J. Kerby, arrived, footsore and almost exhausted, at Sebakwe today, after walking 60 miles from where their airplane crashed last Thursday.

Crowds in the village streets demonstrated their relief at the couple's safety when the news reached Livingstone, and every automobile horn and railway whistle set up a prodigious clamor.

Lady Young is the wife of Maj. Sir Hubert Young, Governor of Northern Rhodesia. Kerby is a government official.

By the Associated Press.

Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, March 4.—A native runner reached here from the bush country today with word that Lady Young, wife of the Governor of Northern Rhodesia, was safe despite an airplane crash in the African jungle.

With Dr. J. Kerby, government physician who accompanied her on a flight last Thursday, she was reported slowly making her way on foot to the camp of a commissioner.

Search parties set out to meet the couple, whose actual location was uncertain. Twenty airplanes and several ground parties had been searching several days for them without success.

The runner brought a note written by Lady Young saying they had crashed in the vicinity of Gowke, a lonely area in Southern Rhodesia. It said they were both unhurt.

Gowke is 250 miles east-southeast of Livingstone and has a white population of six persons.

Paris, March 4 (U.P.).—Women of the American colony think a sign stretched across the facade of a building in the Champs Elysees housing the women's suffrage headquarters is the height of something or other. It reads: "Chinese—Turkish—even American women can vote. Why not French women?"

Probers Open Trial Board's Inquiry Today

Chairman Stott Will Be First Witness Before House Committee.

The House District Crime Committee is to launch its investigation of the functioning of the disciplinary machinery of the District Police Department at executive hearings at 1:30 p. m. today.

Inspector William G. Stott, chairman of the police trial board, is to be the first witness. He was to have been examined yesterday, but the hearings were postponed because of the vote on the bill which would have given each member of the House an additional clerk.

Study of the trial board records has disclosed that several policemen found guilty of offenses for which dismissal is mandatory have been kept on the force by the District Commissioners, despite trial board findings.

Police captains are to be called before the committee after the trial board inquiry. They are to be questioned about the disposition of their men, their duties and the promotion system. They also are to be invited to make criticisms and suggestions.

What is to be done immediately about recalling Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney, has not been decided. Four of the eight members of the committee have declared in favor of recalling him at the "earliest possible moment." Committee members have grown increasingly restive under the prodding of rumors which purport to emanate from Mr. Garnett and others about the courthouse.

Board to Hear Plea Of Liquor Provocation

A hearing on the appeal of Fred J. Neam from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board in revocation of his liquor license for allegedly permitting a sale by a minor will be granted today by the District Commissioners.

The basis of Neam's appeal is that Officer J. D. Loughrin, attached to the liquor board, had persuaded the 16-year-old daughter of Neam to sell liquor to him on Sunday, after a dozen unsuccessful attempts.

F. Joseph Donohue, attorney for Neam, who operates the Chastleton Market, charged to the Commissioners that the officer had "procured" the sale from the minor without Neam's knowledge or consent and out of his presence.

Greek Rebels Are Trapped, Loyalists Say

tinguished their lights and prevented the ships from making harbor. Most of the mutineers at sea were reported, however, to be heading for Crete.

Venizelos' Home Destroyed.

The final official reports made tonight on the airplane raid on Venizelos' home stated the residence was destroyed by a direct hit by an air bomb.

It was reported that the governor general and the former governor general of Crete had been killed resisting the rebellious forces on the island.

Police and soldiers scoured Athens for friends of Venizelos and for sympathizers with the rebel cause. More than a score were arrested.

Among those made prisoner were Christos Ladas, former member of the Venizelos cabinet and chief defense consel for Samuel Insull, sr., when the Chicagoan was fighting against extradition to the United States last year.

Epects Surrender.

The armored car which Venizelos always used when he was in Athens to guard against assassination also was seized by the government.

Gen. George Kondylis, minister of war, personally commanded the loyal forces fighting against the rebels in Saloniki. He reported at 8:20 p. m. that he had the rebels surrounded and that he expected their surrender momentarily.

An unconfirmed report said that the rebel fleet had been dispersed and had taken up various positions around the Aegean Islands.

Communications between Crete and Athens were cut off.

Posters signed by the mayor of Athens were placed on display all over the city inviting the members of the military classes of 1930, 1932 and 1933, already called to the colors, to report immediately for service.

Alleged rebels already under arrest were to go on trial by courts-martial tomorrow.

Robens, whose home is in Nelson County is in a serious condition in a Waynesboro hospital. Miss Bradley was not badly injured and has returned to her home at Spottswood.

Lunsford surrendered to Sheriff G. M. Gilkeson Sunday morning after his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Lunsford, and Miss Lowe, both of whom were in the car with him at the time of the accident had been arrested as material witnesses. The two women have been released on bonds of $250 each.

Limitation Urged On Realty Taxes

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., March 4.—Otton Hollowell, secretary of the Virginia Real Estate Association today advocated a constitutional limitation of the rate of taxation that may be imposed upon realty, asserting such a move would result in the saving of millions of dollars to taxpaying real estate owners.

Hollowell was discussing the proposals of the National Real Estate Association that all States adopt, by constitutional amendment, a limit to the burden that may be imposed upon home and investment property owners.

He said "no secret is made of the fact that a sales tax is expected to be enacted to provide funds for the Commonwealth to assume the cost of public instruction, thereby relieving the localities of the cost of its major item in local governmental expense."

Frederick Acts On Postmaster

Democratic Body Meets Today to Select One of Three Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., March 4.—Three names from which a postmaster for Frederick will be chosen were received here today from the Postoffice Department, Washington. They are, in order of rating, Guy K. Motter, justice of the peace; Hammond Clary, bank official, and W. Jarboe Grove, civil engineer.

Upon receipt of the names, William J. Grove, chairman, called a meeting of the State Democratic committee for tomorrow to choose one of the three eligibles. His name will be forwarded to Representative David J. Lewis, who will follow the indorsement of the committee in a recommendation to the President.

The committee's divided political fractional make-up gave rise today to prospects of a hard fight.

Grove and two other members are allied with Dr. Charles H. Conley, the remaining including former Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner 3d, belong to the Ritchie organization. Motter has been an ardent Ritchie worker. Grove, nephew of the chairman, William J. Grove, lined up with the Conley supporters, and Clary has leaned toward the Ritchie camp, it is understood. The term is for four years and carries a salary of $3,400.

Board Attacks Suit to Force Bus Firm Sale

Court Lacks Jurisdiction in Transit Line Deal, Commission Holds.

The District Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to order the Public Utilities Commission to sanction the purchase of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., the Commission contended in an answer filed in court yesterday.

The assertion was made in response to a suit filed by the Capital Transit Co., in which the company sought to have the District Supreme Court compel the Commission to ratify the sale for a price of $843,000.

The Commission rejected the proposed purchase because, it held, the fair market value of the bus company should be gauged by its "over the counter" price rather than by its especial value to the street car company through elimination of a competitor and a resultant savings in consolidation of transportation lines.

In asking the court to dismiss the suit, the Commission alleged that the joint resolution of Congress which authorized the purchase vested the Commission with discretionary powers either to approve or reject the plan. This function, having been delegated to the Commission, could not be assumed by the courts, the Commission said.

Girl's 'Upside Down' Stomach Is Righted by Surgeon's Skill

She apparently has a good chance, but it may be several days before there is certainty.

Virtually all Alyce's digestive organs were up in her chest, where her left lung should be. The lung, too, was there, collapsed under the pressure.

Stomach, intestines, large and small; spleen and appendix were in the chest.

It was the appendix that forced a change in plans of the operation after her chest was opened. Dr. Philemon E. Truesdale, chief surgeon in the operation, had expected to let the organs move slowly and gently down from the chest to the almost empty abdomen.

They were in the wrong place at birth. There might not be room enough for them in the abdomen, but if the change could be made, slowly the abdomen would adjust itself.

The appendix, however, was up near her heart level instead of down near her right hip bone. To save her life the whole change had to be made in a single operation.

Dr. Truesdale had to free adhesions, tissues which fastened the misplaced organs to chest wall and even to her heart covering.

As each difficult step was made without a slip, the murmurs of admiration ran through the operating room. The famous upside-down stomach itself was one of the first organs to get started down. It was tight up under Alyce's left shoulder.

One of the last and most difficult feats was to sew up the diaphragm, in which Dr. Truesdale had made an opening 5 inches long and 3 across in order to let the digestive organs pass down from the chest cavity.

Many Doctors Watch.

The operating room was filled with white-robed visiting physicians, come to watch an unusual operation.

The operation, on superficial appearances, accomplished everything desired. Alyce's life, however, depends to a large extent on whether the abdomen that never had these digestive organs can accommodate itself to them now on such short notice.

Nothing developed during the operation to indicate there would be such a trouble. But the child has been weak for more than two months because she was unable either to drink enough water or take enough food. Hence Dr. Truesdale insists some time must pass before the result can be predicted safely.

Although the operation cost Alyce four ribs, the medical observers said there would be little or no "cosmetic" effects to mar her shapely development.

Alyce's mother, during the hours of waiting for news from the operating room, told of how the child cried last night for a drink of water.

Time and again in recent days the smiling Alyce has begged for just a little drink. Sometimes in extreme hunger she cried for food.

Usually she could take neither because of the strangulation they set up in her digestive organs.

The operation was performed in the Earle P. Charlton pavilion of the Truesdale Hospital. Assisting Dr. Truesdale were Drs. C. H. Hawes, W. G. Atwood and Albert Miller, anesthetist.

Traffic Inquiry Held in Virginia

E. A. Walter, Jr., Accused at License Hearing in Culpeper.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., March 4.—In answer to a number of petitions, signed by a large number of citizens of Culpeper and Rappahannock counties, an inquiry was conducted here today before Assistant Attorney General J. Warren Topping, attached to the motor vehicle department, in regard to revoking the driving license of E. A. Walter, jr., of Culpeper.

Walter's car struck and killed Dr. Fontaine Maury Hite and seriously injured Mrs. B. R. Bell, as they stood in front of the Bell residence near here the night of last September 26. It was testified at the inquiry that Walter had been involved in other accidents and had been found guilty of reckless driving in a magistrate's court.

The testimony was vigorously fought by Walter's counsel, Virginius Shackelford, of Orange, in view of the fact that Walter's trial on the charge of involuntary manslaughter is still pending, having been postponed several times.

Social Security Changes.

By asking exemption of farmers, domestics and casual laborers from the unemployment insurance provisions of the social security bill, the Ways and Means Committee goes far toward reassuring a nation that has given enthusiastic approval to the basic principles of the program, but which has felt some apprehension as to the actual operating formulas.

There is nothing discriminatory in the committee's action. The working conditions of these groups would so complicate the collection of taxes as to make the Treasury Department's task virtually impossible. In this connection, it is significant that even England, which has had unemployment insurance measures in operation for many years, has not yet ventured to include agricultural and domestic workers in its benefits.

A further lesson may be learned from British experience. Only recently 100,000 persons participated in country-wide demonstrations against the newly imposed dole restrictions. Threats of a one-day strike have been freely made in protest against the family means test, a recent innovation which requires lowered payments to the unemployed heads of families which prove to include dependents with earnings. The moral of this object lesson is evident. Any social security plan should err on the side of conservatism at the outset, for once adopted sharp retrenchment is politically impossible.

The commendable action of the committee in exempting farmers and domestics from provisions of the bill is offset, however, by two other amendments adopted at the same session. The first, and most serious, is the elimination of a provision which guaranteed that the State administrative boards would be non-partisan. This means that the State operating personnel may not be selected on a merit basis, but rather may swell the political plum-basket to the consequent serious detriment of the entire undertaking.

The second amendment provokes much the same criticism. It would make the Social Insurance Board an independent agency, instead of an adjunct to the Department of Labor as originally provided in the bill. The board should logically be under departmental control, unless it can be shown that separation would mean less rather than more political manipulation.

A Good Starting Point.

Before the special committee named by President Roosevelt completes its effort to work out a final plan for coordination of recreational facilities in the District it is pertinent to recall some of the advice contained in the Weir report, sponsored by the National Recreation Association. "The prime purpose of the day-to-day program of recreation activities," according to this report, "is to give residents of the District * * * full opportunity for adequate recreational life and use of leisure."

One other aspect of the report, closely related to the foregoing, deserves careful attention:

> In general, it would be most in accord with the experience of the National Recreation Association for that form of administration to prevail which would give the people of the District of Columbia the feeling that they themselves were having the largest degree of participation in the planning and carrying out of the recreation system. The association does know that it is important that the people of any city should feel that their recreation system belongs to them in the fullest possible sense.

With this advice before it, the committee may well confine its consideration to those plans which would make the proposed recreation system a part of the local government. To assign control over this local function to an arm of the Federal Government would not merely run contrary to the judgment of experts and the lessons of experience. It would retard the whole movement to center responsibility for local government in a single body, and thus perpetuate the divided authority which now results in neglect, delay and inefficiency.

From Athens And Rome.

From Athens and Rome, the one engaged in attempting to suppress a serious rebellion, the other embarking on an equally serious foreign expedition, come cables with news that will confirm the belief of those who feel that European civilization is doomed.

Inquiry in the Greek capital reveals that foreign civilians are as yet in no danger. In consequence the principal concern of the legations seems to center on the outcome of the conflict between the loyal air forces and the warships commandeered by the rebels. Will bombs or shells win? If the former, do ships operated by mutinous crews represent a fair trial of naval strength? If the latter, do weather conditions play a determining part in aviation strategy and does the rapid conversion of commercial planes into bombers prove feasible in an emergency?

While the military experts survey the Grecian ferment with such ghoulish abstraction, an editorial in Premier Mussolini's newspaper, the Popolo d'Italia of Milan, bemoans the declining birth rate in Italy. The paper describes the theoretical loss in population since 1922 as four times larger than that suffered by Italy during the World War. "The country is defrauded of more than a million males, that is, future soldiers," the article concludes, with an air of finality.

The dispatches are from Athens and Rome—cities which once possessed civilizations which were not measured in terms of bombs and shells and cannon fodder.

The Refunding Offer.

In 1929, just prior to the speculative collapse, Government bonds were selling to yield almost 3¾ per cent. Now the Treasury is planning to offer long-term bonds, bearing only 2⅞ per cent interest, in exchange for approximately $1,850,000,000 of called Fourth Libertys, issued at 4¼ per cent. The new rate is officially stated to be the lowest on standard bond issues during the past 50 years. There is also announced a refunding issue of five-year Treasury notes carrying the lowest rate ever offered on such securities.

The terms of this conversion offer testify to the progress that has been made by the Government in its efforts to drive down interest rates. But it also testifies to the lack of alternative openings for the employment of investment funds. Systematic efforts to cut the cost of Government borrowing, and to convert public obligations into long-term investment issues, are hopeful developments insofar as they reflect a determination on the part of the Administration to rely upon orthodox methods to finance its spending program. Indeed, the anti-inflationary safeguards created by the existence of a class of investors vitally concerned to maintain the public credit are more reassuring than the assurances of Administration spokesmen on the subject.

It would be naive, however, to overrate the significance of the coming refunding operations, even if they should satisfy the most optimistic expectations. Low interest rates and ample borrowing facilities placed at the disposal of the Government may aid recovery if the policies followed are wise. But a mere beating down of the rate of interest will not bring about a revival of commercial investment demand in the absence of profitable opportunities for the utilization of funds.

A declining trend in business, combined with an excessive volume of unused funds, has enabled the Government virtually to dictate the terms of which it will borrow. In the absence of commercial outlets for these funds, banks with enormous excess reserves will be inclined to accept any offer from the Government, however unfavorable. It does not follow that they will be able to expand commercial loans merely because of the low rates obtainable on Government issues.

Favorable conversion operations mean little, therefore, unless they are accompanied by efforts to revive the private capital market and provide a basis for investment confidence. In Germany, where private financing is stagnant, favorable governmental conversion operations are being carried on. In England, the cheap money policies which have facilitated refunding have been regarded as responsible in part for recent commodity speculations encouraged by an abundance of idle funds.

In short, low and declining interest yields on Government issues can not be regarded as an indication of the credit status of a borrowing Government, or as evidence of general business improvement. Not only must lenders be spurred to find investment outlets for funds, but borrowers must be encouraged to utilize those funds by elimination of uncertainties that make them unwilling to enter into long-time investment undertakings.

Training For Civil Service.

While Secretary of Commerce Roper and Dr. White of the United States Civil Service Commission are discussing plans for attracting competent young men and women into the Government service, Secretary Morgenthau is trying to persuade Congress to restore the positions and pay the salaries due to 1,300 Treasury employes deprived of their jobs by a patronage rider attached to an appropriation bill.

So long as Congress makes use of its legislative power to destroy the civil service status of Government employes who have passed required tests and demonstrated their efficiency, and so long as it continues to exempt from civil service regulations thousands of positions created under laws of a permanent as well as an emergency character, it is unwise and unkind to urge ambitious and able young people to equip themselves for public service.

Secretary Roper rightly says that there is a dearth of men and women trained for Government positions. Both he and Dr. White will be upheld in their view that opportunities for brilliant careers are afforded by the public service. Indeed, the new administrative responsibilities devolving upon Government employes demand an unusually high degree of intelligence and devotion to duty, if the work is to be efficiently done. But so long as our Congressmen cling to patronage prerogatives, the most able public servant has no certain protection against summary dismissal. Political machinations may dislodge him from office in order to make way for mere place hunters.

Under present conditions, the men and women who seek careers may find an opportunity to prepare for them in some of the governmental bureaus that need trained assistants. They can not, however, harbor hopes that their industry will surely be rewarded by security of tenure and eventual promotion to responsible positions. These are too often reserved as rewards for partisan political activities.

Overruling The Comptroller.

Secretary Swanson's suggestion that he need not be bound by the rulings of the Comptroller General, but will be guided by the advice of the Attorney General and the Court of Claims, may prove a serious threat to a system of independent accounting of which the Nation is properly proud.

The legal rights of the matter are not the question of chief importance so far as the public is concerned. Whatever the law may be, the practical results of shifting responsibility from the Comptroller's office to that of the Attorney General could be most serious. Every other spending agency of government would then be encouraged to ignore the Comptroller's rulings, relying upon the advisory opinion of the Attorney General's office—itself one of the largest spending agencies in the executive branch of government. In that case, there would be, as the Comptroller says, no independent audit of the uses of the large appropriations over which the Attorney General has administrative control.

The most disturbing aspect of the controversy, however, is occasioned by the knowledge that the Comptroller General is an official deeply concerned to protect his office against any sort of political influence that would encourage loose practices. Every administrative officer makes mistakes, of course, but Mr. McCarl has unquestionably demonstrated a properly meticulous regard for following the terms of the law and seeing that appropriations are used only for purposes intended by Congress.

His power of effective control has already been seriously impaired by the loose character of the legislation passed during the emergency. But a bad situation would be made much worse if the example set by the Secretary of Navy should be followed by other executive departments, with the practical result of turning control of the accounting system over to the office of the Attorney General.

Of The Old School.

East of the Rocky Mountains, the name of Fremont Older was relatively unknown, except among newspapermen and those who dwell with them.

But on the Pacific Coast Older was known for 40 years as one of the great liberal forces of the West, and his name will long remain a household word. He was a crusading editor of the old school, who held ideals and fought for them. He made the old San Francisco Bulletin famous by his courageous and often successful wars for social reforms and against political corruption. It was significant that when he left that newspaper to take another post, the Bulletin dwindled and finally passed into the hands of its chief competitor.

Older himself continued a power in public affairs the day of his death at an age—78—when most men have ceased to concern themselves greatly with the troubles of the race. His passing is a loss to American journalism as well as to the people of California.

A King Gives Up.

To the jazz music of an American phonograph record, played on his estate in Surrey, England, King Prajodhipok of Siam formally abdicated his throne last week. Paradoxically enough, this tiny ruler of 11,500,000 people has renounced his rights not because of limited power but because he feels he had too much of it. All his proposals to liberalize the administration of his country have met with rejection by the Siamese government.

Although, until three years ago, Prajadhipok was one of the world's last absolute monarchs, he has long been a believer in democracy. Somewhat paradoxically, again, his education at Eton was partly responsible for this, and later his visits to America seem to have confirmed his opposition to dictatorships. Because he could not incorporate his ideals into a constitution for Siam, he decided to give up his rulership.

Immediately after his abdication came an announcement that henceforth he and his wife wish to be known simply as Prince and Princess Sukhodya. He also wishes to dispense with the initials SAEFT, LTGU, and HBS which, when translated into his various titles, mean "Supreme Arbiter of the Ebb and Flow of Tides," "Lord of the Thousand Golden Umbrellas," and "Half Brother of the Sun." He considers such a plethora of alphabetical designations exceedingly undemocratic.

On his opinion as to whether our own alphabetical agencies are of the essence of democracy, the dispatches are discreetly silent.

The Example of Paragould.

From the New Orleans Times Picayune.

Members of the American Legion post at Paragould, Ark., have done a fine thing in protesting against a proposal in the Arkansas Legislature which would have the effect of barring Communists from the ballot in their State. They maintain that while communistic agitation is to be deplored, denying the Communist Party a place on the ballot would be an "un-American way of dealing with it."

One of the surest ways of breeding Communists is to make martyrs of them, and it would be difficult to think of a procedure more likely to give them the feeling of persecution than denial of the use of the ballot. Those who ponder the problem through the light of our long-standing traditions of freedom will agree with the legionnaires of Paragould.

Why Six Per Cent?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter from George Mason, a veteran, in The Post of March 2, calls attention to the injustice of the Government in charging 6 per cent interest on soldier insurance.

In connection with insurance, may I call attention to another form of oppression—namely, the charging by all insurance companies of 6 per cent on loans granted on policies.

Why should insurance companies exploit their own clients whose investment alone makes such companies possible? As is well known the exigencies of the depression have caused the surrender of thousands of policies and the burdening of thousands more with loans. What right has any institution to get a 6 per cent rate of interest at a time like this?

It strikes me—a layman who has been squeezed—that the insurance companies are in for an investigation. Inquiry of the Senate Banking Committee discloses the fact that no investigation of the insurance companies is authorized. Unless the companies can give some reasonable explanation of their attitude, they should be investigated at once.

ONE WHO HAS SUFFERED.

Washington, March 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was interested in George Mason's letter in The Post of March 2 because, like him, I have often wondered why it is necessary for the Government to charge 6 per cent for loans on converted insurance policies when it can borrow for so much less. As a holder of two policies of converted war-risk insurance and also several policies in old-line companies, I know that there is no difference in the interest rate charge by the Government and by private companies.

It is my understanding that the Government keeps this converted insurance separate from other veterans' business and that it is conducted on a strictly business-like, actuarial basis. This is as it should be, since premium rates are comparable to those charged by private concerns. If it is a question of charging 6 per cent and keeping these policies on a sound business basis or lowering in the interest rate and mixing them up in politics and the veterans' grab-bag in general, I am in favor of the former. Perhaps some officials of the Veterans' Bureau will be kind enough to explain. ARTHUR W. DEW.

Washington, March 3.

Results of "Tinkering."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Southern rice growers, faced with a heavy loss on 225,000,000 pounds of rice, hope that this loss may be shifted to domestic consumers by the passage of H. R. 5221, railroaded through the House on February 26 after a debate limited to one hour. The accumulation of this rice surplus proves that the unfavorable experience of foreign countries with price-fixing and other artificial farm-aid devices is caused by economic factors which are no respecters of governments. Under a marketing agreement (including licenses) between the AAA and rice producers, distributors and processors in 1933 and 1934, the price of rice was fixed at 1 cent a pound above the world market level. As in the case of cotton pegged above world levels, it has not sold readily and stocks now total 225,000,000 pounds.

The purpose of this bill is to amend the agricultural adjustment act to permit the imposition of a processing tax of 1 cent a pound on rice, effective immediately. The Secretary of Agriculture would then issue tax-payment warrants to growers, millers and other signers of the marketing agreement. These warrants could be used to pay the processing tax or would be redeemable in cash by the Secretary at their face value of 1 cent a pound. The surplus rice would then be sold at the world price a cent below the domestic level and the difference or loss would thus be paid by the consumer. It is not unlikely that it would cost the consumer even more, for retailers would probably advance the price of rice 1½ instead of 1 cent.

Another example of economic planning repercussions was Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's plea to tobacco growers for increased production at Raleigh, N. C., this week. He advised that the tobacco price of 27 cents a pound for 1934 should be reduced to about 21 cents to avoid stimulating foreign production. Opposing relaxed production control, he advocated increased plantings of about 28 per cent to bring down the price. The growers asked the Government to reduce by 40 per cent its taxes on manufactured tobacco products to increase domestic consumption.

Despite increasing evidence of disastrous results from the AAA program, the Secretary of Agriculture is now asking for greater power over farmers and handlers of farm products through the proposed amendments to the agricultural adjustment act. It is unfortunate that our farmers do not realize what has been the usual outcome of economic tinkering.

PONTIFEX.

Washington, March 2.

Demagogues' Ammunition.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There was a familiar ring to some of the replies of Mr. Grace to questions asked him by the Senate Munitions Committee. They called to mind: "Let them eat cake." Such attitudes and remarks, at any time, but especially in these times, give the "rabble-rousers" their cue—more, their ammunition. Of course we know that during the World War manufacturers of munitions were not the only persons to reap a harvest. There were manufacturers of other products; many farmers, many workmen, who struck for big wages; there were hoarders.

However, when a man who made several millions during the war suggests that perhaps it might be "right" to pay the soldier more—"$5 a day, or even more"—we wonder if he puts the soldier in his class and proposes to even the pay between fine strong young men, who risked life, health and limbs, with the smug man of large means at home. No, the men in the trenches were not fighting for money.

G. M. U.

Washington, March 2.

Inflation Prospects.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why do the citizens and especially the wage earners of the densely populated States allow themselves to be led to the slaughter of inflation when, by uniting their votes in the House of Representatives, they could make a large enough block of votes to compel attention to their wishes in that matter?

Inflation, whether it comes by direct action of the inflationists or by the indirect action of the well-meaning theorists, will reduce the standard of living of the wage earners and salaried people to an Oriental standard, and at the same time force all educational and charitable institutional establishments either to close or greatly reduce their power of helping others.

Inflation might temporarily help a few of the Western States that raise raw materials and some of the big fortunes might survive, but everyone else would be ruined and the American standard of living would be gone for years. In union there is strength. UNION.

Washington, March 2.

Undergraduate Views.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are we paying much too much attention to the alleged views of half-baked undergraduates? Most of these have only a little learning and no knowledge; the rest have practically none of either. So, why worry?

A major general (himself a West Point man) once remarked apropos of the objection that an aspirant who came before him was not a West Point man: "My idea is that West Point is a very good school for second lieutenants; but I thought we were discussing qualifications for the general staff."

JOHNNY ELL.

Washington, March 2.

Good-Boy Privilege.

Probably most of the boys and young men in the preparatory schools and colleges have been pretty well prepared for the warning Williams' new president, Dr. Tyler Dennett, gave the Taft School seniors. Dr. Dennett told them that young men going out from colleges today will find less in the way of wealth and special privilege than either their fathers or grandfathers.

"You, much more than your fathers and grandfathers," Dr. Dennett told the Taft boys, "will have to stand on your own feet. We shall return to the spirit of the frontier, when a man was judged entirely on how straight he could shoot and how fast he could chop wood." Boys that have the right stuff in them will welcome this challenge to make good in their own right.

The colleges report that a change is already occurring. They see a new interest in study, not a passion for learning itself, but a sense of responsibility on the part of the boys to fit themselves for the stern work that lies ahead. They report a new sense of values, with a declining emphasis on academic accessories and a greater seriousness for work preparatory to making a successful living.

This is a long-wished-for trend. It seems to mark the end of an old cycle or the beginning of a new one in which college life will be simpler, more restrained and better adapted to conditions in which youth starts on a more nearly even footing and relies on itself to make good.

The Pot Impressionist

"Preeminence In Grief."

Post Office, Tuesday.

KIDNAPING has not found a place in literature so large as that given to many lesser offenses—Robert Louis Stevenson to the contrary notwithstanding. But, now that the Hauptmann case is thoroughly embarked upon the currents of appeal, Mrs. Louis Kidder Sparrow reminds us how in the Fifth Century before Christ Euripides immortalized what amounted to a kidnaping.

His vehicle was—you will have guessed—the tragedy of "Hecuba."

The felony does not happen in the way that George More described as "right bang before the eyes of the reader." It has in fact occurred before the action of the play begins. But it is recounted in that moving, that almost forensic, eloquence which Euripides was the first dramatist to master.

Troy has fallen. Priam, its king, is dead. To his captive widow, who gives the tragedy its title—Hecuba is, in fact, a slave among the Greek conquerors—there appears the ghost of her youngest son, Polydore. He, the brother of Hector, Paris and Aeneas, tells his mother of the crime committed by Polymestor, Priam's Thracian friend.

Priam had secretly sent little Polydore to the care of Polymestor "when danger threatened" the Trojan capital. The Thracian if he did not hold the boy for ransom, at least murdered him for Priam's money. Says the ghost to Hecuba:

> "With me abundant gold
> My father sent, that his surviving children
> Might lack no sustenance if Ilion's walls
> Should by the foe be levelled with the ground . . .
> Me, his unhappy guest, my fathers friend
> Slew for the sake of gold and, having slain,
> Plunged me into the sea, that he might keep > Those treasures in his house."

Nor does the play do much to support those modern psychologists who think that maternal affection is an evolutionary quality which has largely developed in recorded time. The grief of "the wretched Hecuba" is uncommonly like that of the average Twentieth Century mother deprived of her children.

Polyxena, Hecuba's daughter, is made a propitiatory sacrifice at the tomb of Achilles. The waters surrender the corpse of Polydore. And the mother cries:

> "Not one
> Exists whose sorrow equals mine, unless
> You of Calamity herself would speak!"

But the Trojan women were in one sense of rougher stuff than their present-day sisters. That sense was the sense for retaliation. Hecuba, accusing Polymestor, cries:

> "Give me vengeance
> On yonder guilty wretch, and I am willing
> To linger the remnant of my life
> In servitude!"

She recruits a band of her fellow women captives. They lure Priam's false friend and his two sons into a tent and there kill the young fellows and tear out child-murderer Polymestor's eyes.

It is rather in reading of the trial of this case that 1935 and Flemington, N. J., return to mind. Agamemnon comes royally on the scene, pretends horror:

> "Who hath destroyed thee? Who bereaved of sight
> Was dreadful sure 'gainst thee and 'gainst thy sons."

Whereupon King Agamemnon assumes the roles of both judge and jury. Hecuba's revenge is forgiven.

The blinded Polymestor admits he killed Polydore, but pleads that he did it from "a just and prudent motive." In effect, he says: "I was really a friend of the Greeks and yourself, Agamemnon; because this boy was a Trojan, he was your enemy—that was my reason."

Whereupon Hecuba:

> "If the truth
> Thou wilt confess, gold and thy thirst for gain
> Were my son's murderers . . . Thou of thy gold
> Hast lost th' enjoyment, thou thy sons hast lost,
> And art thyself thus wretched."

That is enough for Agamemnon. He turns on Polymestor:

> "To me thou seemest not to have slain
> Thy guest through an attachment to my cause,
> Nor yet to that of Greece, but that his gold
> Thou might'st retain: though in this wretched state
> Thou speak to serve thy interests."

It has been said that Hauptmann's possession of the Lindbergh ransom money found in his garage went farther than anything else, with the jury at Flemington, to convict him.

It is certain that Polymestor's having retained Priam's gold was the evidence that convicted the Thracian of murdering Priam's son.

New York Is Abashed By 'Numbers' Racket

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

WASHINGTONIANS ought to be interested in this week's amazing revelations that the "take" in the New York "numbers game" may reach the stupendous total of $10,000,000 a week. They ought to be interested because the numbers racket has just as firm a grip on their own fair city as it has on the metropolis. The technique of the racket is exactly the same in both cities. Of course, it is not confined to New York and Washington, but operates in urban centers all over the United States wherever there is sufficient police tolerance to permit it, which is almost everywhere. No one has ever estimated the national figures for this easy money, but it must be tremendous.

Participants in the game pay for the privilege of guessing a specified number to be revealed in the daily newspapers. In the past, when the game first began, the New York Clearing House daily totals were used. Next the "bankers" took up the United States Treasury balances. Then certain digits in both totals were combined to provide the day's winning figure.

Now, however, the winning number is derived from the totals of the pari-mutuel receipts at a given race track. Hialeah is the track used at present, but there may be a switch overnight. There is no possible way of establishing the number in advance and the system has the advantage of dealing in figures with which most of the players are familiar.

THE totals consist of the pay-off on three, five and seven races, which includes the amount paid for the winners on first, place and show, the second horses for place and show, and the third horses for show. For example, the totals may be $95.20 for three races, $137.50 for five races and $182.90 for seven races. The winning number will consist of the digits immediately to the left of the decimal point in all three figures. In the case cited it would be 572. The "bankers" usually safeguard themselves from disputes over typographical errors by specifying a particular newspaper as "official," but this, also they may switch at will.

A winning player may get odds as high as 600 to 1, which, of course, is the lure. The odds against the players as a whole, millions of them every day, are simply astronomical. Anybody can play for a few pennies up to what have you? The collector takes 20 per cent of the day's receipts, the "controller" lifts another 10 per cent, and the remaining 70 per cent goes to the "banker," who gives the boss operator his split, pays the prizes and provides bail and legal services through the "brass men" for employes picked up by the police.

In New York the racket first began to flourish in Harlem, which is now the largest colored center in the world. It is still going strong there, but has spread to the white population of every borough. The same situation holds good for the District of Columbia, and Washingtonians will find that collectors for the numbers game do not hesitate to invade the Government Buildings on their daily rounds.

• • • •

THE spotlight of a damaging publicity was first switched on the game by Samuel Seabury, who in his investigation of the magistrates courts, turned up Henry Miro, a Harlem millionaire, and mussed him up quite a bit. It was apparent at that time that the racket could not operate without police and judicial protection, but nothing much was done about it. Now another inquiry, conducted by Irving Benn Cooper, one of Mr. Seabury's assistants, for Paul Blanchard, Commissioner of Accounts, is in full swing.

Cooper's investigation is being pursued into the bail bond racket and the numbers game is only a by-product of his inquiries. But it has already flared into a major scandal with the revelation that "Dutch" Schultz, or Arthur Feigenhamer, a notorious gangster, had horned in on the racket and was quietly operating it, as commander-in-chief, all the time the police were supposed to be pursuing him as a fugitive from justice. Now the police are distinctly fussed up and running around in circles explaining just how active they have been in suppressing the lottery.

Naturally, there will be a flurry and some official heads may roll into the basket. But the numbers game is pretty well entrenched. A lot can be done with $10,000,000 a week. In fact, even a small part of it can relieve a considerable amount of distress in political circles.

• • • •

THIRTY miles from Harlem, where the benefits of civilization are represented by the numbers game, lies New York's last frontier, where they still live in log cabins and money hasn't yet been heard of. The city's thirst for more water to drink reveals that life in the Ramapo Mountains moves as slowly as it did before the Revolutionary War. These dells in the hills are sleeping pockets of the past.

The rising waters of a new reservoir have engulfed the old Conklin homesite. Pappy Conklin and the boys and their wives, the cow and the heifer have made the forlorn trek down to Ladentown to live in an abandoned schoolhouse and try to figure out what existence means within sound of the unfamiliar automobile horn.

There are two strains up in the Ramapos. One is the old American strain represented by the Conklins. The other is a strange mixture of an Albino type compounded long ago of runaway slaves and deserting Hessian soldiers. The chief social distinction between them is that families of the Conklin type don't let the chickens and pigs into the house at night.

• • • •

THESE backwoodsmen still live in log huts much like that in which Lincoln was born. No money is used among them. They keep up a few primitive handcrafts, such as basketry and wooden ladle-making, but their entire commerce with the world is by barter. Religion and law are both largely forgotten, but all the men are skilful hunters. The women are shy creatures and are seldom seen outside the cabins.

For generations the land descended to the people without any formal registry. And now they are being flooded out, without any formal registry, either. The group of pure American ancestry, forced from their long-held homes, are troubled by a deep sense of injustice and bewilderment. Some of them, half dazed, have even made their way to New York City, where they are helpless. The other group, known contemptuously as Jackson-whites, have degenerated to the point where they are not much troubled by anything.

POETRY and panic are not so far apart as you might think. Poetry is sometimes full of panic of the kind contributed by the Great God Pan and now the panic of 1929 has been put into poetry by Archibald MacLeish 1933 Pulitzer Prize winner with "Conquisitador." In fact, Mr. MacLeish's new poem is called "Panic." It is in dramatic form and is to be given a public performance and another subscription performance in the second week of March.

Some time ago he figured out that his annual income from poetry figured out to about $50 annually. Since then he has been a contributing editor of Fortune. His present poetic attempt is partly an effort to get a wider audience, and he has pounded ou a new verse form to do it with. For example, his chorus of bewildered bankers, to the accompaniment of a delerious stock ticker, sings:

"Who knows what's behind it?
Who can tell us?
Ask the economists! Ask the professors!
The best of them!
Ask the man in the plowed lot—the farmer:
The owners of famous wells: the successful merchants:
Men accustomed to great risks at sea:
Silver miners: Iowa pig feeders: railroaders—
Builders of line and the sons of builders of line."

Unfortunately, none of them is able to give an answer and in the end the banker hero, or villain, as the case may be, kills himself to the frenzied reactions of the crowd.

It may be that the spirit of Ivar Kreuger dominates the action of "Panic." Mr. MacLeish has done an immense amount of research on the Swedish financier, much of which has appeared in the pages of Fortune.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Crushed!

NOWHERE is the paradox of Mr. Roosevelt's Administration more pronounced than his CCC and the way he has done the Young Thinkers. In the CCC he has gone far toward rehabilitating that portion of the Nation's youth, which was without moorings, which was wandering around aimlessly and getting into trouble.

BARGERON.

But the Young Thinkers—he has crushed them, left them without any faith in mankind. A highly imaginative group, he has struck them over at the most impressionable periods of their lives.

If there is any doubt of this, one has only to read the articles in the newspapers being written by Mr. Gardner Jackson, who was a victim of the recent purge in the AAA.

• • • •

Gardner, himself, hired out to the New Deal as a Young Thinker. The plaintive note in his confessions now being published should alarm the parents of every imaginative youngster in the land. It is a story—the confessions are—of thwarted ambitions, of one disappointment after another, of bitter experiences which in the end leave these young men who signed up to think for the New Deal with salt in their mouths. It is the tragedy of youth.

Gardner tells graphically how the Young Thinkers threw their whole souls into their work, how they labored until late hours in the night, how an 18-hour grind was nothing to them. All they asked, all they wanted, was this opportunity of making the world over. Patriotism was their motive, the Utopia their goal.

He relates how the ax fell, how Jerome Frank was unceremoniously kicked out, Jerome, a leader of the Young Thinkers. Gardner writes not from a post in front but from the ranks of the Young Thinkers, those who were back where they could see what was going on.

He literally brings tears to the eyes when he tells of receiving a letter from a Young Thinker off in France who writes he has heard vaguely of the purge, but he can not bring himself to believe it. Where was Tugwell, this writer asks pathetically.

• • • •

It has seemed to me from the beginning that Mr. Roosevelt's handling of these Young Thinkers was without any knowledge of impressionable, imaginative young minds. I think, too, we might well afford to hold up the funds which are being sought for the country's babies until we are convinced the Administration better understands the youth problem than it showed in its treatment of the Young Thinkers.

It was commendable when Mr. Roosevelt gave them jobs. He seemed so magnanimous at the time. Nowhere was there any complaint. If he was going to give PWA jobs to the young unemployed artists there was no reason in the world why he should not have given employment to the Young Thinkers. Our misfortune was that for the last ten years the Nation's youth had been encouraged to go into the Youth Thinking profession when all statistics showed that like the medical and legal professions, it was badly overcrowded.

But we were faced with a condition and not a theory. Manifestly the Young Thinkers had to eat.

• • • •

Where Mr. Roosevelt erred, though—if he was not downright cruel—was in encouraging the Young Thinkers to think their thinking was to be put into effect. Employ them, of course, but although we are the wealthiest nation in the world and can carry a lot of extravagances, we could not possibly survive their thinking being carried out.

They are a cultural phase of our country which we ought to support as European countries are so preserving of their art. There is no reason why every large city in this country should not have a gallery of Young Thinkers to which the tourists can come and gape and in which the young swain and his inamorita may wander and giggle.

But we've got to hold the Young Thinkers to this. They should not have been encouraged to think they were to have longer reins.

No End of Books

All-Fiction Shelf, From Santa Fe Trail To Family Life, From Hungarian Gypsies To Hannibal.

By Theodore Hall.

R. L. DUFFUS must write 25 hours a day. He does everything from articles for Harpers to book-reviews for the New York Times, from studies of American history to novels. Now 47, he has written for newspapers all his life, turned out eight books, and put his by-line into every third magazine. And every paragraph of that output has been marked by his shrewd thinking and honest writing.

One of his book-length studies dealt with the old Santa Fe trail. Now, in his fourth novel, he converts that material into unstartling but first-rate fiction. "Jornada" (Covici Friede, $2), takes young Martin Collins, Eastern greenhorn, out on a sunset-bound wagon train in the year 1846—such a "prosaic year," he thinks, "with its noisy, stinking cities, its whirring factories, its ugly new marvel, the locomotive, tearing around once quiet country-sides"—how could there be any adventure in such a year?

But the wife of the wagon-train captain is Spanish and lovely; the Comanches come down like the wolf on the fold; Martin and Dona Mercedes are separated from the train, and have to push three days across "La Jornada," the dread desert, together. And love comes just before they find themselves excitingly mixed up in a revolt in Santa Fe. All turns out well, with Martin realizing that the valley of Taos is home to him although the gold rush calls. Mr. Duffus has set honest adventure and honest romance in these unforgetable old American scenes.

FAMILY life is the stanchest staple of novelists. Luckily it has as many variations as triple-chess (which I never heard of, but like to imagine). Anne Green seems to hold the copyright to familiar American family life plumped down square in the middle of Paris and the French provinces—a device which has its amusing uses. In her latest light but sharp-witted frappe, "That Fellow Perceval" (Dutton, $2.50), we follow the North family. Mr. and Mrs. N. are entertaining and rather dazed parents, not unlike Richard Lockridge's Mr. and Mrs. North in the New Yorker. Two grown-up daughters, whose mottoes are "Get a wiggle on," and "Overdo it," add sufficient light-headed turbulence. And you'll like the very young son, Tony, who thinks in French and relishes fires and grenadine. Mr. Perceval, a bad sixth as hero though he gets the title, arrives as an efficiency expert to straighten out Mr. North's importing office, and ends up as a rather mysterious benefactor. Miss Green seasons the mixture with her quiet but very pretty wit.

In "Arden Acres" (Harcourt Brace, $2), Jessica Nelson North recounts the happy-go-lucky life of the Chapin family. Neither toiling nor spinning (save for the sturdy old grandmother) they yet seem to have an altogether charming time in their rickety house in a poor subdivision. Miss North (poet, and sister of Sterling North, the book critic), has a true eye for people, a lively story sense. The Chapins will banish your depression megrim in ten pages.

Eleanor Carrell Chilton (wife of Herbert Agar, 1933 Pulitzer Prize historian,) won great praise for her first two novels, "Shadows Waiting" and "The Burning Fountain." Her latest, "Follow the Furies" (Bobs Merrill, $2.50), should gain the same for its picture of family conflicts. Hugh Linton, conscientiously logical atheist, is set off against his misty-minded, invalid and pious wife. Daughter Barbara grows up between the two poles, struggles most when she decides to put her mother out of her pain. When she learns of her father's philandering she starts to apply justice to him via the nicotine bottle, but takes it herself instead. Yet these bare bones of plot, more than a little hysterical, are well filled out with the good meat of plausible and very moving narrative.

One more on the "family" list—Alice Ross Colver's "Wild Song" (Dodd Mead, $2). Mrs. Langhorne lives in a dull suburban monotony of husband, house, and progeny. In a twinkle everything is made vastly exciting by the addition of a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law. High drama in the home always makes good reading—it's so unexpected.

• • • •

LET'S stretch farther out. Hold your breath while we discover Eric von Stroheim—our old movie friend of the monocle and close-cropped skull—before us with a novel in his hand. "Paprika" (Macaulay, $2.50), more than lives up to its title as a tale of wild Hungarian gypsies, high passions, and morbidity. Mr. Stroheim disdains the moonlit backdrop; these wandering Tziganes, for all their strange life, are seen cruelly and bluntly.

You'll get all the color-effect you can swallow—that's pretty mixed, but plain enough—in Francis Gerard's "The Scarlet Beast" (Longman's, $2.50), a very saudy tale of slaves and soldiers and sirens in Hannibal's Carthage. The escape-from-the-Soviets motif has reached romantic adventure fiction in Patricia Wentworth's "Red Stefan" (Lippincott, $2)—amid curdling excitement, the lovely English spy makes her way over the border. You'll have to hang onto your hat all through Tay Garnett's "Man Laughs Back" (Macaulay, $2), a sort of Xenophon's march to the sea played by an American engineer and his party of college boy helpers through the South American jungle, crisply told.

• • • •

SOME reprints, not to be sniffed at when you're looking for prime reading, are here also. Lugi Pirandello's first novel, "The Outcast" — jealousy and heart-searching in a Sicilian village, cherished territory to all of us who learned French with Prosepr Merimee's "Colomba—is out in a neat dollar edition (Dutton).

And Macmillan has a new series of stout titles for 90 cents. Jack London's "Call of the Wild" (one of the few books which ever made a dog fight into literature) and Gladys Hasty Carroll's "As the Earth Turns" (seasons on a Maine farm; very soothing) are here beside me as samples. The old plates are clearly printed, the bindings sturdy and varied in this new Modern Readers' Series. What with titles from "Tristram" to "A Preface to Morals," from "The Crock of Gold" to Ibsen's "Plays," I don't see that any of us are going to run out of night-light companions.

Humor Test

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

AS the good old State of Connecticut (of which I am happy to be a native) celebrates this year its 300th anniversary, where many statements in prose and verse and music will be recited in her honor, I think, our Connecticut people have a sufficient sense of humor to appreciate some remarks of a different temper, especially as they were made a long time ago.

I say I am happy to be a native rather than saying I am proud to be one; for I have always liked the remark of the famous French dramatist, Henry Bernstein. He was asked "Are you ashamed of being a Jew?" "No, not at all," said he, "and I am not proud of it either; for I am not ashamed or proud of anything with which I myself had nothing to do." So I am glad to be a native of Connecticut, which means more than being merely satisfied with the situation.

• • • •

The final test of a sense of humor is whether or not one can enjoy a joke on one's own country or native place.

Here is one on New Jersey, and I have never been able to determine whether the remark was intended as a jest or as merely a historical statement of fact. In Dr. Johnson's "Life of Waller," he wrote, "Benjamin, the eldest son, was disinherited and sent to New Jersey, as wanting common understanding." (But after all, it was not our New Jersey.)

• • • •

Now for Connecticut. In the Journals of Ralph Waldo Emerson, we find the following delectable statement which might be taken as one of the amenities between Harvard and Yale. In 1862 Emerson met Mrs. John C. Fremont, of Washington.

"She showed me two letters of her son who had once been designed for our Concord school, but when she came to find how much his reading, spelling and writing had been neglected in his camp education . . . she was afraid to send him among cultivated boys, and had him sent into Connecticut."

And now there was recently published in the Hartford Courant a statement brought to public attention by a distinguished lawyer, Mr. Farwell Knapp. It is an extract from the will of Lewis Morris, of Morrisania, N. Y., written in 1760.

"It is my desire that my son, Gouverneur Morris, may have the best education that is to be had in England or America, but my express will and directions are that he never be sent for that purpose to the Colony of Connecticut, lest he should imbibe in his youth that low craft and cunning so incident to the people of that country, which is so interwoven in their constitutions that all their art can not disguise it from the world, though many of them under the sanctified garb of religion have endeavored to impose themselves on the world as honest men."

Charlottesville Honors Pastor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 4.—Yesterday marked the sixth anniversary of Dr. Henry Alford Porter as pastor of the First Baptist Church, this city. Special services were held at the church and will continue with a week's program which is to be called "Church Week."

Dr. Porter came to Charlottesville from the Third Baptist Church of St. Louis, Mo., in March, 1929. He has held four important pastorates within the bounds of the Southern Baptist Convention, and he is a frequent contributor to several religious papers.

During his pastorate here 649 members have been received into the church, and the debt on the church Sunday school building has been reduced to $48,000.

Tonight an anniversary reception was tendered to Dr. and Mrs. Porter in the social room of the church. Tomorrow night Dr. J. J. Wicker, president of Fork Union Military Academy, will speak, and music will be furnished by the Fork Union Band.

Dr. Porter will address the members of this church on Wednesday night, when his theme will be "The Beautiful Flock." Thursday night will be missionary night, and Friday night Dr. G. G. Johnson, pastor of the National Memorial Baptist Church, Washington, will speak on "Baptist Contributions to the World."

Farm Bankruptcy Act Has Backhand Effect

Disadvantages Of Frazier-Lemke Law Force Voluntary Debt Adjustments.

By Hilding Siverson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Kansas City, Mo.

THERE were three chief factors back of the enactment of the Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium law—the low price of farm products which made it difficult to meet obligations; the attitude of some of the creditors who refused to make concessions; the refusal of some of the Federal land banks to reduce loans. Conceived in sympathy for the farmer's plight, it was projected into the already chaotic economic situation last summer with a view of staving off disaster. Doubtless the framers of the law were sincere in this desire. However, it is not likely that they foresaw all the difficulties that follow when long established practices are overturned.

Many thoughtful observers in the Middle West as well as in Washington have just about come to the conclusion that the greatest value of the Frazier-Lemke law to the farmer has not been in its operation per se, but in speeding up the work of voluntary local credit adjustment committees, which were already doing excellent work before the law was passed. Debtors and creditors alike have been almost driven to take advantage of the voluntary adjustment route because of the many disadvantages of the moratorium law.

Farmers are reluctant to take advantage of the law because they are compelled to become legally bankrupt in order to secure settlement as provided by the law. They are compelled to undergo a five-year court action, during which their final status as debtors remains undetermined, and there is no permanent basis for refinancing their property.

The creditors naturally are opposed to the law because it may cause outright losses of half of their property interests, besides drastic reductions in the interest rate.

• • • •

IN a larger sense there is a great disadvantage to any such law because it tends to disrupt the investment field and cast a great doubt on the value of land as security. Farm land as security is a very definite and important part of the life insurance picture in the United States. Its virtue and stability should be upheld, in the interests of the farmer, the investor and the general public.

At a meeting of the United States Building and Loan League at Chicago last summer, immediately after the passage of the Frazier-Lemke law and the Federal Housing act, one of the speakers made this pertinent observation:

"The Federal Housing act provides Government insurance for loans on real estate (homes). The Frazier-Lemke act greatly depreciates the value of real estate as security. The two are therefore diametrically opposite in philosophy. One law is intended to protect the investor, whose capital is necessary for the healthy operation of business, while the other law tells him that his investment in real estate securities is likely to be shot to pieces without notice."

What shall it profit the farmer to have his debt reduced one-half and his interest rate cut to almost nothing, if, at the same time, investors are frightened away and will not loan money on farms hereafter?

It is comforting, for such reasons to note that the voluntary credit committees are still in very healthy and active condition and are going quietly about their business of adjusting obligations between debtors and creditors.

• • • •

A RECENT issue of an Iowa newspaper reported that in the preceding eight months farm advisory councils in 50 counties of the State effected settlement of 4,297 cases, involving total debts of $32,976,200. From this it is estimated that the aggregate indebtedness so adjudicated in the entire State was in the neighborhood of $65,000,000.

The writer was privileged to sit in one of the farm debt adjustment meetings and the proceedings were dramatic. The committee was composed of genuine farmers—well-informed, sober, patriotic men—good neighbors and citizens. In nearly every case they were able to effect settlements satisfactory to both parties. In one case they plainly saw that the debtor was fighting an uphill battle, because of a chronic inability to manage his affairs properly, and since he was hopelessly bogged down, they advised him to permit foreclosure.

Into this county later came a representative of a "farm holiday" group, advising farmers to repudiate their debts. One farmer approached the chairman of the committee and said that he had been advised not to accept the findings of the committee, which were very favorable to the debtor.

"Go ahead and turn down our adjustments if you want to," said the chairman, who was a kindly man highly esteemed in the neighborhood. "But I know your affairs pretty well, and if you do turn it down, I'd advise you to move into some other neighborhood." The debtor accepted the award—which he was able to do without serious hardship.

• • • •

THESE voluntary committees serving without pay and doing a most arduous and useful service to the Middle Western farmers, have preserved much of this sturdy self-reliance which has been a prominent characteristic of Midland farmers ever since the earliest pioneer days. The results of their work have been such as to bring a rush of renewed faith and confidence in the stability of the agricultural citizenship.

The peculiar advantage of having such committees in operation is that the members, as a rule, are men without political ambitions. They know the financial conditions of their neighbors. They are not influenced by demagogic appeals. They are kind but not maudlin. They know the great value of preserving the financial integrity of farmers as a class. They will not permit the credit of the farmer as a class to sag an inch lower than is absolutely necessary.

For such reasons as these, the Frazier-Lemke law may prove a blessing in disguise, as affording a disagreeable alternative to a sturdy American, healthy, hopeful way of adjusting farm mortgages. The law is being assailed in many courts and there are predictions that it will finally crumble and become one more forgotton law. However its failure or success may not be nearly so important as the rediscovery of straightforward, helpful humanitarian ways of adjusting the old, old quarrel between the mortgagee and the mortgagor. The depreciation in the value of farm land, the tragedy of low crop prices, the disaster of drought—these constitute a sad chapter in American agriculture. And, as is often the case, the crystallization of sympathetic impulses into law may not be half as significant as the new stimulus to those qualities which made America a great Nation.

Listing the Salaried Men.

("Business corporations must file with their income tax returns a list of all employes getting $15,000 a year, the lists to be made available to Congress."—News item).

Boss—Now, let's see, Miss Sneddiker, have we thought of everything in connection with the tax this year?

Secretary—I think we've cleared it all up at last, Mr. Bartholomew. • • • Oh, no! • • • There's the list of $15,000 men.

Boss—What do you mean, Miss Sneddiker?

Secretary—We have to file a list of employes who get $15,000 or more.

Boss—Why?

Secretary—No special reason, except that Congress wants to know. I think they're gonna pass a law making it unconstitutional to get $15,000 a year, or something.

Boss—Well, I suppose we'll have to do it. There's Abercrombie, he drew $15,000 last year. Put him on the list. And you might add a few intimate details. He's 5 feet 11, has blue eyes, saves his money and has four suits with extra pairs of pants. I'm sure Congress will want the name of any man in America with extra pants.

• • • •

Secretary—Then there's Mr. Jozzle. His salary and commissions totaled $15,267.

Boss—Put him on the list, and state that he was born in this country, lives with his folks, puts vinegar on his lettuce, goes to Florida every winter, and recently bought a new radio.

• • • •

Secretary—How about Mr. Conkleputts? He got $14,900?

Boss—Put him on, if we have to give him the extra hundred. And you might tell our lawmakers that he must have made several hundred dollars at contract bridge during the fiscal year, built an addition to his house last year, keeps two bird dogs and is thinking of buying a new automobile. Who else?

• • • •

Boss—Add his name and toss in all the personal items you can think of, so Congress will know all. Say that his wife has money, he plays golf for 50 cents a hole, frequently eats a $1.50 table d'hote dinner, and has a diamond ring on his left hand. And, oh, yes, Miss Sneddiker, mention the fact that he smokes 15-cent cigars. Anybody else?

• • • •

Secretary—There's Mr. Bottomly; the records show he got $18,500 in 1934.

Boss—Put Bottomly on, of course, and don't forget to add that he married the Frisbee girl, has two children, plays the concertina at house parties, and is generally so light-hearted that Congress should be notified. And, oh, yes!

Secretary—What, Mr. Bartholomew?

Boss—You better ask 'em all to give you their photographs. You can inclose them in the returns to Washington.

Secretary—How about fingerprints?

Boss—By all means, finger-prints, Miss Sneddiker. After all, it's probably a criminal matter to have $15,000.

S. K. Martin 3d Dies in Georgia Of Heart Attack

Grandson of Otto Young Inherited Annuity of $120,000.

Samuel K. Martin 3d, a grandson of the late Otto Young, millionaire Chicago merchant, died of a heart attack yesterday in a hotel room in Savannah, Ga., trustees of the Young estate were notified.

Under the terms of his grandfather's will, Martin received about $120,000 annually from Young's estate. When Young died, about 20 years ago, his estate was estimated at about $20,000,000.

Martin went South for his health, it was understood yesterday. He registered at the Hotel De Soto several days ago.

Married Broadway Star.

His wife, Mrs. Jane Catherine Martin, was a 19-year-old star on Broadway at the time of her marriage to Martin in 1929. At this time she was featured in the musical show "Whoopee."

The couple went to Paris, where their honeymoon was marred by a brawl in a fashionable bar. Martin was jailed as a result and charged with assaulting several bartenders and gendarmes.

From 1929 until January, 1934, the Martins resided in Montgomery County, where Martin opened a palatial estate, Marwood, one of the show spots of the suburban area.

They became estranged early in 1934. Mrs. Martin, who was known on the stage as "Mary Jane," filed suit in Circuit Court, asking an injunction restraining the First National Bank, as trustee under the Young will, from paying Martin $10,000, which was due him from the estate.

Separate Maintenance Asked.

The bill asked that a receiver be appointed to handle the estate, and asked separate maintenance for Mrs. Martin and her son, Samuel K. Martin 4th, then 3½ years old.

In her action Mrs. Martin charged her husband with habitual drunkenness. She said because of this they had drawn up a contract in which she was to receive 40 per cent and he 60 per cent of the income from his estate.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Applied For.

By Morgan Baker.

WHILE appearing before the House Rules Committee to meet charges of inefficiency in administration of Home Owners Loan Corporation, John H. Fahey, HOLC chairman, outlined the tremendous load his organization has carried successfully, and paid tribute to the efficiency of the HOLC personnel.

BAKER.

Mr. Fahey pointed out that HOLC was created in the midst of panic, organized under intense pressure and overwhelmed by an immediate avalanche of more than 400,000 loan requests, which quickly amounted to over 1,750,000 applications. In barely 18 months of active operation, he stated, the HOLC has already saved over 800,000 families from the loss of their homes and has refinanced home mortgages in the sum of $2,500,000,000.

"It would be ridiculous," Mr. Fahey told the committee in welcoming a congressional investigation, "for us to contend that such a far-flung emergency organization of 22,000 employes in 393 offices could be set up, and so vast a number of applications handled and loans made, within so brief a time without some mistakes."

He emphasized that it was not surprising that so small a number of actual irregularities has developed, "considering that the corporation is a Government operation, conducted in the open, and constantly under the observation of many persons who would promptly report any malfeasance. • • • The approval of a wrongful loan would require collusion on the part of several persons in entirely different offices, and could hardly exist under the surveillance of critical mortgagees, applicants, employes and the public."

A rigorous personnel policy has been followed, Mr. Fahey indicated. In his insistence on a competent personnel, he explained that 236 attorneys had been discharged for unsatisfactory work, while 942 others had resigned or been discharged because they were holding political office while employed by the corporation, or had become candidates for office.

"During the past year," he added, "2,116 appraisers have been permanently disqualified for corporation employment as a result of unsatisfactory work, and 44 State and district managers and assistant managers were obliged to resign on grounds of mismanagement, disregard of instructions, inefficiency or carelessness."

A bibliography containing a suggestive list of references on the Federal regulation of the petroleum industry, with special reference to the Petroleum Administration, has been compiled by James Tate Rubey (P), assistant librarian, Geological Survey. The bibliography is one of a series being issued by Mr. Rubey, listing various references to the several bureaus under Interior.

D. B. Krimgold has been appointed by the Soil Erosion Service to supervise collection of rainfall and other hydrological data of its projects. This work will be carried forward with the cooperation of the Geological Survey. Stream gauging will be a major item.

James P. Mullen, formerly with the Library of Congress, is due to arrive in New York this week after a three months' European tour. According to reports received here, he will visit his parents in Indiana and will return to Washington later this month.

THE RELIGIOUS STRIFE IN MEXICO

What lies beneath the terrible crisis between the Catholic Church and the State in Mexico . . . a crisis that forebodes widespread religious war in the near future? Is Christianity to be crucified in a nation where 90 per cent of the inhabitants is Catholic and the remaining 10 per cent—the ruling class—is not?

According to Frederick Vincent Williams, who visited Mexico for the express purpose of bringing back a precise report of conditions there, the situation is appalling. There have been killings—5,000 of them since the truce between Calles and the church in 1929. Hundreds of priests, driven from their churches, are facing starvation. In some schools, children are taught to recite "There is no God . . . there never was any God . . . there never will be any God . . . ." Bishops, banished from their diocese, suffer tremendous hardships. Nuns are forced into hiding. Churches, rectories and seminaries are closed and confiscated.

Beginning this Friday, The Post will present a series of articles by Mr. Williams, presenting a Catholic viewpoint of the religious revolution in Mexico. Mr. Williams, a director of the Catholic Laymen's Retreat Association in California and its former secretary, is also the faithful navigator (president) of Serra General Assembly of the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, and a director of public relations for various prelates and religious orders. In Mexico he bore letters from Catholic leaders in the United States to prelates and priests who were in hiding.

Guests Hear Program by Rosa Ponselle and Erno Valasek.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt were the guests in whose honor the members of the Cabinet and their wives entertained last night at the Mayflower. The function marked the beginning of the President's third year in the White House. It takes the place of the separate Cabinet dinners heretofore given by each member of the Cabinet in honor of the Chief Executive.

Dinner was served in the Chinese room of the hotel, the guests being seated at a large, oval-shaped table on which green and white were the predominating colors. A Louis XVI gold plateau and two side epergnes formed the centerpiece, which was filled with white roses, white lilacs, white snapdragons and budlea arranged effectively with farleyense fern. The same kind of flowers also were used in seven large plaques arranged at intervals the length of the table. Strewn over the cloth were garlands of smilax interspersed with white sweet peas.

Beaming with pride and satisfaction, the mother of the President, Mrs. James Roosevelt, sr., was given a prominent place at the party. She was the only other member of the family present. Col. Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt, was not able to attend, but Mrs. Howe was among the guests. MacCubbins Hold A Party for Baby

14-Month-Old Daughter Is Youngest "Deb."

An unusual "coming-out party" was given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Hobart H. MacCubbin at their home at 2218 Wyoming avenue for their 14-month-old daughter, Betsy.

Since little Miss Betsy has not met many of her father's and mother's friends for the reason that she is either taking her afternoon nap or has retired for the night when they call, the MacCubbins decided that a Sunday afternoon tea from 4 to 7 offered the only practical way of introducing Betsy.

So yesterday baby Betsy held court for a large circle of admirers and established a record as the youngest debutante of the season.

Beauty Salon Offers a Free Skin Massage

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF THE CONTOUR of your face isn't what it used to be by half a chin or more, or the pores in your skin are miniature craters, or you're combating a tender, young crop of blackheads — here's what to do!

Take time off this very afternoon and call at a certain new Connecticut avenue beauty salon. Here you may recline luxuriously on a chaise lounge while an experienced operator gives you a face treatment unlike any you've had before.

And what will this cost you? Not 1 cent! All this week the treatments are "on the house"—its pleasure to give, your privilege to take. And don't miss one; you'll be sorry if you do!

There's no foretelling just what your treatment will be like, for each one is adapted to the individual. As skins differ, so do the treatments. However, each one centers around a milky mask that's absolutely thrilling.

It's delightful when it's applied, because it's cool and soothing and delicately fragrant with lavender. And it's even more satisfactory afterward, for it leaves your skin as smooth and fresh as a child's.

This is one salon where you receive strictly individual attention. So, if you've skin problems you want to discuss with someone who really knows the answer, don't fail to take advantage of this opportunity.

Renovating an Old Dress.

You've seen an architect take a run-down house and make it over into a thing of rare beauty? Well, you can take an old dress, and with a few accessories change it into the smartest frock in your wardrobe.

You can do all this by shopping at just one counter in a large downtown store. Here you may purchase a belt, a blouse or a triangle scarf, all matching. And then, to make your outfit even smarter, you may buy a bag and hat in the same color. And what a color choice you have! Navy blue and red, brown and yellow, red and white, and blue and white.

There are two styles in the hats, a turban type and one with a turn-up brim. Both are little softies that may be pulled and twisted to suit your particular type of beauty.

Regency Gloves are Here.

One shopper said the other day, "If they're going to have Regency dresses and Regency hats, why don't they have Regency gloves, too. I've searched the town over and I can't find any!"

Somebody page this shopper, for the Regency gloves are found. And, whether you're going Regency or semitropics added a symphony of affairs impossible to resist.

They're made of a coarse lace that looks a bit like crochet. But, despite their dainty fragile appearance, they stand up under the strain of daily wear and take to a washtub like a duck to water.

Unlike a great many gloves of this type, they fit. You know how mesh gloves, or even crocheted ones, seem to be a misfit in each finger? Well, not these. They are so beautifully made that they fit like paper on the wall!

"Southern Breeze" Perfume.

The arrival of a certain new perfume is particularly appropriate for spring. It is called Sous le Vent Southern Breeze and fits in with the present romantic feminine mode —or mood—to perfection.

According to a Paris report the story of its creation is this:

"Recently M. X—— traveled to Guadeloupe. He was charmed by the country, the vivid hibiscus and bougainvillea. He walked at the foot of the mimosa-clad hills swept by the warm trade winds of the Caribbean. In the bright sunshine, many scents rose together from the rich vegetation to form one glorious perfume, destined to become Sous le Vent. At night, too, some of the rarer night blooming flowers that are found in the tropics and semitropics added a symphony of odors in the moon-washed air."

Naturally, the women of Washington have been anticipating the arrival of this perfume. Today they will find it. A certain Washington store is delighted to announce its arrival.

Shaving Buy for Husband.

Husbands—poor men who so seldom go shopping—are in for a bit of luck if their wives will take advantage of a certain shaving set bargain. It includes a shaving cream and after-shaving lotion, both of a well known make.

There's no danger of a man's not liking them. He's sure to. The quality is unimpeachable. And they're faintly scented.

Believe it or not (and you'll be a bit incredulous when you learn who puts these out) the set costs only $1.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Church to Honor Gray Leaders.

Two famous Confederate generals, Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson, are to be honored with a tablet in St. John's Episcopal Church, New York. Gen. Jackson was baptized in the church and Gen. Lee was a vestryman from 1842 to 1847.

Pattern No. 815.

IF SHE is a tall, awkward fourteen, this frock will do much to soften any angularity. If she is dainty and small she will love its feminine grown-up lines. Of cotton, it is a good design for school or later summer wear; of silk, it is suitable for simple "dress-up" occasions.

The cowl neckline may be brightened with a big bow pulled through a slash in the front. Panels make the skirt fit and hang well. There may be a tied girdle or a narrow belt. The sleeves are full and short or of just-below-elbow length. The pattern is cut in sizse 8 to 14. Size 10 requires 2⅝ yards of 35-inch material for the dress with below-elbow sleeves.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

Leading or Playing.

It has been brought to my attention that many players would appreciate the Code of Contract Bridge Laws more fully if outlined in simple words and collated. The rules on leading and playing are fairly simple.

When Declarer releases a card from his own hand face up on the table, that card has been led or played. And not until then Declarer may expose a card and then decide to play another, providing he does not release it. He gives no available information to partner.

When Declarer touches or calls a card in Dummy, that card is led or played unless Declarer is arranging the cards or pushing other cards aside to secure the desired card. He must label his action by saying "I arrange," or words to that effect, when touching cards in Dummy without intention to lead or play them.

When an adversary detaches a card from his hand, that card is led or played when it is so placed or held that his partner sees its face or can call the card.

Thus, the question of when a card is led or played depends upon who leads or plays it.

"Best-Laid Plans."

In today's hand a pass was predicated upon a conviction that the adverse contract could be defeated, but "the best-laid plans of mice and men gang oft agley."

West, Dealer.

1—North does not care particularly whether South interprets this as a penalty or takeout double.
2—South's han dis worthless on defense. Nevertheless this bid can not be recommended.
3—West refuses to sacrifice because he expects to defeat the contract.

The Play.

West had very carefully planned the defense from the very minute that the four spade bid was made. He intended to open a diamond and subsequently underlead his Ace of clubs to secure a diamond ruff. A ruff together with his three Aces would be enough to defeat the contract.

Declarer regarded the diamond lead with cold suspicion. East's triple raise of the clubs was predicated undoubtedly upon a minor two-suiter, a belief confirmed by the opening lead, obviously a singleton. In much less time than it takes to relate, South comprehended West's plan in its every detail. There was only one hope to frustrate it—East might not grasp the situation. Declarer led the six of clubs from dummy at trick two and East was caught flat-footed. By failing to put up the King he spoiled a carefully planned defense. West was obliged to win, and had nothing better to play for than a short heart suit in East's hand. The Ace and a small heart failed to give East a ruff. Declarer won the second heart trick in his own hand and in fear of a third-round heart ruff led the ten of spades to induce West to duck with a holding of Ace and one small one. West was not to be deceived. He went up with the Ace and led another heart, but it was too late. East had no more trumps.

HOW to KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Modern Treatment of Burns.

IN a recent article in the London Lancet, A. M. Clark and R. Cruickshank review modern methods of treating burns and make several useful suggestions.

Nearly ten years have elapsed since E. C. Davidson suggested the use of a tannic acid solution in the treatment of burns. Clark and Cruickshank note that tannic acid, which precipitates protein, penetrates fairly deeply into the burned area. Theoretically this is supposed to act as a barrier against the absorption of protein poisons from the burned skin and to prevent an excessive fluid loss from the raw surfaces. Some authorities believe, however, that tannic acid does nothing to check toxemia; that if the burned surface can not be properly cleaned the application of tannic acid may be dangerous.

Another method given consideration is that of S. R. Monteith and R. O. Clock, who advise spraying the burned parts with normal horse serum to which an antiseptic (cresol) has been added. The claim is made for this plan that new tissue forms rapidly and that there is a noticeable absence of pain as well as toxemia.

In 1933 R. H. Aldrich recommended spraying burns with a 1 per cent solution of gentian violet (an aniline dye). Other investigators added mucilage to the solution. This latter method, although successful in the hands of certain of its advocates, has not been as widely used as tannic acid.

Clark and Cruickshank describe the plan which they have used in the Glasgow Royal infirmary. They emphasize the importance of combating shock and to this end the patient is placed in a special room in which the temperature is kept about 80 degrees F. A simple hoop cradle prevents the bed clothing from resting on the burned surfaces and normal salt solution is administered to take the place of fluid lost. As soon as possible the patient is placed in a bath of running water at a temperature of 100 to 110 degrees F. In this situation blisters are opened, dead skin is cut away and burned clothing removed with the least possible injury. The injured skin is cleansed gently with a mild soapsuds. The patient is then removed from the bath and the burned areas covered with gauze dressings soaked in a 5 per cent solution of freshly prepared tannic acid combined with a 20 per cent solution of a noncorrosive antiseptic. The dressing is kept moist from 8 to 12 hours, after which it is removed, disclosing a firm brown coagulated surface. The patient is returned to the bath each day, a canvas sling or hammock being employed so that moving may be accomplished without injury.

The authors referred to cite 100 consecutive cases of severe burns treated in this manner (65 children and 35 adults), with but 12 deaths.

In summing up their plan of treatment they emphasize (1) prevention of shock (2), supplying fluid to the body (3), the use of a warm bath, and (4) combating infection.

Pellagra.

M. E. T. writes: In your article on pellagra you suggest the use of powdered yeast. Where can I buy this and what are the instructions as to its use?

Reply.

Powdered yeast is frequently used in the treatment of pellagra. It may be purchased from any pharmacist's supply house, and is given in teaspoonful doses 3 or 4 times daily.

Best of Sauces Is Hollandaise; Here's Recipe

Queen of Condiments Is Often Imitated; Mock, Formula Given.

By Dorothea Duncan.

A GOOD COOK is judged on many scores, but one important point in her favor will be good judgment in sauces. An experienced chef often smiles at a woman's version of hollandaise sauce. Of course, there is a trick to making a good hollandaise sauce, but this isn't the point that may cause the smile. Hollandaise sauce has so frequently been misrepresented that there are very few persons who know a real hollandaise when they eat it and fewer still know the correct ingredients.

Because a hollandaise is rather expensive to make, a white sauce is often doctored up with lemon juice and egg yolks and served in its place. The basic ingredients of a true hollandaise sauce are egg yolks, butter and lemon juice. Contrary to many beliefs, flour has no part in the thickening of this sauce as it has in a white sauce.

The sauce that is served to represent the hollandaise may be a perfectly presentable sauce and, no doubt, complements the fish or vegetables that it accompanies.

Recipe Settles Question.

The following recipes will answer the question submitted by a reader: How do you make a real hollandaise sauce and what is the sauce that is so frequently substituted for hollandaise?

Hollandaise Sauce.

½ cup fat
Yolks of 3 eggs
Juice of ½ lemon
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup boiling water

This is one of the best sauces for fish.

Beat the fat to a cream, add the yolks of the eggs one at a time and beat well, then add the lemon juice, salt and pepper. About five minutes before serving, add the boiling water, a little at a time, stirring well. Place the bowl in a saucepan of boiling water until the sauce thickens like boiled custard. Serve at once.

Mock Hollandaise Sauce.

½ cup medium white sauce
3 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 egg yolks

Add butter, in small pieces, to white sauce, stirring constantly. Add seasoning and lemon juice and stir in egg yolks. Cook, with constant stirring, until the sauce is smooth and thick. Another pertinent question follows:

Mulligatawny Soup.

What is the origin of mulligatawny soup? Could you print a recipe for it?

Originally mulligatawny was a highly seasoned, thick, East Indian type soup, of which curry powder was the essential "character" ingredient.

The soup as we know it in America has a meat stock basis, is delicately seasoned with curry and is served with rice.

5 cups veal stock
1 cup tomatoes
¼ cup onion, cut in slices
¼ cup carrot, cut in cubes
¼ cup celery, cut in cubes
1 pepper, finely chopped
1 apple, sliced
¼ cup butter
1-3 cup flour
1 teaspoon curry powder
Blade of mace
2 cloves
Sprig of parsley
Salt and pepper
1 cup raw chicken, cut in dice

Cook vegetables, apple and chicken in butter until brown. Add flour, curry powder, mace, cloves, parsley, tomatoes and veal stock and simmer for one hour. Strain, reserve chicken and rub vegetables through a sieve. Add chicken and sieved vegetables to strained soup and serve with boiled rice. Season soup to taste with salt and pepper.

Three Men and Diana

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Diana Carmichael's grandmother kept a boarding house down at the end of Mason avenue, where the town trailed out into empty lots and railway fences. Most of "Gram's" lodgers were old persons, thin, shriveled old women, who subsisted on pittances. Diana suffered at being poor, because she had to go to public high school, instead of the exclusive Rutherford, where Connie Newbegin, Elinor and Patsy Palmer went. But through the assistance of a teacher, she was admitted into Rutherford. Now she longed to go to college, and the same teacher encouraged her to do so. Her grandmother, however, expressed doubts as to the feasibility of the plan.

"WHAT are you going to do, Di?" Joan Rowley asked.

"To do?" Diana stopped in her swift addressing of envelopes and sat back, smiling. Joan was school president, this senior year, as anyone might have predicted she would be, even from the hour that little smiling Joan had entered the lowest kindergarten class at Rutherford, 13 years before. But close after Joan, as star of the May festival, as an A scholar, as leader in dramatics, came Diana Chamberlain Carmichael, of Mason avenue.

"Yes, I mean—with yourself, Di."

"After college? There's four years of that, you know."

"Of course, I know. That is, if you take it all."

"Oh, but why not take it all?"

Diana's splendid eyes were opened to their widest in surprise. Joan laughed.

"Well, I mean to take it all," she said.

"Oh, but so do I."

"I didn't know."

What Did She Mean?

Diana did not stop to analyze it, but she felt somehow a trifle uncomfortable that Joan should imply that she would not stick to college—if that was what Joan had implied. What else could she have implied?

Diana idolized Joan; everything that Joan did was perfect in Diana's eyes. She was almost a year younger than Joan, but even the explanation of Joan's being a whole year late in graduating was thrilling; "there was my year out, in Switzerland, for my French."

So, of course, Joan spoke perfect French, although Diana usually got higher marks for grammar and composition.

At Rutherford all the girls wore costumes alike; plain blue jackets, blouses of white, pleated skirts of white or olive green, olive green coats. Only their silk ties showed their class rating, and the seniors monoplized a brilliant vermillion that set off the green and white beautifully.

Diana, long-legged and shabby and tawny-headed at 17, was like a tousled puppy circling about Joan's trim Persian-kitten neatness.

"What are you going to do, Joan, when you graduate?"

"Oh, Lucas, of course!"

"But I mean after college?"

Joan mused, and Diana prompted:

"Have a coming-out party?"

A Question of Ideals.

"Oh, horrors, no!" Joan protested, raising clear-penciled brows. "I hate it. I don't like," the girl went on conscientiously—"I don't like the idea of being a butterfly. Besides, I'll be 21 when I graduate, Di; too old for a debut."

"You'll marry, Joan."

"No." Joan answered quickly, with another of her earnest looks. "I won't I don't believe I'll ever marry, Di."

"Joan, they'll all be after you! Look at them already."

The other girl shrugged this off. "College boys," she said. "No, I think my ideals of marriage are too high, Di. I really do. It wouldn't be a question of—falling in love——."

"Oh, no!" Diana agreed quickly in the pause. "It wouldn't be a question of falling in love."

"It would be a question——" Joan glanced about the deserted office at Rutherford, where she and Di were addressing announcements for the Christmas masque—"It would be a question of ideals, Di," she said, very low.

"I know," Di agreed in the same tone.

"I don't say this to everyone. I don't say it to my own mother!" Joan confessed. "But marriage is sacred to me."

"I know."

Gram Was an Angel.

"But I shall find work!" Joan said, with an uplifted look.

"Of course you will!" At such moments as this Diana fairly adored Joan.

Joan stretched a brown, slim hand, as smooth as satin, and laid it on Diana's hand.

"And you must find yours," she said seriously.

"Oh, I will!" Again Diana was just a trifle uncomfortable under the smiling, the loving, reminder. There was something about all this that she did not quite understand. Joan sometimes moved into an exalted air whereto Diana could not follow. "My problem——" she blurted out suddenly, and was still, her face flushed.

"I know it's hard, Di!" Joan said, in quick sympathy.

"Well, it is hard," Di admitted, with a little vexed laugh. "You know how we live—where we live! My grandmother and I share a room on the ground floor. She's been an angel to me all my life—I've no mother, you know."

"I know your parents are dead, of course."

Diana let the sentence stand; it was as if she had not heard it. This was flagrant disloyalty to papa, but it was the better way.

"I do think at least I'd try for a room of my own!" Joan said in her reasonable, bright helpful way.

Diana was thinking. The big mansard-roofed front room at Gram's was never rented; it was not even completely plastered or furnished. But it was high and airy, and a girl with paint and burlap and ruffled calicoes might do wonders there.

At Rutherford they were always doing charming inexpensive things in the decorative art department; shellacking benches and stenciling on linen. Miss Benchley prided herself on her practical domestic courses.

At the first opportunity she spoke to Gram about it. But Gram gently, regretfully, refused.

Gram Was Firm.

"I couldn't climb all those stairs, Diana."

"But, Gram, you wouldn't have to! I mean, just for me."

"I couldn't let you sleep up there alone—not with so many men coming and going in the house. It isn't wired for lights, — ay, Di, and there's no water on that floor."

The dream died; the light went out of Diana's face. Her big "studio" room, with burlap on the walls and checked red calico at the windows, faded away into nothingness.

She must go on sleeping with Gram on the folding couch in the back parlor and doing her studying at the kitchen after the dishes were washed at night.

Up to Christmas of her senior year at Rutherford everything was somewhat inspiring, splendid, amusing. But after Christmas, as June drew nearer and nearer, with commencement and commencement frocks and flowers to think about, life became increasingly perplexing.

"Diana Carmichael," said Miss Fotterel to Miss Benchley, "is changing. You see it, of course?"

"My dear Alma," Miss Benchley returned gently, "am I not here to see how the girls develop?"

"Well, of course," Miss Fotterel hastened to concede. "But I think I have never seen any girl grasp—pick up—assimilate things as rapidly as Diana. The way she dresses her hair, now, her speech, her hands—everything. She seems to me—I realize her unfortunate background, of course—but she really does seem to me, to be one of our finest girls."

Would Like to Help.

"I think she is—you remember that I always have thought so. And if she passes the Wellesley and the Smith examinations." Miss Benchley said complacently, "it qualifies Rutherford, and that is what I have had in mind."

"Poor child, I don't suppose she could afford to go to either?"

"I don't know that she can afford to go to Lucas—even living at home. But Diana," the head mistress said, "has character."

"Poor child, I often wonder if she realized how handicapped she is."

"I don't believe she does. She always seems in the highest spirits, and very natural and simple with the other girls. If I could," added Miss Benchley, "I'd help her in some way."

What TODAY Means

IF MARCH 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:10 to 11:10 a. m., from 2:10 to 4:10 p. m. and from 7:10 to 9:10 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:10 to 8:10 a. m., from 4:10 to 6:10 p. m. and from 10:10 p. m. until midnight.

Do not let a grouchy spirit rob you of your sense of humor on this date, for it is possible it might be needed to carry you through the day in the right mental attitude. As the situation which may arise probably will have a ridiculous side, you will be in the position to laugh it out of existence instead of getting angry. In business, controversies should be avoided, if possible, by trying compromising proposals instead of arbitrary demands.

Contracts involving money should not be hastily signed. It might be well to have legal advice if important issues are involved, as sometimes an "ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Married and engaged couples, as well as those whose hearts are seriously involved in a love affair, will show good judgment if they will stick to actual facts on this date instead of resorting to fiction.

If a woman, and March 5 is your birthday, you will assure yourself of a great deal more happiness through your life if you never permit yourself to become an extremist in any line of thought. You will display wisdom if you always weigh carefully the opinions of others before expressing your own. To achieve the maximum amount of success you must be broad minded. You possess excellent taste and a skillful touch, which if used commercially, should prove a valuable asset. Commercial art, designing, interior decorating, or selling artistic things should be very lucrative. You should find a great deal of happines through marriage, if you will only remember it is a game of "give and take."

The child born on March 5, usually when it reaches the age of youth, must learn that while self-assurance is a very important trait to possess, modesty of demeanor is also a most essential virtue, and must be practiced daily if popularity is desired.

If a man, and March 5 is your natal day and success your goal, then possibly the most important thing for you to cultivate is a kindly consideration for the time, as well as feelings of those with whom you are thrown into daily contact. Avoid dealing in personalities, as much as possible. Remember that through your tongue you can make friends or enemies Tact is comparatively a rare virtue, but a mighty valuable one to have. Music, art, literature, geology, as well as mineralogy offer excellent opportunities, if studied enthusiastically.

Successful people born March 5: Howard Pyle, artist and author. Willis Gaylord Clark, poet. Theodore T. Munger, clergyman and author. George W. Maynard, artist. Gerard Troost, mineralogist. Arthur Foote, composer.

Spring Styles Revive The Bonnet and Cape

Feminine Apathy in Politics Has Passed, Democratic Regional Advisers Assert

Underwood & Underwood.

Mrs. Flynn, of Indiana, Mrs. Parkman, Kansas, Here for Parleys.

WOMEN have aged ten years in the last two—not in looks let it be hastily assured—but in political maturity. From shrinking little girls and frivolous-minded adolescents, politically speaking, they have become grown-up, serious-minded voters and campaigners.

So it appears to two women who, for more than 20 years, have been closely familiar with the political and other public activities of their sex. They are Mrs. A. P. Flynn, of Logansport, Ind., and Mrs. Harrison Parkman, of Emporia, Kans. Both are regional advisers for the Democratic Party, Mrs. Flynn for Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, West Virginia and Kentucky; Mrs. Parkman for Kansas Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Colorado. The two have been in Washington conferring with leaders of the women's division of the Democratic national committee.

Two Reasons Are Given.

Both can remember when the problem of whether women could ever be drawn away from the bridge table and the sewing circle to go to the polls was a serious one. But feminine apathy in politics has now happily passed, they say. In fact, they predict that women may soon become the more active and the better educated sex in politics and government.

The increasing interest in social legislation is one of the chief things that is leading women to the polls and also into political organizations, they point out. Another is the close alignment of economics with politics. Women have discovered how elections may affect their purse strings.

Women even have become good sports in politics, have learned to stand up to the give-and-take of a campaign and to smile when they lose, Mrs. Parkman believes.

"Oriented through education, they are not the indecisive creatures they were once thought to be," she said. "Their political steps are surer today and their chances for success greater. They've learned sportsmanship, cultivated good judgment and are willing to fight for offices and to prove their worth when they are successful in getting them."

Mrs. Flynn has no patience with extreme feminism in politics.

"Woman interest should never be placed ahead of community interest," she said. "The best candidate, like the best law, should win."

Advocate of 50-50 Plan.

An ardent advocate of the 50-50 plan of political organization, Mrs. Flynn gives her native State credit for originating this idea. Indiana has given women equal party privileges since 1926.

"Almost 53 per cent or more than half the vote cast in Indiana in the 1932 election can be chalked up to women," she said proudly. "This should prove the justice of our Nation-wide drive for equal representation in party organization."

The human interest appeal that government has evolved in recent years is the explanation Mrs. Parkman gives for the fact that feminine voting and the study of legislation have become both widespread and fashionable.

"Legislation that assures the protection of the home, the welfare of children and security for old age," she sad, "cannot fail to win the whole-hearted indorsement of women voters. This is the type of legislation they have wanted for years. Now that their golden opportunity has arrived, they will not stop until they have reached their goal."

Disregard Party Lines.

"Everywhere we find women grouped together irrespective of party affiliation studying proposed bills and enactments," she said. "If they are convinced a piece of legislation is right, they support it, even though it means getting behind a party of the opposing candidate to do so. This mental honesty is one of the healthiest signs of feminine progress."

A practical political service women can render is that of getting out the vote on election day, both women party leaders agree. Mrs. Flynn pointed out that in 1932 30,000 volunteer women workers in Indiana, using the motor car and the telephone as aids, helped get voters to the polls.

Mrs. Parkman worked for the cause of woman suffrage, later becoming active in politics. She is also known for her journalistic activities. For 12 years she helped her husband run the Emporia Times, one of the few Democratic papers in Kansas. Later she became editor and advertising representative of the Kansas Clubwoman, official state publication of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Flynn became active in politics immediately after women were granted the vote. In 1922 she was elected vice chairman of the Indiana Democratic State committee, a position she held for six consecutive terms. She was a delegate at large to two national conventions, those of 1924 and 1932.

Think Women Will Take a More Active Part Than Men.

'Femininity First,' Paris Expert Decrees

Chanel, Pioneer in Boyish Modes, Casts Them Aside This Year.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 4.—"Femininity first" is Chanel's slogan for spring chic.

With one fell swoop, the designer, who launched the little box-like jersey dress right after the war, has swept aside all boyish effects in clothes and decreed jeweled earrings resembling flowers, wide "Merry Widow" hats and flowered ruffled frocks for 1935.

Gay prints, stamped with butterflies, flowers or flags and two-tone prints in basket weaves or star effects are shown for afternoon wear. They are designed with soft ruffled or knife pleated flounces at the fairly low neckline and with numerous finely pleated inserts in the skirts, whose hems are from six to seven inches from the ground.

This evening gown which carries out the sweet femininity motif is of printed black tulle with ruffle trim at neck and puffed elbow sleeves. The decolletage will show necklaces to advantage.

Jeweled Earrings, Printed Frocks, Ruffles Regain Former Glories.

With them go wide-brimmed hats of dark or light straw, recalling the "Merry Widow" designs of years ago, sometimes cut with the abbreviated turned-up back brim (so often seen this season), trimmed with a cluster of flowers or a tuft of ostrich feathers.

Big clip earrings set with varicolored stones to resemble flowers are often worn with the afternoon frocks which are generally topped by slender, small-colored wool coats, recalling one color of the printed dress.

Frocks and suits for morning wear are shorter, although they, too, stress the vogue for femininity.

Coat dresses of black, navy blue or pepper-and-salt wools, cut on slender lines and finished with white pique collars in the form of petals or stylized flowers, are one of the outstanding items in the collection. They are generally worn with very wide-brimmed, flat-crowned hats of black or navy blue straw finished with a narrow band of white grosgrain ribbon.

Suits are designed to give a less masculine effect than in past years. They are cut of soft wools and jerseys—some of them splashed with dots or figures of a contrasting color and designed with fitted waistlines and shoulders which are far from square. Their short-sleeved blouses are bright polka dotted silks or linens often cut with a very decollete "sunbath" back when they are designed for country wear.

Evening gowns are fashioned either with very full skirts or with a more slender profile, having two long panels hanging from the shoulders and just missing the ground. Shaded gray Georgette stamped with bright red poinsettias, flame crepe splashed with white stars outlined in silver sequins and multicolored butterfly prints whose green butterflies are cut out to outline the decollete are among the outstanding fabrics used.

Dressing Rooms On Buses Urged

Making Up in Public Annoys Council Member.

Oxford.—Taking exception to what he described as women "dressing" in the city's buses, a member of the Oxford City Council attempted to jam through an ordinance providing for a dressing room on every public conveyance.

The councilor explained that he disliked the sight of women applying cosmetics. The powder at times settled on his black cutaway.

Shoppers Urged to Watch Light in Choosing Gowns

San Jose, Calif., (AP).—A woman should select her evening gowns under artificial light and her morning and afternoon dresses under natural light, advises Miss Martha E. Thomas, of the department of home economics in the State college here.

"The yellow in the average electric light will change the color of any material to some degree," Miss Thomas said. "Often the change will be great enough to make the gown a ghastly shade at night."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Are There in Washington Men and Women Who Delight in "Good Talk?"

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Several years ago when I first came to Washington as a roomer, I was totally unacquainted and realized that in order to escape loneliness it was necessary to make friends. Therefore, exercising only slight discrimination in choosing my companions, I succeeded in becoming a very popular girl, leading a strictly social existence.

• • • •

Result, at 26, although I am still very fond of hiking, tennis, dancing, swimming and even resort to bridge-playing for the sake of sociability, I regret that in the years just past I did not devote more time to the more worthwhile subjects which have for me such a strong appeal.

• • • •

Gradually I have dropped most of my friends, hoping in so doing to be able to pursue more cultural, finer interests. Although I have been studying a foreign language and have lately spent considerable time in reading, my periods of loneliness are of longer duration, for none of my acquaintances seem to appreciate or to be in sympathy with my tastes and ideas.

• • • •

Surely there are in Washington men and women who, not to the exclusion of sane recreation, delight in instructive lectures, concerts, plays, art galleries and scintillating, yet serious conversation. My purpose in writing to you is to attract the attention of such residents of this city as, similarly situated and perhaps facing the same problem, may wish to communicate with me to our mutual advantage. Sincerely,

OPTIMISTIC LADY.

There Must Be Many.

DEAR OPTIMISTIC LADY: While the scholarly pursuit of "cultural, finer interests" in life is almost a necessity to the person endowed with intellectual curiosity, still, friends in adequate number are an absolute psychological necessity to every human being. And for that reason, I would counsel you to take care not to alienate altogether those you have, on the chance of finding others more congenial.

• • • •

I sincerely hope you may be able to meet and make friends with persons who share your enthusiasm for the study of languages, art, history, music, philosophy, drama, literature, or whatever subjects appeal to you in cultural guise. Unquestionably, the invasion of such fields of information gains added fillip for the person who can share the fruits of his research with others similarly engrossed. But this experience is the exception rather than the rule.

• • • •

You may need to strike a middle-of-the-road course in holding those friends with whom you enjoy a mutuality of tastes for such diversions as hiking, tennis, dancing, swimming and bridge-playing; and in gradually attracting such others as might match your enthusiasm for the so-called cultural pursuits.

• • • •

In other words, don't burn your bridges of friendly contacts behind you. Nobody cares much for a blue-stocking, and it would be unfair to yourself, as a normally gregatrious person, to win the reputation of preferring books and "culture" to the society of other persons. After all, it should be possible to work in a few hours of intensive study or reading each week, without your lighter-minded friends being the wiser. Don't ever parade your intellectual leanings. Maintain the same reticence concerning your studies as you would concerning the rites of your toilette. Let the results tell their own story.

• • • •

I feel sure there must be any number of men and women in Washington who would enjoy knowing you and I shall be glad to forward any replies your letter may elicit. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Address her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Expert Upsets Age-Old Ideas About Beauty

MANY TRADITIONAL ideas of feminine beauty are upset by Ernest Gann, Hollywood expert on feminine modes and manners, who has studied women of all countries in their native habitats.

Mr. Gann, who is director of movie tests for two companies and played the role of suitor in the film "Sailors of Cattaro," has definite ideas on how the women of the world stack up in the matter of pulchritude.

German Girls Prettiest.

Here are some of them as expressed in a recent interview in a New York newspaper:

"German girls are the most beautiful. Japanese girls are silly. Chinese girls look pretty at a distance, but not close up; English women are distinctly athletic, French women still use too much perfume and the seams in their hose are seldom straight; Russian women are intriguing without looking nice; I can be sure that the American girl has had a bath!

"American girls are the best groomed in the world, but too concerned about getting thin.

"Chic" International Term.

"French 'chic' I found applied to international women and not to the average French woman who wears enough white make-up and bright lipstick to make one sick.

"English women do not wear any make-up and look frightful, and German women can wear no make-up and look beautiful.

"All I could tell about Moorish women was that they were fat and dumpy.

Belgian women Mr. Gann described as "tremendous."

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

EVEN A HEALTHY child who gets enough sleep at night and wakes up happily in the morning is apt to be cross and tearful by the middle of the afternoon simply because he has worn himself out with excessive activity. It is hard to realize how much energy a child uses during the day, but it is worth watching for signs of fatigue, for sufficient rest contributes to health and happiness.

When a 10-year-old boy has been out flying kites or playing baseball all afternoon, he is more tired than he suspects. That's why he flies in a rage at his sister or bursts into tears unbecoming his age on slight provocation. Call him into the house half an hour before dinner is ready, make him spend that time at quiet play, and he will be a more pleasant companion at dinner, better able to do his lessons when the table is cleared.

For a small child, a trip downtown while his mother shops is extremely tiring. Unless he has to go along to have shoes fitted, or for some other equally necessary reason, leave him home. This is difficult in a maidless household, but if you can arrange to have a friend or neighbor take care of him he will be better off than trudging around the shops.

Watch for the signs of fatigue. Your child will be healthier and the family happier if he does not overdo.

Spring Is Near, Skin Problems Come to Fore

Face Should Receive First Attention in Season's Clean-Up.

By Frances Mangum.

YOUR SPRING clean-up should begin with your face. You owe it to yourself to start the season with a fresh, glowing skin—and you can with a very little time and trouble.

If you are bothered with any particular skin problems, you should tell your troubles to a consulting expert who can give you reliable advice and suggest a suitable course of treatments.

If, on the other hand, your skin is fairly normal, but not up to the pink of perfection, call on your fund of practical knowledge and do your own prescribing.

Face Cleansing Comes First.

It stands to reason that the first step in your clean-up should be through face cleansing. Not the type you might give yourself with soap and water, or a good cleansing cream, but a more intensified process which you may obtain at a beauty salon.

You can depend on a mask to affect the subcutaneous conditions, and get at the very root of your troubles. Why not have one? Remember, spring is near and you want a fresh beginning.

After this type of thorough treatment, your skin should be in a condition to lend itself to care at your own hands—providing you have the proper cosmetics. Don't be content with just any kind, and don't believe that using this or that at random will do your skin any good. You should select your cosmetics for their dependability, not because they represent bargains. And you should use them faithfully, for no creams, or lotions will ever do all they should until they are given a fair trial.

Four Necessities.

You'll want to select, first of all, a good cleansing cream, and a refreshing tonic. Next a rich nourishing cream. And then of course it's advisable to have a preparation that will counteract pimples and other such blemishes and protect them from contact with dirt and make-up during the healing process.

If you have a normal skin the mask and these four things should enable you to start the spring with a flower petal skin. Remember, however, if your skin is especially oily, or especially dry, you should consult a specialist.

Increase Noted In Membership By Woodmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 4.—Increase in membership during the past year was announced at the convention of the Maryland and District of Columbia Groves of the Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, which opened at the Fort Cumberland Hotel here today. It was first gathering in four years.

Mrs. Itasca L. Young, of Philadelphia, a national director, is presiding in place of Mrs. Dora A. Talley, of Omaha, Nebr., national president, who is ill. The address of welcome was given by State Senator Robert B. Kimble in behalf of Mayor George W. Legge.

Much of the afternoon was given to a discussion of the Woodman Circle National Home, of Sherman, Tex., where 60 children and 15 elderly persons are supported.

It was announced that one cottage for children there was built by the Pennsylvania membership and another is to be erected by Texas members.

During the banquet tonight, the pence bags from all over the State were opened, the proceeds going toward maintenance of the home. Mrs. Fanny Kolb, Washington, president of the State group, presided at the banquet. Head Consul Stoner S. Dowlan, Woodmen of the World in Maryland, District of Columbia and West Virginia, was an official guest. Ritualistic work was demonstrated.

The memorial service tomorrow, in charge of Mrs. Kolb and Mrs. Rosa L. Canada, of Baltimore, treasurer, will be followed by election and installation of officers.

Among other officers from Washington in attendance are Mrs. Louise Freeland, auditor, and Mrs. Catherine Shugrye, musician.

Court to Hear Suit Argument

Carroll Case Over Failure to Renew Contract of Teacher Up.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., March 4.—Argument in the suit of Mrs. George W. Ehrhart, former music teacher in the Manchester and Hampstead (Carroll County) public schools, against the board of education of Carroll County for alleged loss of salary of $1,350, has been set for Wednesday in the circuit court. The plaintiff contends she was not permitted to teach during 1932-33 because of refusal of Dr. Albert S. Cook, State school superintendent, to renew her contract.

The case was removed to this county and tried before a jury February 4. Twenty-five witnesses were summoned, but only five testified for the plaintiff and eight for the defense. Among those who took the stand were Dr. Cook, Maurice S. Unger, superintendent of schools for Carroll County; Claude Yowell, principal of the Manchester School, and Philip H. Rogers, superintendent of music for Carroll County.

Mrs. Ehrhart, formery Miss Olive E. Ebaugh, was on the stand several hours. Dr. Cook identified a letter he had received from Mrs. Ehrhart's attorney urging that her teacher's certificate be renewed. He said he refused to renew the certificate because the move had not been recommended by Unger.

Unger testified he refused to recommend renewal because the principal of the schools in which Mrs. Ehrhart taught had informed him she lacked "classroom spirit" and efficiency as a disciplinarian.

Text of McCarl's Letter of Warning to Swanson

Comptroller General McCarl's letter to Secretary of the Navy Swanson warning against ignoring the Comptroller General's decisions on the availability of appropriations follows:

Comptroller General of the United States, Washington.
February 27, 1935.

The Honorable,
The Secretary of the Navy.

Sir:

There was received your letter of January 30, 1935, advising that notwithstanding the decisions of this office determining a particular appropriation not legally available for a proposed administrative use, you have directed that "Attorney General's opinions and the decisions of the Court of Claims be hereafter followed"—and that changes in existing naval instructons be made accordingly.

As you apparently contemplate ordering accountable officers under your military control to make payments from public moneys entrusted to them as advances from appropriations, for purposes determined by this office to be not within the law and thus for which the appropriation is not legally available, it is assumed you fully appreciate the seriousness of your proposed action. You are aware, of course, that such accountable officers and their sureties must be held strictly responsible for all payments made and for which credit may not be allowed in their accounts rendered to this office—where under the law all such accounts are finally settled and adjusted. Also, that balances as certified by this office are "final and exclusive on the executive branch of the Government." It is assumed you have considered, also, Section 285, Revised Statutes.

Refers to Responsibility.

Apparently you intend hereafter to be the judge of questions as to the applicability of court decisions to the facts in particular cases as they arise in the Navy, distinguish between conflicting decisions, determine whether existing appropriations are legally available to settle and adjust such cases, and to require payments from appropriated moneys accordingly, but the matter of such determination is not made wholly clear by your letter and it seems possible from statements appearing therein that you may intend empowering the Attorney General to determine such matters for you. Whatever your procedure may be the payments as made will still be, of course, matters of Navy responsibility.

The only statutory provision permitting the Attorney General to express opinion on matters of law arising in the departments of the executive branch is section 356, Revised Statutes, as follows:

"The head of any executive department may require the opinion of the Attorney General on any question of law arising in the administration of his department."

There exists no law giving such opinions determinative effect or providing protection for public officials who adopt such opinions in the discharge of their public duties. They are merely advisory and necessarily so else an Attorney General could become effectively dominant in the affairs of all departments. The danger seems to be understood because the tendency in the departments is to adopt and utilize only such opinions, at least in connection with matters before this office for decision, as they believe will argue to their advantage in their effort to securing a liberal interpretation of the law with respect to uses of a particular appropriation. As was stated by Attorney General Black in 9 Op. Atty. Gen. 36:

"* * * The duty of the Attorney General is to advise, not to decide. A thing is not to be considered as done by the head of a department merely because the Attorney General has advised him to do it. You may disregard his opinion if you are sure it is wrong. He aids you in forming a judgment on questions of law; but still the judgment is yours, not his. You are not bound to see with his eyes, but only to use the ligh. which he furnishes, in order to see the better with your own."

Cites Court of Claims.

Inasmuch as opinions of the Attorney General are by force of statute advisory only and thus have no finality and bind no one—not even the Attorney General—I assume what you really have in mind are those instances where the Court of Claims has considered it proper to render a judgment adverse to the Government in a case before it, for reporting to the Congress for its consideration, and this office has found itself unable, in the circumstances appearing, to accede to Navy demands to so adopt the view that seemed to have influenced the court in the matter as to justify it (this office) in opening up an existing appropriation for payment of all demands considered similar in nature to that in the particular case before the court, without further expression or direction by the Congress in the matter. Judgments rendered by the Court of Claims—all courts in fact—the views of the Attorney General and other eminent lawyers, and the views and arguments of the department or establishment concerned, are all given most serious consideration by this office in connection with questions before it for decision involving the legal availability of an appropriation for a use as made or a proposed use, but it is to be remembered that the responsibility of this office in such matters involves an actual use of an existing appropriation, not a matter for reporting for the further consideration of the Congress, or for disposition by opinion with no actual responsibility attached. The responsibility of this office in such matters has to do with actual money—public money appropriated by the Congress and thereby given a status for actual use in making payments—but legally available for none but the particular uses for which so appropriated. Questions constantly arise, and necessarily so, as to the legal availability of a particular appropriation for a contemplated use and such questions must be authoritatively decided, else there would be confusion. Desirable administrative action might be withheld due to doubt as to the legal advisability of an appropriation for such use, or an appropriation made for a particular use might be unduly depleted or even exhausted in other, and thus unlawful, use thereof if there existed no agency with authority and responsibility to so authoritatively determine such questions and to give effect to its decisions.

Warns of Use of Power.

If such questions were left for decision by each particular spending agency as to appropriations made for its lawful uses there would be ever present the element of self-interest and the ambition always in evidence to go beyond or to otherwise circumvent or overcome the limits considered proper and fixed accordingly by the Congress in the law. And if the Congress had no other assurance than would be offered by such procedure, that its laws with respect to the uses of appropriations would be faithfully abided, it could safely employ no such convenient system of making public moneys available for uses as now exists. It would be necessary for it to find some other effective means of exacting law observance by public officers in their uses of appropriations—or possibly to sharply curtail appropriations and the period of their availability for use.

Or, if such questions were left for determination by any agency in the executive branch—the spending branch—the difficulty would be, at best, but one degree removed from such self-determination, and there would be return to the evils sought to be cured by the establishment of the General Accounting Office, an agency independent of the executive branch and thus freed from the influence of its partisan political problems, the controversies and combinations frequently found therein, and the ambitions that sometimes beset its higher officials, with authority and responsibility to decide such questions with finality. The accounting officers of the Government were in the executive branch prior to 1921, and it was to totally remove the accounting system from such influences that the General Accounting Office was established by the act of June 10, 1921, and for this office to accept as conclusive upon it in deciding questions respecting the legal availability of appropriations for proposed uses or uses made, opinions of the Attorney General or any other official in the executive branch, would be to undo all that the Congress did in separating the accounting officers from the influence and domination of the executive branch and to accept such official as the head of the accounting system, and this notwithstanding the specific provisions of the budget and accounting act of 1921, that the General Accounting Office "shall be independent of the executive departments and under the control and direction of the Comptroller General of the United States," and that the duties of the General Accounting Office shall be exercised "without direction from any other officer." Also, "the balances certified by the Comptroller General shall be final and conclusive upon the executive branch of the Government."

Refuses to "Shirk Duty."

While the law does not permit of any such shirking of duty by the head of this office as you appear to suggest—and as seems suggested also by the Attorney General in his letter to you—even if the law were otherwise these would seem matters worthy of most serious consideration before turning control of the accounting system over to the Attorney General. His department, during recent years, has become one of the large spending agencies in the executive branch and in this regard appears to be growing by leaps and bounds. If he were, in addition to being the Government's chief advocate before the courts and the President's legal adviser in administrative matters, also in control of the accounting system, there would be no independent audit of the uses of the large appropriations over which he is permitted administrative control; it would not only throw the accounting system back into the turmoil of the executive branch and subject to its influences and domination, but would by reason of such added authority with respect to the uses of appropriations, operate to elevate a subordinate Cabinet officer to a place of "high command" in the executive family; it would take from the Congress the security it has felt in making appropriations conveniently available for lawful use on the theory an independent auditing system could and would exact law observance in the uses thereof; and it would head the system by a political official with office of uncertain tenure, whereas a very definite purpose of the budget and accounting act of 1921 was to remove the accounting system from partisan political consideration and influences.

If in deciding questions involving the legal availability of an appropriation for a proposed use this office should become too liberal and permit uses of an appropriation beyond the intent of the Congress in making the moneys available the damage would likely be immediate and irreparable; and thus, when the interested department or establishment believes this office has through its decisions unduly restricted the use of an appropriation (and such decisions are always in writing and state the reason for the conclusion reached) the proper and orderly procedure, and the only procedure showing a proper degree of respect for the authority of the Congress, is to apply to the Congress for clarification of the law. If the Congress wishes done what the department or establishment desires to do, it is no difficult matter for it to so express its will—and thereby the matter is settled.

Decisions of Courts Studied.

As hereinbefore stated, decisions of the courts are always examined and considered by this office in connection with questions pending here for decision, and even though the courts have not been granted authority to actually withdraw moneys from the Treasury, and their questions involving liability of the Government usually grow from maladministration and thus are infrequently identical with those for decision here, yet the legal principles as applied by the courts to their questions are always helpful and frequently aid greatly in solving our problems. Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, where applicable to our questions, resolve all doubts. Our trouble has been in getting our problems submitted to that court. While the Court of Claims does not have the responsibility that rests upon this office of determining the legal availability of an existing appropriation for the proposed use, its judgments being for report to the Congress where an appropriation usually follows for payment, but not necessarily so, occasionally it has a problem so similar to questions for decision by this office arising under expendable appropriations that its action thereon is most helpful to this office. This is especially true where the problem has been fully and faithfully presented and the court is thus given opportunity to consider all phases of the matter and apply thereto legal principles accordingly. It is not always, however, that cases are so presented as to give the court such opportunity. Under the rules of pleading and procedure, and in the matter of proof and briefs, much is dependent upon the manner and substance of the presentation on behalf of the Government, and in the study of actions by the court urged here as having a bearing on questions for decision by this office—and sometimes suggested as controlling, as apparently is now urged by you—it has been found the court was not so fully and faithfully informed and that, as a matter of fact, there was not presented to the court for consideration in connection with its problem certain material matters actually involved in the question for decision by this office and with respect to which the court's action is cited. A further difficulty in connection with cases in which the court has not been given full assistance through such presentation is that of inducing the Department of Justice to prosecute an attempt for rehearing or review by the Supreme Court—and that department is especially handicapped in making a full presentation of the Government's side of cases, not only in the Court of Claims but upon review, where it has pro-judged the matters and issued and published an opinion adverse to the Government.

Goes Into Basic Case.

Take, for instance, the basic case relied upon by you in the present matter and which you apparently contend is controlling upon the uses of an expendable appropriation, Bullard v. United States, 66 Ct. Cls. 264. In that case the then Attorney General had prejudged the issue and published his views adverse to the Government. It was presented to the Court of Claims practically as confessed and the record was such there seemed doubt whether the merits could be properly placed before a reviewing tribunal. In subsequent cases a strenuous effort was made by this office to induce the Department of Justice to fully present to the Court of Claims the whole case, and it was urged that if a reversal of the view taken in the Bullard case could not be secured that a record be made on which a review of the merits could be secured. These efforts were not successful and the Bullard case has been permitted to stand although the matters actually involved have never been fairly submitted to the Court.

Now, what was involved in the Bullard case? Simply this—whether, when an officer of the Navy is detached from duty and ordered to his home to await further orders for retirement there is involved a "permanent change of station" so as to entitle such officer to the benefits provided for by section 12 of the act of May 18, 1920, 41 Stat. 604, as supplemented by the act of June 10, 1922, 42 Stat. 631. The statutes, so far as material, are as follows:

Section 12 of the act of May 18, 1920, 41 Stat. 604, provides:

"That hereafter when any commissioned officer, noncommissioned officer of the grade of color sergeant and above, including any noncomissioned officer of the Marine Corps of corresponding grade, warrant officer, chief petty officer, or petty officer (first class), having a wife or dependent child or children, is ordered to make a permanent change of station, the United States shall furnish transportation in kind from funds appropriated for the transportation of the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Public Health Service to his new station for the wife and dependent child or children: Provided, that for persons in the naval service the term 'permanent station,' as used in this section, shall be interpreted to mean a shore station or the home yard of the vessel to which the person concerned may be ordered, and a duly authorized change in home yard or home port of such vessel shall be deemed a change of station: Provided further, That if the cost of such transportation exceeds that for transportation from the old to the new station the excess cost shall be paid to the United States by the officer concerned: Provided further, That transporation supplied the wife or dependent child or children of such officer, to or from stations beyond the continental limits of the United States, shall not be other than by Government transport, if such transportation is available: And provided further, That the personnel of the Navy shall have the benefit of all existing laws applying to the Army and the Marine Corps for the transportation of household effects."

The act of June 10, 1922, 42 Stat. 631, provides:

"In lieu of the transportation in kind authorized by section 12 of an act entitled 'An act to increase the efficiency of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service,' approved May 18, 1920, to be furnished by the United States for dependents, the President may authorize the payment in money of amounts equal to such commercial transportation costs when such travel shall have been completed. Dependent children shall be such as are defined in section 4 of this act."

Question of the Law Up.

It is to be noted that for persons in the Navy the term "permanent station," as used in the law, is required to be interpreted to mean "* * * a shore station or the home yard of the vessel to which the person concerned may be ordered * * *" Bullard was ordered to no naval station, but rather to his home for retirement—and the question was whether under the law there was authorized payment of the transportation expenses of his wife to their home. It was not a question of whether the Government should, in all fairness, pay the expenses of the officer's wife in traveling to their home, but whether the law authorized payment of such expenses. To make such a payment lawful would require determination that the officer in being relieved from duty and ordered to his home, to there await further orders for retirement, was required thereby to make a permanent change of station within the meaning of the law supra, and thus, whether in changing, pursuant to orders, from his naval station to his home, after relief from official duty, his home was a "station" within the meaning of the law and so as to constitute the movement a change from one naval station to another. When the claim of Bullard for the expenses of his wife in traveling to their home was presented to this office for payment from appropriated moneys it was disallowed on the ground that the home of the officer and his wife was not a naval station, and that the officer's change from his naval station, after being relieved from duty, to his home, was not a "permanent change of station" within the provisions of the law so as to render lawful payment of the expenses of his wife in traveling to their home. It happened that the Supreme Court of the United States had had for consideration a similar question and in United States vs. Phisterer, 94 U. S. 219, had determined that (quoting from the syllabus):

"The home of an officer to which he is ordered is not a military station. A military 'station' is merely synonymous with military 'post.' In each case, it means not an ordinary residence, having nothing military about it, except that one of its occupants holds a military commission, but a place where military duty is performed, or stores are kept or distributed, or something connected with war or arms is kept or done."

Turns to Another Case.

Bullard brought suit in the Court of Claims seeking a judgment for the travel expenses of his wife to their home and the case was presented as hereinbefore mentioned and resulted in a judgment against the Government. But in such connection apparently the Phisterer case was overlooked. Had it been brought to the Court's attention undoubtedly the reasoning and conclusion of the Supreme Court of the United States would have been followed regardless of what the equities in Bullard's favor might have seemed.

In matter of intrusting the Government's defense in such cases as the Bullard case to the Executive branch may be one of the weaknesses still remaining in the system designed to enable the Legislative branch to maintain through its enactments and by exacting observance thereof by public officials, the effective control over governmental activities and resulting drains on the public moneys, essential to our form of government and as contemplated by the Constitution.

It is such things that sometimes render judgments given by the Court of Claims of little assistance in the solving of questions for decision by this office and relating not to matters still to be considered by the Congress but to actual use of an existing appropriation, and in view of its responsibility to check unlawful uses of appropriations this office must, of course, determine for itself when decisions of inferior courts are safe as guides in determining similar questions coming before this office for decision.

It was nearly ten years ago that the Navy Department started its effort to secure such interpretation of the law, supra, as to permit payment of transportation expenses of dependents to their homes when officers were detached from duty and ordered home to await retirement orders. During all of that time the law has remained unchanged. In view of the fact that the accounting officers were unable to adopt such view with respect to uses of appropriated money, and that the Supreme Court of the United States had negatived such view in similar circumstances, it is beyond understanding why, if the Navy Department believes such travel expenses should be paid by the Government, and feels the Congress can be so convinced, the matter was not promptly submitted to the Congress by the department with a view to securing such amendment of the law as would clearly legalize such payments.

Refuses to Grant Claims.

The purposes for which appropriated moneys may be used are for stipulating by the Congress and not by the courts. The Congress is in session each year and usually a substantial portion of each year, and it is far more accesible to the Navy Department than are the courts. If any effort has been made by the department during the last ten or twelve years to induce the Congress to amend the law so as to legalize such payments the effort must have failed to convince because, as stated above, the law has remained unchanged since the amendment of June 10, 1922, and the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Phisterer case reflected the law on the subject when there were enacted the statutes here involved and it is thus to be assumed the statutes were phrased in the light of such decision.

The fact that similar payments may have been passed in the accounts is not, of course, controlling with respect to the future, and in view of your announced conclusion to ignore the decisions of this office with respect to the legel availability of existing appropriations for such payments and to require such payments by accountable officers under your military control, you are advised that there is ended the effort this office has made to assist your department in its seeming difficulties, by reaching those cases where the officer's last station was abroad, and that hereafter and while the law, supra, remains unchanged, appropriations will not be available for payment of travel expenses of dependents of officers of the Navy to their homes when such officers are ordered home to await orders for retirement. All such payments hereafter made will be disallowed in the accounts.

In response to your letter of January 30, 1935, you are advised accordingly.

Respectfully,

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Richmond, Va., March 4.—Virginia's taxpayer—that average Virginian who last November looked out of a window in the State office building and wondered just what went on in Capitol Square stood again in the doorway of the office building.

Above him towered the 12 stories of the structure he had explored in seeking an answer to the questions: What do these State employes, paid out of my tax money, do? How is it accomplished? And what does it mean?

He had visited the State tax commissioner, C. H. Morrisett, and been told that the State collected an average annual income of more than $30,000,000 and that, including institutional revenues, Federal grants and donations and other revenues, it is spending nearly $45,000,000 a year.

Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley had told him about the State's highway program which costs more than $19,000,000 a year, and of the program for the future which will require at least $400,000,000 to carry out.

Public Education System.

Important changes in the State's system of public education, including a drastically revised curriculum, had been outlined to him by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction.

G. W. Koiner, commissioner of agriculture, had traced the growth of his department from a mere seed bureau to an organization carrying on widespread and varied activities.

The members of the State corporation commission had outlined their legislative, judicial and administrative functions in controlling corporate business of the State, particularly that part of business charged with public interest.

Welfare Activities.

From Arthur W. James, commissioner of public welfare, he had received an account of the welfare activities being carried on in the State and an outline of the steps the department thinks should be taken to perform its assigned task more completely.

The manner in which public health service is being extended to an increasingly large portion of the Virginia population was told by Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner.

John Hopkins Hall, commissioner of labor and industry, had told how his department strives to find citizens jobs, make them secure and keep them satisfied in their work and the State industrial commission had furnished information as to its work in enforcing the workmen's compensation laws.

Military Affairs Bureau.

Back on the first floor of the building, Adjt. Gen. S. Gardner Waller had explained the function of the department of military affairs, which is the Governor's agency for enforcing laws in emergencies, preserving the peace or giving aid in crises.

All this, however, Mr. Taxpayer now realized, was only a part of the work of his State's government at Richmond.

Just ahead of him stood the State Library Building, which also houses the legal department, the State Supreme Court and the department of game and inland fisheries.

Up on the hill was the Capitol Building, with the offices of the Governor, the budget director and others. Outside the square were the quarters of the division of motor vehicles, the alcoholic beverage control board, the State auditor and the conservation and development commission.

Some one else would have to ask about these.

Mr. Taxpayer's self-appointed task was done.

McCarl Sends Curt Warning To Navy Head

Swanson 'Will Be Held to Account' on Rulings of the Comptroller.

had negatived such view in similar circumstances, it is beyond understanding why, if the Navy Department believes such travel expenses should be paid by the Government, and feels the Congress can be so convinced, the matter was not promptly submitted to the Congress by the department with a view to securing such amendment of the law as would clearly legalize such payments."

McCarl, an appointee of the late President Harding and whose 15-year term of office expires in 1938, reserved a fair share of his criticism for Attorney General Cummings.

"While the law does not permit of any such shirking of duty by the head of this office as you appear to suggest—and as seems suggested also by the Attorney General in his letter to you—even if the law were otherwise these would seem matters worthy of most serious consideration before turning control of the accounting system over to the Attorney General," he wrote.

The Department of Justice itself is "growing by leaps and bounds" as a spending agency, McCarl said, and if the Attorney General is to take control of the Government's accounting system such a step would "operate to elevate a subordinate Cabinet officer to a place of 'high command' in the Executive family."

An Attorney General's duties are purely of an advisory nature, said McCarl, pointing out that while executive heads may ask his opinion on questions of law, such opinions have no legal effect in themselves.

Presuming he had made this point clear to the Secretary of the Navy, McCarl went on to say:

"I assume what you really have in mind are those instances where the Court of Claims has considered it proper to render a judgment adverse to the Government in a case before it, for reporting to the Congress for its consideration, and this office has found itself unable in the circumstances appearing to accede to Navy demands to so adopt the view that seemed to have influenced the court in the matter as to justify it (this office) in opening up an existing appropriation for payment of all demands considered similar in nature to that in the particular case before the court without further expression or direction by the Congress in the matter."

Opinions of all courts and of the Attorney General are considered by the General Accounting Office before passing judgment on questions involving the legal availability of appropriations, McCarl said, but the final responsibility rests with this office.

End of Deficit Seen by Peery

Governor Believes Burden of $2,000,000 Will Be Lifted by 1936.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 4.—Gov. Peery today said he is confident the State's $2,000,000 deficit now burdening the budget will be lifted by the time the 1936 General Assembly meets, but meanwhile he saw no possibility that the 5 per cent expense cut under which the State is operating will be restored by the end of the fiscal year.

He said the public revenues still are suffering from the depression and that only in ABC board operations and a few other items of revenue have the State's receipts been above estimates.

J. H. Bradford, director of the budget, said the State is "just about holding its own," but added that he, too, believes the deficit will be discharged by the end of the second year of the current biennium.

The budget director said appropriations during the second year are smaller and there is reason to believe that revenue will be greater.

$2 Bill Hoarded 72 Years Proves To Be Counterfeit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., March 4.—A Baltimorean who had hoarded a $2 bill for 72 years was disappointed today when he decided to spend it and discovered it to be counterfeit.

According to Secret Service Agent Bartholomew Brattan, the spurious bill, which had been deposited in a trust company, was detected when presented for redemption at the Federal Reserve Bank.

The note shows a profile of Alexander Hamilton. It is of the series of 1862 and is numbered 41,608. Apparently it had not been in active circulation.

The name of the owner was not given pending an investigation.

National Theater Players Will Open "Little Season" Easter Monday, April 22

Road Offerings Of Merit Still Due in Capital

Big Musical Revue on Way; Prices for 'L'Aiglon;' News of Theaters.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The indecision which heretofore has characterized the attitude of Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National Theater, with regard to the 1935 spring and early summer season of the National Theater Players, has been dispelled.

In a long-distance call from New York, Panjandrum Cochran informs this column that the tenth—or is it the eleventh?—"little season" of the popular stock company which he organized a decade ago, and has presented with eminent artistic success—if not always financial—ever since, will inaugurate its season this year on Easter Monday, April 22.

While the personnel of the acting company has not as yet been decided upon, and, therefore, can not at this time be made known, it is a foregone conclusion that it will compare favorably with any, or all, of its predecessors—the equivalent of a statement that it will be the best in the United States, all things considered.

In the meantime, despite the fact that the National will be bereft of traveling road attractions until the advent of Miss Eva Le Gallienne and her excellent supporting company in Clemence Dane's revised version of Rostand's "L'Aiglon" ("The Eaglet") on the eighteenth of the current month, there is still much to look forward to before the regular 1934-35 season shall have run its course and rung down its final curtain.

Some Future Treats.

For instance, following Miss Le Gallienne, on March 25, will come "Life Begins at 8:40," the hit musical revue which closes its engagement of 237 performances—30 weeks—at the Winter Garden, in New York, on Saturday night, March 16, and begins its road tour at the Nixon Theater in Pittsburgh the following Monday.

Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Luella Gear and Frances Williams will remain in their original parts on the road tour, as will also the dancers and show girls, numbering a total company strength of 107 performers.

There is also a strong likelihood that following the Washington engagement of Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon, "Skeets" Gallagher and Kathryn Givney in "Hollywood Holiday," George M. Cohan will return for a week's engagement at the National in the Theater Guild's production of Euguene O'Neill's comedy of adolescence, "Ah, Wilderness," one of the most successful offerings of the early weeks of the season.

The final play of the Theater Guild's Washington subscription season will be "Rain from Heaven," by S. N. Behrman, in which Jane Cowl is the star, supported by that admirable actor, John Halliday.

So what? So the theater is dead!

From a source close to her executive councils, it is definitely learned that, previous erroneous announcements to the contrary notwithstanding, Miss Eva Le Gallienne will not present "L'Aiglon" in the National Capital at a $2.20 scale of prices for night performances.

While this scale usually prevails during her engagements at her own Civic Repertory Theater in New York, the scale during her engagement at the National Theater the week of March 18 will range from 55 cents to $2.75 at night performances and from 55 cents to $2.20 for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees. This, of course, represents actual admission charges of 50 cents to $2.50 and $2, respectively, plus the Government tax of 10 per cent.

This announcement is made for the benefit of those who may wish to inclose remittances with mail orders for seats for the Le Gallienne engagement—orchestra chairs for night performances, $2.75; matinees, $2.20. So now you know.

March's Breezy Bookings.

The boisterous winds of March will blow a dazzling array of motion picture productions, onto the screens of Loew's Washington theaters, according to Carter Barron, divisional manager, who perceives in the month's line-up one of the greatest selections of attractions his chain ever has offered local cinemaddicts.

Loew's Fox Theater, he avers, will step off on the right foot next Friday by presenting Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery in "Vanessa: Her Love Story," in which Otto Kruger, Lewis S. Stone and May Robson also are importantly cast. On the stage will be seen the "Casino de Paree Revue," with Milton Berle, Chilton and Thomas, those extraordinary dancers who date back to "Wonder Bar;" Cardini and 32 Broadway show girls.

Next in line will be Shirley Temple and Lionel Barrymore, costarred in "The Little Colonel," the picture that introduces Bill Robinson, greatest of the tap dancers, to the talking screen.

Others Available.

Among other outstanding pictures, which the Fox has under consideration for the current drafty month, are included the new edition of George White's "Scandals," with Alice Faye, James Dunn, Lyda Roberti, Cli: Edwards and Stuart Erwin; "Folies Bergere," with Maurice Chevalier, Ann Sothern and Merle Oberon, and "Mark of the Vampire," with Lionel Barrymore and Bela Lugosi.

Following "Clive of India" on the Palace screen will be Claudette Colbert, winner of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' 1934 award for the best acting of the year, in "The Gilded Lily," which will introduce Fred McMurray, recently seen with May Robson in "Grand Old Girl," in his most important assignment to date. Other pictures awaiting play dates at the corner of Thirteenth and F are "West Point of the Air," starring Wallace Beery; Jean Harlow, William Powell and Franchot Tone in "Reckless;" Gary Cooper and Anna Sten in "Wedding Night," and Will Rogers in "Life Begins at 40."

Columbia Also in Running.

Coming along to Loew's Columbia before the month has gone out like a lion—this forecast is based on its having come in like a lamb and is not guaranteed—will be Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson's "Baboona," Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen in "Under Pressure," and Douglas Fairbanks, sr., in "The Return of Don Juan," which, it seems to me, originally was called "The Private Life of Don Juan"—or was that another one?

Anyhow, all that adds up to quite a mess of footage, if you have your tapeline handy.

The Dorsey brothers, whose orchestra is headlining the vaudeville bill now prevalent at the Earle Theater, last visited Washington some 10 years ago, when Tom slid his trombone and Jimmy twittered the sax and clarionet with the California Ramblers at the Rialto Theater, now sitting in solemn silence over Ninth street way.

The boys brought their present excellent organization into the Earle following a week and a half of one-night stands. Included in this time were college proms at V. M. I. and Villa Nova. Prior to that, they had played a three-month season at the Palais Royal, Broadway at Fortieth, and before that Ben Marden's Riviera in New York.

One of the Three Dancing Queens, featured with the Dorsey Orchestra, will be subjected to no slight by the house management during her week at the Earle. This particular queen bears the name of Peggy Little, is a native Washingtonian and calls Harry Lohmeyer, manager of the Earle, "Uncle Harry." Well, Uncle Harry, you have a clever niece, I'll say that for you!

Lowdown on Topliner.

Before the Great War and the Red Revolution, Russia danced, sang and laughed with the rest of Europe. Circuses, animal shows and roving carnival troupes kept the kopecs of the peasants and the rubles of the nobility in circulation.

Little Dave Apollon was the son of a philosopher. Philosophy in the old Russia of the Czars paid very little, so the 6-year-old Master David was hired out as a dancer to a circus. Dave remembers that he followed an elephant on the bill—followed Jumbo every half-hour for approximately 25 shows a day, to be exact about it. Then, probably to fill up his spare time, the management made him official errand boy for the entire outfit.

A Swell Contract.

He had a 5-year contract that called for a first year without pay, a second for $10 a month and a rising salary scale each year of the remaining three. Just as Dave was beginning to count his chicken feed before it was hatched in the third year, the boss man up and fired him to cut down expenses!

At that time Dave was looking longingly at the piano and slowly being consumed by a desire to learn it. It did little good, however, for, in the first place, he had no money; in the second place, if he had had he couldn't have afforded the lessons, and in the third place, there wasn't a door in the Apollon abode a piano would go through in the first place!

So he bought himself a mandolin—or maybe it was a balalaika—price $2.75.

Biographical Dots and Data.

Dave Apollon was born in Kiev, South Russia . . . Played his first solo, a selection from "Carmen," at the Buff Theater in Rostow . . . Trouped with the same company with which he made this debut for four years . . . Then a single act until the war . . . Had "fixed" his birth certificate to add two years to his age, thus hustling himself into the army at 16 instead of 18 . . . The Revolution and a 33-day rail trip through Siberia to Harbin, Manchuria . . . After that, China, Japan, the Philippines and, finally, San Francisco . . . Went directly to New York . . . First stage appearance in this country with Russian Balalaika Orchestra at Carnegie Hall . . . Unusual, tremendous hit . . . Joined Ford Sisters in a vaudeville act and two weeks later played the old B. F. Keith Theater here before President Wilson . . . So excited he practiced all day . . . Rewarded when Manager Roland Robbins came backstage and brought favorable comment from President . . . After a year, produced own act with two girls and another man . . . Keith's and the President again . . . Same result . . . Run of 18 weeks in London . . . Feature picture with British Lion Co., "In Town Tonight" . . . Back to U. S. . . . Vitaphone short subjects . . . Vallee's radio program . . . Champion of clean entertainment, never an adverse comment on one of his acts . . . Present company on stage at Loew's Fox numbers 42 . . . A local admirer sends candy and flowers every time he appears here . . . And has for the past 11 years . . . And if you knocked the last letter off his name he still wouldn't be an Apollo!

The Fox Movietone News—and one suspects that the crafty and clever Arthur A. DeTitta has a finger, or maybe a whole hand, in this somewhere—is producing a ten-minute, satirical newsreel of the President, the Cabinet and other high Government officials to be presented as a special feature of the program at the thirteenth annual banquet of the White House Correspondents Association, to be held in the Willard Hotel Saturday, March 23. It is expected that the President, the Cabinet, members of the Diplomatic Corps, ranking officials of the Federal establishment and more than 500 newspaper men and their guests will be in attendance.

Great Caesar's Ghost Note.

Everything taken into consideration, this seems to be a March of events. Let me see now, just when and where is it the Ides 'ide?

A Gorgeous German Goes Gaudy!

Capricious, and caparisoned in all her war paint for a gay evening in romantic Andalusia, is Marlene Dietrich, less severely attired than at any other time in her screen career. The star, resplendent in a costume of black silk lace and costly hosiery, as you can plainly see, plays a sirenic Carmen in her next, and last, Josef von Sternberg production, "The Devil Is a Woman." This, it will be recalled, originally was known as "Caprice Espagnol." It will come along to a local screen in due course.

Gayety

"BREVITIES," Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 25 scenes, with Bobby Vail, Eddie Lloyd, George Murray, Bert Saunders, Art Gilson, John DeArco, the Carroll Sisters, Joan Dare, Dorothy DeHaven, Marian La Marr, Nora Ford and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Flaig; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Headline honors in the current attraction of the Independent Burlesque Association, "Brevities," is, by popular acclaim, divided, like Gaul of old, into three parts. One of these is the Carroll Sisters, whose blonde allurements constitute one of Col. Jimmy Lake's best attractions; the second, Nora Ford, a dynamic bundle of ebullient personality, and the third, perhaps the most spontaneously received, the reunited team of Eddie Lloyd and George Murray.

Of the Carroll Sisters—Jean and Joan—little need be said, for, once seen, their double specialties, which, by the way, have very few successful imitators, can not be entirely forgotten. They work with expert unity and precision, putting over a turn which in itself is worth the price of admission.

Nora Ford is another of the charmers who is no novice in the game and not only knows her way around the stage, the wings and the curtains, but also can sell herself to thunderous applause.

Although it is quite apparent that Eddie Lloyd and George Murray are masters of comedy even when playing alone, the team of Lloyd and Murray far excels the individual efforts of these buffoons working separately. The team has only one song-and-dance specialty, but that one is almost equal to all the other comedy scenes combined.

The others of the compatny include Comic Bobby Vail, Bert Saunders and Art Gilson, straight men; Tenor John DeArco, Joan Dare, specialty dancer; Ballerina Marian LaMarr and Dorothy DeHaven, soubrette, all of whom add to the punch of a real show.

The Dancing Bryanettes and the colorful staging of Jimmy Lake both are up to usual standard.

Best Drama of The War Acted By Harlequins

Catholic University Group Offer Worthy Production of Sherriff's Play.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

"JOURNEY'S END." The Harlequins of the Catholic University of America present the drama in three acts and six scenes by R. C. Sherriff, under the direction of the Rev. Walter Plimmer, with Clifford J. Dvorak as stage manager. In the Music Building Auditorium, C. U. of A. Reviewed Sunday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Stanhope	John H. McDonald
Osborne	James N. Christianson
Trotter	A. McKay Ellerby
Hibbert	Paul H. Heltzel
Raleigh	William J. Kenny
Colonel	Joseph A. Spitzig
Sergeant-Major	William J. Tobin, jr.
Mason	Francis J. Grant
Hardy	Maurice F. McDonnell
German Officer	Thomas K. Hannan
Private Soldiers	Herbert L. Brogan, Winfield C. Kremmers, Robert A. Mukofske.

Once more amateur thespians essay the difficult task of interpreting R. C. Sherriff's "Journey's End," and once again this magnificent drama serves the admirable double purpose of giving a satisfying evening in the theater and bringing out the best in nonprofessional actors.

Thus it was last evening at Catholic University. Reading the lines faultlessly, the Harlequins gave an excellent interpretation of that awful, still expectancy antecedent to the "big push."

John H. McDonald, in the principal role of Capt. Denis Stanhope, truly delineated the man who lived on his whisky-bolstered nerves, while William J. Kenny played the youthful Lieut. Raleigh with earnest sincerity.

Osborne Made Real.

The fatherly Lieut. Osborne was played by James N. Christianson, who gave the part a more convincing reading than his none-too-old make-up would seem to make possible. The other members of the company were no less competent.

Ordinarily a slowly paced drama, to accentuate the nerve-wracking quietude, the Rev. Walter Plimmer, in his direction of the work, leaned perhaps a trifle too heavily on this quality of deliberateness, but otherwise manipulated his players efficiently and drew from those lineless moments no less drama than the players obtained with words as well as motion.

"Journey's End" will be repeated this evening.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo in National Theater Sunday afternoon and evening. Matinee program: "Scuola di Ballo" (music by Boccherini), "Le Mariage d'Aurore" (music by Chaikovski), Polovtsian dances from "Knaz Igor" (Borodin). Evening program: "La Boutique Fantasque" (music by Rossini), "Le Tricorne" (music by De Falla), "Les Presages" (music by Chaikovski).

Repeating only one of the offerings presented on the first visit here this season, the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe again put forth its justifiable claim for consideration as the only successor thus far to the Diaghilev troupe. No one has yet replaced Sergei Diaghilev with his lavishness in costumes and decors, but the choreographic traditions are being carried on in a manner to delight all connoisseurs of the dance.

The "Scuola di Ballo," witnessed for the second time, revealed more definitely its characteristics as a successful revival of the Commedia del'Arte. In pantomime and impersonations, the company kept the humor just on the right side of buffoonery, and the atmosphere of the period was excellently maintained. To the latter illusion the selections from Boccherini's music, adroitly joined by Francaix, contributed no small part.

For "Aurora's Marriage," parts of Chaikovski's ballet of "The Sleeping Beauty' were utilized, with two numbers from "The Nut-Cracker" ballet interpolated. This proved to be an enjoyable view of the formal ballet as it flourished at the close of the Tsarist regime. Courtliness of the polonaise and mazurka alternated with the fantasy of fairy tales. The peak of dancing by the principals was attained in the admirable work of David Lichin and Tatyana Ryabushinska in "The Blue Bird" episode.

The dances from Borodin's opera, long familiar on concert programs, took on their true barbaric quality when visualized. Yurek Shabelevski, as a Polovtsian warrior, set the note of Tartar cruelty in his fine impersonation.

The best of the three evening ballets was "El Sombrero de Tres Picos," programmed under the French title for some odd reason. Leonid Massin and Tamara Tumanova, in the roles of the miller and his wife, entered into the spirit of Manuel de Falla's music with a zest and skill that were captivating.

"La Boutique Fantasque," which opened the program, disclosed the well-known story of the toy shop with unusual consistensy of plot, thanks to Massin's choreography. Alexandra Danilova and Mr. Massin were the center of one's interest, so expert was their revivification of the once notorious can-can dance.

"Les Presages," danced by the company against a futuristic backdrop reminiscent of Kandinski's paintings, was an attempt at the interpretation of Chaikovoski's fifth symphony. It failed of its purpose, as all such endeavors inevitably do. Absolute music, however surcharged with emotional urgency, can not be transformed into terms of physical movement.

One's understanding of this symphony is not aided in the least by seeing before one's eyes embodiments of Action, Temptation, Passion, Fate and a group of Destinies going through the routine of rhythmic movements and posturings. The abstract will not undergo a transformation into material terms, and all trials to produce such a mutation result in disillusionment.

4 Probers Report Liquor Smuggling

Estimate 1,000 Gallons Brought Here Daily.

With four investigators from the alcohol tax unit giving the special grand jury evidence they uncovered, showing the machinations of a group of 34 alleged rum-ring conspirators, the Government yesterday moved a step nearer to checking the flow of illicit liquor into Washington.

The four men, Karl O. Speiss, Francis J. Sweeney, C. A. Hood and W. P. Lance, are reported as having estimated that the gang was smuggling into Washington approximately 1,000 gallons of illegal corn, rye and alcohol daily. They are said to have discovered that the gang was running liquor into the District from points in nearby Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey.

Following the appearance of the investigators, Henry A. Schweinhaut, assistant United States attorney in charge of the case, plans to present telegraph and bank representatives from New Jersey. They will testify, Mr. Schweinhaut said, about payments made to members of the ring in New Jersey.

What lies beneath the terrible crisis between the Catholic Church and the State in Mexico . . . a crisis that forebodes widespread religious war in the near future? Is Christianity to be crucified in a nation where 90 per cent of the inhabitants is Catholic and the remaining 10 per cent—the ruling class—is not?

According to Frederick Vincent Williams, who visited Mexico for the express purpose of bringing back a precise report of conditions there, the situation is appalling. There have been killings—5,000 of them since the truce between Calles and the church in 1929. Hundreds of priests, driven from their churches, are facing starvation. In some schools, children are taught to recite "There is no God . . . there never was any God . . . there never will be any God . . . ." Bishops, banished from their diocese, suffer tremendous hardships. Nuns are forced into hiding. Churches, rectories and seminaries are closed and confiscated.

Beginning this Friday, The Post will present a series of articles by Mr. Williams, presenting a Catholic viewpoint of the religious revolution in Mexico. Mr. Williams, a director of the Catholic Laymen's Retreat Association in California and its former secretary, is also the faithful navigator (president) of Serra General Assembly of the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, and a director of public relations for various prelates and religious orders. In Mexico he bore letters from Catholic leaders in the United States to prelates and priests who were in hiding.

Maryland to Place Bond Issue Ahead Of Relief Funding

Nice to Give $8,500,000 Program on Finance Right of Way.

March 15 Deadline For Action on Aid

No Word That U. S. Set $8,000,000 as State's Yearly Share.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 4.—Although the necessity of raising relief funds was the most pressing problem as the Legislature assembled tonight for the tenth week, Gov. Harry W. Nice and legislative leaders have decided to give the pending $8,500,000 bond issue the right of way before taking up relief revenue raising measures.

Despite reports Washington had set $650,000 monthly or $8,000,000 annually as the sum the State must raise to continue to share in Federal relief funds after March 15, Gov. Nice today declared he had received no word from Washington to this effect.

Developments in the situation as the Legislature reassembled were:

1. A request of the Governor that the Legislature immediately pass the bill authorizing the $8,500,000 bond issue, together with the measures raising the collateral inheritance tax to 7½ per cent and leaving a 1 per cent direct inheritance tax to finance the bonds.

Sets $3,000,000 Limit.

A statement by Senator J. Millan Coad (Democrat), St. Mary's, chairman of the Senate committee, that he "might support" an expenditure of $3,000,000 annually for relief purposes but "not a cent more."

3. Gov. Nice will discuss the general situation tomorrow when he meets the Democratic leaders of the House and Senate at breakfast in the executive mansion.

4. A statement by the Governor that the Legislature should not be blamed for having delayed action on relief, as the members were waiting for the public works legislation in Congress and for the Federal relief and social legislation picture to be clarified.

Discussing the need for immediate action on the $8,500,000 bond issue, the Governor said:

Plan Is Work of Many.

"There is a plan now for a bond issue to place the State upon a sound financial basis insofar as working capital is concerned. It is a plan not of myself alone, but of the leaders in both houses, the State's fiscal officers and the legal department and myself.

"We have decided that it is the best plan and I think it should be given right of way in the Legislature and adopted in order that minds be free and decks cleared for the consideration of the serious problems of relief and other welfare activities.

"I feel that will be the attitude of the General Assembly.

"The budget should be out of the way by the middle of the week and the bond issue enabling act and its servicing legislation by the end of the week."

The Governor said that United States Senators George L. Radcliffe and Millard E. Tydings were to meet with Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, to discuss the funds Maryland must raise to continue to receive Federal aid after March 15.

Budget Supplement Submitted by Nice

By a Special Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., March 4.—Gov. Harry W. Nice sent to the General Assembly when it reconvened tonight his supplemental budget carrying additional appropriations to various State departments and institutions, totaling $8,500,000 dependent upon passsage of a bond issue enabling act for that amount, now pending.

Accompanying the document was a letter which called attention to the fact that no provision has been made to increase appropriations in the original budget for maintenance and operating expenses of State institutions, and to restore salary reduction made in the original budget. It pointed out that all of these items can be provided for when found necessary, by his action and that of the board of public works, from contingent funds made available for the budgetary years 1936 and 1937 in the enabling act.

Additional allowances for the University of Maryland, expenditure of which is dependent upon passage of legislation, the Governor said, are also omitted from the supplement. He said they can also be made available by action of the public works board from the contingent fund. The Governor did, however, include $15,000 for the university for each of the two years for establishing a school for training of relief and welfare workers.

Among the larger items in the supplemental budget are: To the State Roads commission, for Baltimore City, under ties to be allocated on a road mileage basis and expended in accordance with the original budget, $629,068.39 for 1936, and $509,666.79 for 1937; to the roads commission, for Baltimore City, under similar conditions, $226,691.08 for 1936, and $213,039.45 for 1937; also to the roads commission, the additional revenue from auto registration fees, in view of the 2½ cent horsepower rate, whereas the computation in the original budget was based upon a 2c-cent rate, $650,785.40 for each year for road and bridge construction operations; from the same source for Baltimore City, $280,000 for each year; to the board of public works for use of the various State departments, boards, etc., $500,000 for each year.

Other increases in miscellaneous appropriations provided by the Governor include the following, the amounts designated being for each budgetary year, unless otherwise stated, and to come from general funds contingent upon passage of pending bills:

Wicomico County Children's Home, $1,000; Blue Ridge College, $3,500; Maryland State Firemen's Association, for pension and disability fund, $15,231; county commissioners of Prince Georges County, for hospitalization of free cases, $3,000; to Garret County commissioners, for same, $3,000; State's share of construction and maintenance of Annapolis sewerage plant, etc., $5,000 for 1936, $2,500 for 1937; Home for Aged at Salisbury, $1,000; rebuilding the executive mansion, $35,000; making a total of $50,000; Maryland Agricultural Society, $3,000; State Planning Commission, $3,000; expenses of presidential electors in 1937, $500; Maryland Historical Society, $200; Hospital for Women of Maryland, $2,500; South Baltimore General Hospital, $1,000; for anticipated damage to oyster beds by Federal dredging of a channel in Pocomoke Sound, $12,500; Henry Watson's Children's Aid Society, $2,000; Morgan College Commission, for university scholarships pending submission of commission's report in 1937, $10,000; for commission to study employment of prisoners, $1,200.

Free Work Still Source of Loss For Hospitals

Maryland Report Shows Amounts Earned Top State Grants.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 4.—A continuation of the situation in which State-aided hospitals are receiving appropriations smaller than the amounts earned by their free work was reported today by Samuel E. Shannahan, director of the board of State aids and charities.

In the appropriation for the first quarter of the present fiscal year, Shanahan reported to the board, the amount earned was nearly double the appropriation in each case.

The 15 State-aided hospitals in the counties, under their agreements regarding free medical treatment, earned $56,100. Their appropriations totaled $35,150, making a deficit of $20,950.

Thirteen hospitals in Baltimore earned $70,533. Their appropriations totaled $43,875, a difference of $27,658.

"Recognizing the great burden the State-aided hospitals have been under, Gov. Nice, in his budget, made some icreases where they were most needed," Shannahan said.

The following tabulations shows the amount of free work and the appropriation for each county hospital for the three-month period:

	Amount Earned.	State Approp'n

1935 Air Mail Cost Figured At $10,000,000

Will Be Less Than Outlay Before Contracts Were Ended, Branch Says.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., March 4.—In spite of proposed increases in air-mail rates, which he said the Postoffice Department believes necessary, the total cost to the Government still will be far below the cost before the contracts were canceled last year, Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, said here today. Branch spoke at the dedication of the Elkins airport.

Outlining the air-mail policies of the department, Branch declared the aviation business was in the most healthful condition it has ever known.

"It is estimated that the cost of the largely expanded air-mail service during the fiscal year 1935 will be approximately $10,000,000," he said.

Some Raises Held Needed.

"The Postoffice Department does not contend that in every instance the present rates are adequate. As a matter of fact, the department is convinced that in some instances the rates are too low and has recommended that Congress amend the law so as to empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to raise as well as lower rates, in which event the department expects the Interstate Commerce Commission will, in a number of cases, allow increases.

"However, the department does not anticipate that the total increases which may be allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission will run the total air-mail pay to a figure higher than $12,000,000 or $13,000,000."

Court Drops Fraud Case Of Coblentz

Frederick Banker Wins Another Victory in Maryland Fight.

Special Prosecutor Set to Press Appeal in Higher Tribunal.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 4.—Emory L. Coblentz today won another legal victory against charges growing out of the closing of his Central Trust Co., of Frederick, but the former State senator immediately faced the prospects of another round before the State Court of Appeals.

A Howard County charge that in 1931 he fraudulently represented the condition of the trust company, which absorbed a bank at Ellicott City and institutions in several other counties, was again thrown out of the lower court by Judge George L. Solter.

Prosecutor Plans Appeal.

Former State's Attorney James Clark of Howard County, special prosecutor, forthwith announced plans for an appeal. Thus the charges would be sent again to the appellate court which twice has ruled in this or a related case.

In dismissing the count, Judge Solter accepted a defense plea filed by Leo Weinberg, of Frederick, that the basis of the charge already had been decided in Coblentz's favor by other courts. This was the same position he and Judge Eli Frank had taken several months ago in a similar ruling, only to be reversed by the court of appeals and have the case sent back for another decision.

Acquittal Pointed Out.

In presenting an amended plea, Weinberg pointed out that Coblentz was acquitted by two judges in Frederick in 1933 on a charge of accepting deposits while he knew his bank was insolvent, an allegation held to have the same factual foundation as the one arising in Howard County.

Later, in 1933, the attorney continued, three judges at Cumberland sustained a plea of double jeopardy and threw out a similar Carroll County charge against the Frederick banker.

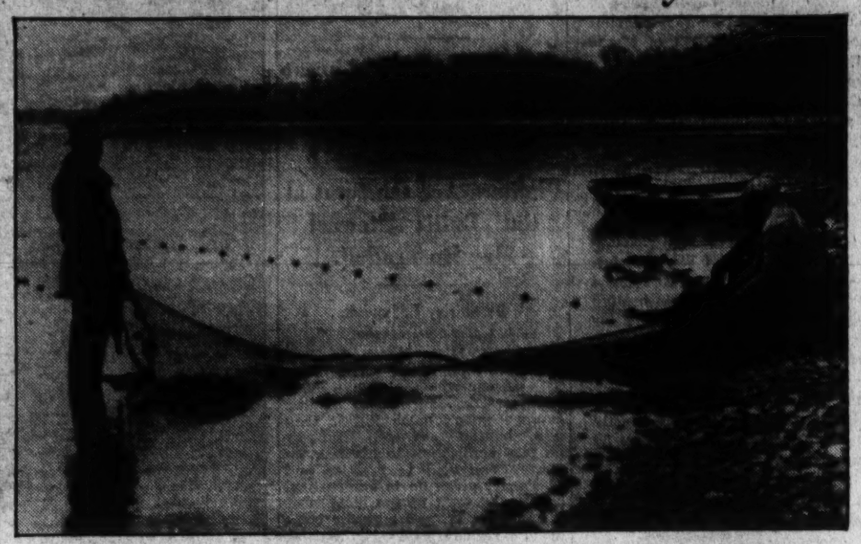
Fishermen Seine for Shad in Nearby Waters



Plenty of fish met their end in this 600-yard seine as it was hauled into shallow Potomac River water near Indian Head, Md., yesterday. Not a one was the desired shad, however, which these optimistic fishermen hoped to catch among the first arrivals in their spawning grounds.

Post Staff Photos.

Fishermen Wait Shad Invasion Of Chesapeake

Nets Readied, With Good Runs Expected in a Few Days.

By Robert Knight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Leonardtown, Md., March 4.—Wind-bronzed fishermen, tarring and mending their nets in anticipation of the first runs of shad, today said they looked for a good year. The season opened officially Saturday, but old-timers say it will be a few weeks before the favorite item of spring sea-food menus invades local waters in profitable numbers.

"Whenever the Potomac freezes over, you can look for big runs of all kinds," weathered veterans contend.

But fishing isn't what it used to be, the more philosophical ones are quick to point out. Until four years ago John Neitzey, prominent Washington sea-food wholesaler, operated a 7-mile seine near Brooks Station, Va. Today Neitzey said catches had dwindled so that the huge net, which was drawn by steam engines and took five hours to haul, was in storage. A small one was used last year, Neitzey explained. "It wasn't over a mile long," the merchant said with saddened eyes, recollecting the days when the haul was measured in tons.

Up until today no catches were reported in nearby waters. Many, however, have been putting out nets and are certain the succulent shad will nose into her pawning grounds within the next few days. Consequently, Washington and Baltimore wholesalers are selling catches from North Carolina. Herring are expected to start running about the latter part of next week.

While centers of the shad industry prepare, representatives of wholesale fish dealers from all over the Atlantic seaboard have been flocking to the larger packing headquarters to be on hand for the best of the early catches.

The Clupidae Sapidissima (which scientists insist is the real name for the American shad) is a first cousin to the herring, but much more enticing to the palate than the poor relation. This year, as in the past, the roe-bearing shad will command a price ranging from 30 to 35 cents a pound. Buck shad—the fishermen wink and say the bucks are henpecked husbands—are much smaller than the female, and are considered only second best by epicures.

Pleas Lost, Liquor Trial Date Is Set

36 Defendants Plead Not Guilty; Face Jury on April 22.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., March 4.—Attorneys for 36 defendants named in a conspiracy indictment returned by a Federal grand jury at Harrisonburg a few weeks ago at the conclusion of a lengthy investigation of alleged liquor activities in Franklin County, lost their preliminary skirmishes today as the Federal Government moved to bring the persons to trial.

April 22 was set by Judge John Paul for the opening of the trial, after he denied motions of defense attorneys for severances and overruled a demurrer and motion to quash the indictment and a petition for a bill of particulars.

The defendants, all of whom were in court today, sat throughout the morning session and heard fired the opening salvo of a legal battle that some attorneys have predicted will last at least 40 days.

When court reconvened at 2 p. m. today the defendants were arraigned formally and one by one, as their names were called, stood and entered pleas of not guilty.

Judge Paul continued the bonds under which all save one have been at liberty since they surrendered a few days after the indictment was returned February 7.

The first move of defense counsel came when Samuel R. Price, one of the dozen attorneys representing the 36 defendants, entered a demurrer and motion to quash the indictment. The motion was based on the grounds the indictment was "vague, indefinite and uncertain and withholds from the defendants information they are entitled to have to enable them properly to meet the charge;" that "the indictment shows on its face that the grand jury was either prompted or actuated by hatred, malice or ill will, or acted through fear, favor, affection or hope of reward, as the indictment shows that the defendants were indicted on a charge of conspiracy and a number of named conspirators were left unindicted;" and "on the ground that it (the indictment) is insufficient on its face."

Judge Paul promptly overruled the demurrer and motion and defense attorneys then petitioned for a bill of particulars. Those under indictment, their offices and residences, follow:

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 4.—Sheriff R. Fawley's typewriter returned to his office in the courthouse this morning just as mysteriously as it disappeared early Sunday morning. Sheriff Fawley had offered a $5 reward.

Fingerprints on the typewriter and window sills have been taken. It is supposed that the typewriter was removed from a window which was pried open from the west portico. Now there is question as to whether the window was unlocked at the time. The janitors say it was unlocked.

One theory is the machine was hidden in another part of the building and was returned before the janitors came to work early this morning. Anyhow, it's a mystery which has the sheriff's office force puzzled.

Holbrook Threatens Bolton's Status as Nats' No. One Catcher

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

Biloxi, Miss., March 4.

THE success of the Washington Ball Club in the 1935 pennant race may vary in direct proportion to the weight of Monte Weaver, Public Enigma No. 1, of the Nats' pitching staff.

Weaver came into the big leagues as a strapping 175-pounder from the Baltimore Orioles in 1932 and since that season his weight and his winning percentage have declined steadily. By the end of last season, with both his weight and his winning efforts steadily shrinking, Owner Clark Griffith and Trainer Mike Martin had begun to fear that it was a suicide pact.

WEAVER.

The pitching sensation of 1932 with 22 victories and 10 defeats in the last year of Walter Johnson's managerial regime, Weaver has stopped baffling the hitters and succeeded now in baffling not only himself, but all efforts to rebuild his dwindling strength. The 175-pounder of 1932 is now a tall, gaunt, rackish fellow of a mere 156 pounds, despite a six-foot frame.

With his trouble diagnosed as a digestive ailment, Weaver was useless to the Nats throughout half of the 1933 season when he won only 10 games, but his record of only five defeats revealed that when he was able to pitch he was extremely effective. Last year he raised new hope when he started the season sensationally with eight straight victories only to encounter physical ailments and run into a string of defeats that saw him conclude the season with 11 won and 15 lost.

WITH all due respect to Weaver, Trainer Mike Martin is firmly of the conviction that a great deal of Weaver's physical troubles are imaginative. Apparently in the best of health, Weaver is prone to complain of aches and pains despite doctors' diagnoses which have revealed him to be in excellent health following his adherence to a prescribed diet.

In the dressing room, Weaver's actions are legendary. He will stand before the mirror, raise his arm, evince pain, send a hurry call for Trainer Martin, and request a slap on the back or a punch in the ribs, receive them, and feel the better for it, for some reason. His teammates have learned that he is serious about it and evince no sign of amusement.

To the charge that his troubles are imaginative or mental, Weaver is impervious. He persists in feeling "off his feed" or otherwise deficient, willy-nilly, until he is overwhelmngly convinced that he is in excellent health. His ritual with Trainer Mike Martin in the dressing room no longer causes the other ball players to manifest any sign of interest.

However, Monte does have a sense of humor. There was the time after Joe Kuhel had broken his leg sliding into Charley Gehringer at second base in a game at Griffith Stadium last summer. After a siege in the hospital, Kuhel came out to the ball park to visit his teammates on crutches, with his leg in a cast. He met up with Weaver in the dressing room. "Don't worry, Joe," said Monte. "It's only mental."

PARADOXICALLY, while Whitehill, Hadley and the others of the Nats' staff pitching staff work furiously to shed weight during the spring training season, Weaver says it is then that he gains weight for some unexplainable reason. He expects to add ten pounds before the Nats open the 1935 campaign, and he expects to feel the better for it.

Weaver came to the Nats from Baltimore at a cost of $25,000 during the height of the depression era at the end of the 1931 season, a price tag that was equivalent to $50,000 or $75,000 in the Coolidge Administration. He was scouted personally by Clark Griffith and hailed as a right-handed Lefty Grove.

Weaver won his only start for the Nats in 1931, shutting out the White Sox and Manager Walter Johnson was not only duly impressed, but elated. Weaver, according to Johnson, was the most finished pitcher ever to graduate from the minor leagues, including Grove, and the North Carolina mountaineer immediately proceeded to prove the wisdom of Johnson's remarks in 1932 by becoming one of the few rookies to win more than 20 games in his first season in the majors. He won 22.

Rookie's Pep Impresses Harris

Pitchers Are On Spot at Bat Drill; Stewart May Be Traded.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 4.—Once upon a time there was a young catcher who could have made a big leaguer, but whose fielding average wasn't much higher than his batting average. But by diligent application to his task, in mornings devoted to practice and afternoons given up to observation, he learned most of the niceties of the catching art and began to command a high respect.

As if to compensate him for his diligence, the shifting sands of baseball caught and deposited at other points the club's two veteran catchers who stood between Cliff Bolton and a regular job. He came to the Nats training camp here a week ago duly installed as the club's regular catcher.

And now, almost before a pitch has thudded into his glove, Cliff Bolton's status as the No. 1 catcher of the Nats is clouded. The job that was his to have and to hold, barring keen disappointment in his work, now is beckoning with no uncertain emphasis to another.

Holbrook Is Threat.

The imposing figure of young Sammy Holbrook is bulking large across the Bolton baseball future. Young Holbrook, who is hoping to follow Bolton's footsteps from Chattanooga into the big leagues, is now veritably dogging those footsteps of Bolton's and threatening to surpass his predecessor.

With each appearance in practice, Holbrook is leaving a more pleasing impression with Manager Bucky Harris and Owner Clark Griffith. Already he has been deemed acceptable as the No. 2 catcher on the Nats' staff. And already it is not difficult to perceive that he is sowing the seed of a regular job.

He can't hit with Bolton, that's fairly certain, but there are few catchers who can. Exempt Bill Dickey and Mickey Cochrane, and Bolton figures to outhit Rick Ferrell and the rest of the league's veteran backstops. But Holbrook is no drawback up there at the plate with a bat in his hand, as his .287 average with Chattanooga last year reveals.

He was the best catcher in the entire Southern Association last year, despite the fact it was his first season in organized baseball. That's coming along rapidly in any league. Right now he's a better fielder than Bolton, to hear Joe Engel, of Chattanooga, tell it, and in the workouts here he has shown the "action" so highly prized by baseball men. Verily, he is a serious threat to Bolton's hopes.

League's Best Catcher.

Calvin Griffith, nephew of the Nats' owner, scouted him at Chattanooga last summer, although it didn't take much scouting to recommend the league's best catcher. Young Griffith brought back glowing reports of Holbrook's catching and hitting.

"He's a comparatively little fellow, about the size of Luke Sewell," young Griffith told his uncle.

Holbrook was summoned to Washington last fall to undergo a tonsil operation. Into Griffith's office strode a strapping 185-pounder, close onto 6 feet and announced he was Holbrook. Griffith was agreeably surprised but began then and there to doubt the scouting prowess of his nephew.

Holbrook's full of pep, too. He's the chatter-box of the club, and the life of the locker room. You can pardon his Southern accent in the boyish exuberance of it all.

As usual the pitchers attempted to monopolize the club's first batting practice today until Manager Harris was forced to shoo them away from the plate to permit some of the hitters to hit. Outfielder Jake

Proving He Hasn't Lost His Grip

It may be more years than he likes to recall since Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats has handled a baseball under fire, but he believes he still knows enough about the procedure to show a rookie pitcher the proper grip on the spheroid. Here he is in a demonstration for the benefit of Frank Petticolas at the Biloxi training camp.

Coach DeHart Dies; Former Pitt Star

Mentor of Dixie Elevens Was About to Take Over New Post.

By the Associated Press.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., March 4.—Jimmy DeHart, for 12 years a football coach at Southern universities and one of the greatest athletes ever produced at the University of Pittsburgh, died in City Memorial Hospital here late today from complications following an operation February 23.

DeHart was engaged in packing preparatory to moving to Memphis, Tenn., to take over the head coachship of Southwestern University when he suffered a rupture due to stomach ulcers. He had been chosen for the Southwestern post only a few weeks ago.

He entered the University of Pittsburgh in 1914, earning monograms in football, basket ball, baseball and track. He was a pupil of Glenn S. (Pop) Warner and quarter back of the undefeated Panther eleven of 1916. That season he made one of football's longest runs, running back a Navy kickoff 101 yards for a touchdown.

Coached Service Team.

During the World War he served as a lieutenant in the aviation corps and coached the service team at Mather Field—an organization that defeated California and Leland Stanford on successive days. After the war DeHart returned to Pittsburgh to captain the Panther eleven.

In 1920 and 1921 he was backfield coach at the University of Georgia and for the next four years served at Washington and Lee as head football coach. From the Lexington, Va., institution DeHart transferred in 1926 to Duke University where he was director of athletics for five years.

He went back to Washington and Lee in 1931 and 1932 as coach and since then made his home here where he was engaged in the manufacture of a football game.

A funeral service will be held here Wednesday morning, after which the body will be interred at a cemetery at Concord, N. C., home of his widow, the former Miss Lois Guffy. Other survivors include two daughters, Jean and Martha; a son, Bobby, and one brother, W. A. DeHart, of New Kensington, Pa.

DeHart, who was born August 25, 1893, at Reynoldsville, Pa., was given a blood transfusion Saturday, but he failed to rally.

After his graduation from the University of Pittsburgh he was offered a contract as third baseman on the Pittsburgh Pirates, but turned it down to go into college coaching.

Hornbostel and Cunningham Matched

Will Clash at 1,000 Yards on Saturday; Also Vie in Other Events.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Mar. 4.—The twin tireless wonders of track and field—Glenn Cunningham and Charles Hornbostel—plan a rousing climax to their winter indoor campaigns in the Knights of Columbus games in Madison Square Garden on March 16.

The games committee today announced they had been matched for a long-waited meeting at 1,000 yards and that each also will essay another distance, Cunningham the mile and Hornbostel 600 yards on the same program.

The time schedule has been arranged so that Hornbostel will have an hour's rest after the 1,000 before he races the 600 and Cunningham an hour and a half before he toes the mark for the Columbian mile.

Other Stars Invited.

The best obtainable field of specialists at the three distances has been invited to compete.

The oldest indoor record in the books, Harold Cutbill's 2:12, will be the goal for them in the 1,000. The "Flying Parson" set the record 13 years ago in Buffalo, but at last it looks to be on the way out. Hornbostel came within a fraction of the time last year and it seems well within the reach of both if they go "all out" in their duel.

Each holds the record for their other races of the evening, Cunningham the indoor mile mark of 4:08.4, which he set in the same event last year, and Hornbostel the standard of 1:11.3 for 600 yards, a record he put on the books last month in the Millrose meet.

'It's Up to Dizzy,' Rickey Declares

By the Associated Press.

Bradenton, Fla., March 4.—Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals, and Dizzy Dean, the club's star hurler, held a love feast today when Dizzy joined his teammates in a long batting drill.

Rickey told a luncheon club "Everything depends on Dizzy. If the team gets Dean's fullest cooperation I see another pennant."

The picther said the Cardinals always had treated him "fine" and explained he hoped he "never would have to play for another team."

Charley Gelbert, out of baseball for two years as a result of a leg injury, continued to amaze the fans with his performance. Rickey offered to bet that the one-time star shortstop was "back in big league baseball to stay."

Ruth Greeted By 3,000 at Fla. Camp

Cheering, Milling Crowd Welcomes Slugger Upon Arrival.

First Workout Planned This Morning by New Brave.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 4.—Babe Ruth received a record-breaking welcome today upon his arrival at the training camp of the Boston Braves.

Never during the 10 previous years Ruth has been coming here with the New York Yankees has St. Petersburg approached the reception it accorded the 40-year-old slugger in honor of his first appearance as a National Leaguer. More than 3,000 men, women and children jammed the railroad station, cheering wildly and knocking many down in the rush to get a close-up of the perspiring, but delighted veteran.

No squad of ball players, let alone any individual, has ever been given so vociferous a demonstration upon arrival at a Florida training camp.

Climax of Receptions.

The Babe's arrival was the climax of a series of impromptu receptions marking every stop of the train in Florida. At Wildwood a crowd of boys spotted the big fellow through a window and stampeded aboard the train, causing several minutes delay while they got his autograph. The extraordinary interest manifest in Ruth's new venture as player, assistant manager and vice president of the Braves surprised and stimulated the one-time home run king.

"I hope they will be as willing to cheer me later on when I get out there in uniform," chuckled the Babe as he helped Mrs. Ruth through the crowd to greet Bill McKechnie, manager of the Boston Club, and Hawk Gowdy, veteran coach.

Bill and the Babe, boss and assistant boss under the "new deal," shook hands warmly. Both have already dissipated the idea that there will be any friction this year. As to next year—in the words of both—"let that take care of itself." To make it official Ruth said to McKechnie:

"Bill, you know I'm tickled to pieces to be down here and to join you. Anything you say goes with me. I'll be ready to go to work for you tomorrow morning. The way I feel right now I'm going to give the Braves some help."

Spikes Rumor of Deal.

Ruth spiked reports that he had any discussion with Jimmy Wilson, manager of the Phillies, about a possible deal for Bobby Brown, one of the Braves' young right-handers.

"I haven't seen or talked with Wilson since I joined up with the Braves," said Ruth. "Besides, I've got nothing to do with making any deals and it would be presumptuous for me to even mention anything of the kind before joining the club. That kind of stuff is just a pipe dream."

Ruth's training program, starting tomorrow, probably will combine a brisk daily workout at Waterfront Park, training ground of the Braves, and a round of golf in the afternoon. His golf clubs, which he forgot in the rush of leaving New York Sunday, are on the way.

"I'm withing five or ten pounds of playing right now," he said. "I'll get into shape gradually. Barring accidents I think now I can play as much, if not more, than I did last year with the Yanks."

Ruth was in 125 games last season.

Four Champions Likely to Vie at Lehigh.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., March 4.—V. M. I.'s four Southern Conference wrestling champions, whose victories brought their school the team championship here Saturday night, probably will compete in the eighth annual national collegiate meet to be held at Lehigh University on March 22 and 23, athletic officials said tonight.

The quartet of titlists eligible for the national competition are Capt. Ward Durrence, 165 pounds; Joe Sherrard, 125; Archie Witt, 135, and John Burgess, 175. Currence probably would wrestle at 155, the weight at which he won the conference title in 1934.

Mack's Yannigans Tie Regulars, 7-7

By the Associated Press.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 4.—The Philadelphia Athletics' regulars and the Yannigans battled nine innings to a 7-7 tie in their first game of the season today. The batters took liberties with all the pitchers, veterans and rookies alike.

Capt. Jimmy Foxx caught the first six innings for the regulars, smashed a triple which would have been a homer if he wanted to run, and handled his young hurlers like an experienced catcher.

The regulars might have won had it not been for the new Texas infield—Fausett, English and Newsome, assisted by Finney—which pulled off five double plays.

Kohlman, Smith and Benton pitched for the regulars, and Cain, Cascarella and Lieber hurled for the Yannigans.

Furr Pounds Davis, Wins Decision

The entire card, which was the initial presentation of the new amalgamation of Joe Turner, promoter, and Goldie Ahearn, matchmaker, chased the boos from the Auditorium and marked the return of fistic prosperity to the Eighteenth street palace of punch. Some 1,500 fight fanatics poured $1,583 into the Turner-Ahearn coffers, half of them fully expecting to witness the same type of card that has marred past presentations at the Auditorium under different matchmaking. Some 1,500 filed from the Auditorium at the finish, fully satisfied at having spent the $1,583.

Furr, who was making his initial start under the joint management of Chris Dundee and Ralph Murdock, started like a preliminary boy and wound up like a first-class, A-1 fighter. For some six rounds the District lad was unable to find the elusive, bobbing target offered by the cagey Jewish lad. In the seventh, Phillip found the range. In the eighth he found it even more decisively, and in the ninth and tenth he was hammering away at the tiring Cleveland lad almost at will.

Davis Beats Manley.

Roddy Davis, local welterweight, took a unanimous decision from Roy Manley, of Arkansas, in a bloody six-round semifinal. Manley's southpaw stance failed to puzzle Davis and he seldom was able to land his heavy left on any vital portion of Roddy's anatomy. The winner played a steady tattoo on Roy's body and in the fourth round opened a gash over Manley's left eye with a slashing right. Davis kept pecking away at the wound until the finish, causing the claret to flow profusely and worrying Roy no end.

Joe Green, promising young local featherweight prospect, and LeRoy Dougan, wily Arkansas veteran, battled six rounds to a draw in a furious preliminary. Dougan set the pace in the early rounds, but Green's youth and superior stamina enabled him to stage a whirlwind finish which carried him to the draw. Judge Howard Livingstone ballotted for Green, Referee Eddie Lafond and Judge Bob Eller casting their votes for the stalemate.

Red Journey, a hard-hitting Norfolk middleweight, rallied in the closing rounds of a six-rounder to take a unanimous decision from Joe Gorman, of New York. The bout was fast and furious throughout, with oe piling up nice leads with skillful boxing, only to have them repeatedly swept aside by the mighty fists of Journe.

Neil Introduces "Dearie;" She's Going to Boss Dodgers

By Edward J. Neil

Associated Press Sports Writer.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 4.—Some day a young lady named Mrs. James Mulvey, known to baseball men and trotting horsemen as "Dearie," is going to run the Brooklyn Baseball Club, so it might be just as well to get acquainted now.

She's the daughter of Judge Stephen McKeever, the rotund veteran who shares ownership in the Dodgers with the executors of the estate of Charles Ebbetts, and to her and her three youngsters the gallant "jedge" has willed his part of the property. In the ten-year fight for control since the death of Ebbetts, McKeever has never once considered selling his share.

"That's for Dearie and the children," he says. "I've saved it for them, and they're going to have it." She has been trained for the day when she will have to take over the club. For 12 years, before she married, she traveled with the team, never missed a game on the road or at home. She knows baseball as few men know it. She never wants to manage the team.

She believes implicitly in Casey Stengel's managerial ability. But she is going to have plenty to say when the time comes. She's the power behind the throne in the club's training here.

"Brooklyn is the finest baseball city in the country," she said, "and it won't be long before we're back on top again. In one year we've developed three stars in Van Mungo, Lonnie Frey and Len Koenecke. We need a couple more, and then we'll be ready."

Her attitude toward the Dodgers is exactly the same as that of her father.

"We'll never sell our half," she said.

She looks to be about 35 years old. Aside from baseball her hobby is driving trotting horses at Seminole Park, near here. She's lean and fit, has driven on the Grand Circuit and is up and out on the track every morning at 6:30 o'clock, riding the sulkies with the best of the men drivers, tearing along wheel to wheel with them in impromptu brushes.

Critz Dropped to 8th In Line-up of Giants

Miami, Fla., March 4 (AP).—The baseball training season has just got under way, but Manager Bill Terry, of the New York Giants presented a working model of his 1935 batting order today.

McLeod Is Appointed.

Detroit, March 4 (AP).—The appointment of Donald Stewart McLoed as superintendent of the Chicago Stadium was announced today. McLoed now heads the Olympia in Detroit.

Wright at First Base.

Pasadena, Calif., March 4 (AP).—Glenn Wright, veteran National League shortstop, went through a long workout with the White Sox today at first base.

WHAT'S GREATER THAN GREAT?

Good Gamble Tires, Runs Second

Quickly Victor in Fifth, but Is Disqualified; Watson Set Down.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., March 4. The final week of the Miami Jockey Club's 45-day meeting got under way here this afternoon with the Chapman Field Purse, honoring local flying officers, heading the card. Six Florida Derby candidates and two other 3-year-olds met in the 7-furlong test. W. A. Jones' Furfiber, not named for the closing day feature, proved best, scoring by a length to give the popular jockey, Wayne Wright, a double.

M. L. Schwartz's Good Gamble, which recently came down from Columbia, S. C., with J. H. Louchheim's Morpluck, was a tired second in her seasonal debut. The filly had worked very fast, but apparently needed this race. At any rate, she did not shape up as a derby horse today in taking the place by a length and a half from H. W. Silver's Blackbirder. The winner, paying $9.60, ran the distance in 1:24 1-5.

Morpluck Withdrawn.

Morpluck, one of the favorites for the local derby, was scheduled to make his 3-year-old premiere in today's race, but Trainer Clarence Buxton withdrew him, believing that packing 122 pounds against the field might prove too much of a tightener. "Morpluck is razor sharp right now," said Buxton. "The horse worked a bit faster than I intended last Saturday and I believe that effort and easy morning gallops will be sufficient to carry him into the Florida Derby in fit condition." The workout referred to was a mile in 1:38 1-5 and a furlong farther in 1:53 1-5, eased up.

Good Gamble broke alertly and opened up several lengths' advantage, running Night Serge into defeat. Furfiber, slow to find his stride, shot around the field with a rush leaving the back stretch and wore down Good Gamble, which was a close second choice to Night Serge, in the last furlong, winning going away. Blackbirder closed steadily to be in the picture.

Wise Duke Triumphs.

Wise Duke is the latest of the get of Wise Counsellor to win at the local course. The good looking juvenile, making his second start, ran back to the promise shown in his recent outing to graduate from the maiden ranks in today's opening dash. Although the colt swerved considerably in the early stages, he made up ground with a great last furlong challenge and overtook the pace-setting Willow Wood, to win by two lengths. The youngster was a close second choice over Willow Wood, paying $5.50. John Tio, a field horse, was a rapid going third.

Diecaster woke up in the third event of one mile, scoring easily at odds of $63.20 for $2. War Tide and De Valera, two other long shots, accounted for the place and show, respectively, while the highly favored Noble Spirit was nosed out of the money under rather weak handling.

Favorite players got a lucky break in the graded handicap, Class "C," the fifth race, in which five started. Quickly finished first by three parts of a length over the odds-on choice, Volta Maid, but Wayne Wright, who rode the latter, claimed foul, and it was allowed. This moved Miss Careful into the place and Luxuro into the show. Quickly, ridden by Bobby Watson, led from the start. She came wide turning into the stretch, and Wright sent Volta Maid through on the inside. Quickly, still in front, bore in through the last sixteenth, riding Wright rather close, and the Idaho boy stopped riding in the final strides. However, Volta Maid seemed beaten regardless. She paid $3.50.

The stewards suspended Watson for the balance of the meeting, and the case was referred to the Florida State Racing Commission.

Powell celebrated his first day in camp by swinging hard on the ball as did Catchers Cliff Bolton and Jack Redmond, and Third Baseman Joe Mills. The far-flung Biloxi fences, however, are still virgin territory to the hitters and will be until they make the balls a lot livelier.

Serving 'em up to the hitters were the rookie pitchers, Dick Lanahan, Archie Scrivener, Henry Coppola, Bob Etts and Frank Petticolas, and they all were in a tough spot. When they didn't get 'em over the plate, the hitters beefed. When they put too much stuff on the ball, Bucky Harris looked askance. There was no happy medium for them.

Scrivener, Coppola and Petticolas, with Reese Digges, still are setting the pace for the second flight of rookies, although Digges now is considered a first-flight recruit. The giant Petticolas continued to display extremely good action on the mound, and there was no trace of Scrivener's habitual wildness.

Clark Griffith today adopted tactic No. Z-83 with regards to holdouts when he publicly announced that Pitcher Walter Stewart was on the trading block. He would trade Stewart for any pitcher of comparative value, he said.

Stewart accepts Griffith's $8,000 offer (he received $8,000 last year) and demands the same wage) within three days, Griffith will announce that Stewart is suspended and subject to a fine of 30 days' pay.

At the Post . . .

Hialeah Race Track, March 4.

Dear Al:

Jockey A. Abel, whose life already is something of an Horatio Alger story, continues to be ambitious. Abel is a young man of 26 years who tired of riding other people's horses. He bought some of his own and has done a lot more than keep the wolf away from his door since. Abel, in addition to owning horses, rides them, trains them and takes care of the clerical work regarding his string. He has been particularly successful with the horse, St. Moritz, this winter. He thinks a lot of St. Moritz, so much, in fact, that he visited the secretary's office the other day and put $250 on the line to make St. Moritz a supplementary entry in the Florida Derby to be run next Saturday. It will cost Abel another quarter grand to make St. Moritz a derby starter. Many of Abel's friends believe he is throwing money away, but the jockey, trainer and owner tells one and all to have a bet across the board. Stranger things have happened in turf history, and Abel doesn't appear to be the kind of fellow who looks for miracles. Jockey Alfred Robertson, of the C. V. Whitney Stable, arrived yesterday with Mrs. Robertson from Santa Anita, where he had a successful meeting. "Robby" is looking for a mount in the derby.

BILL.

First race—Frosy will be hard to beat from that outside post position and I'm depending on Silvio Coucci to do a lot of kicking and hustling. Night Cap, breaking off the rail, is speedy and can not be disregarded. James City to take care of the others, including Broadway Bill, one that Clocker Mike says is a brisk worker.

Second race—Chicle Ship has been bouncing around for a long time trying to escape the maiden ranks. Should graduate under Wright's handling tomorrow. Dan Skilling and Flight of Gold to take care of the others. Mount Lookout would be dangerous if scratched into action.

Third race—Captain Argo will go to the post a favorite for this sprint and I see no reason for excuses. Ladfield, on the improve, looks like the one to beat. Hug Again and Night Sprite, of the Gratton entry, should save the third money.

Fourth race—Jim John has all his speed now and if anything beats him it will have to do some stepping. Tutticurio, with Coucci aboard, is a threat. Civil War should be a good price and Meade's presence in the saddle will make the horse a real contender.

Fifth race—Brindle ran second for us last out, but he will like this mile and I'm stringing along. Stickhandle's recent win was impressive. Will be no worse than second here. How's Chance may awake to give the favorite players a shock.

Sixth race—I'm going to try to put over a longshot in this mile and a sixteenth. Fair Countess is the horse, packs only 97 pounds and has been kidding us in recent races. Trials have been good and this looks like the spot to bear down. Mickey's Man and Fan to complete the money picture.

Seventh race—Brass Monkey gets another chance. Failed to run his race last out. Standout and Tuffy G. to fill the other money places.

DIECASTER broke very fast on inside, was rated along to the middle of the turn, was then sent to the front, drew away, and finished nicely in hand. WAR TIDE, well up all the way, ran a good race. DE VALERA had more early speed than winner and performed fairly well. NOBLE SPIRIT broke well, showed good speed, but was weakly ridden all through the stretch. TIGHTWAD closed a big gap.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:59½. Off at 4:02. Winner, L. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROAD MEADOWS, $14.30, $6.60, $3.70; POCKET, $4.70, $3.30; BROADSWORD, $3.00.

BROAD MEADOWS was kept well up in early part of race, came to the outside in final furlong, assumed command in last sixteenth, and won going away. POCKET under light weight, suffered interference and never had a chance until the final furlong, where she closed with a rush. BROADSWORD had plenty of speed, appeared beaten turning into stretch, but came again at end.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Graded Handicap C. Purse, $1,000. A handicap for 4-year-olds and upward of C division. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:27½. Off at 4:33. Winner, G. QUICKLY, much the best, broke very fast, rushed into lead, was rated along, came wide entering stretch and swerved over to the inside rail in final 20 yards and finished. VOLTA MAID, for which she was disqualified. VOLTA MAID, well up from the start, came to the inside in stretch when QUICKLY went wide, finished fast, but was a well-beaten horse at the time QUICKLY bothered her. MISS CAREFUL was sharply taken up turning out of back stretch, saved ground on turn, and ran a good race. LUXURO, well up in early runnins, went very wide in stretch and stopped badly. CHIEF PILOT was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). The Chapman Field. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:07½. Off at 5:12½. Winner, W. A. Jones' b. g. FURFIBER, badly outrun for the first half-mile, began to close ground around turn, came around field entering stretch, caught GOOD GAMBLE in the furlong pole, and won drawing away. GOOD GAMBLE rushed into lead, set a fast pace, but tired badly in final furlong. He was plainly short and should improve over this effort. BLACKBIRDER, also outrun in early part, finished very fast.

ANNARITA broke fast, but was eased back off the pace and rated along to the top of the stretch, ran into lead, and stood long drive gamely. AHMED had more early speed than usual, but weakened in last quarter mile. FLAT ROCK, outrun in early part, finished with a rush. LIMBUS was timidly ridden all the way.

3 Horses Dead In Kentucky Barn Fire

Two Others Badly Burned; Several Escape; Led to Safety.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 4.—Three thoroughbreds died and two others were probably fatally burned early today in a fire that swept the training barn at the Kentucky Association track here. None of the five horses, valued at about $10,000 by their owners, was insured.

A number of horses were led from the burning barn to safety. The three that perished were Mr. Bob, 3-year-old colt by Boot to Boot out of Fannie Breuter, owned by Al Kane, Fayette County; a 2-year-old colt by Roguish Eye out of Sympathy owned by Mrs. N. L. Frank, Chicago, and a 2-year-old colt by Vito out of Sarah Day, owned by W. T. Crosthwaite, Lexington.

Two Badly Burned.

The two animals probably fatally burned were a 2-year-old chestnut gelding by Prince Pal out of Solid Gold, owned by Mr. Crosthwaite, and a 2-year-old filly by Peter Hastings out of Mildred C., also owned by Crosthwaite.

In another fire, which occurred last night at the Idle Hour Farm of Col. E. R. Bradley, a barn in which 18 valuable mares and foals were housed was destroyed, but the animals were led to safety. The loss at the Bradley farm was estimated at $16,000.

Olmsted and Acacia Win Opening Games of A. A. U. Tourney

George Allen Throws Up First Ball

A SMART, aggressive band of cagers, executing each play on the split second, and shooting with the skill of trained marksmen, carried Olmsted Grill to an impressive 50-to-21 victory over Calvary Methodist's team last night in the feature game at the inaugural of the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament which The Post is sponsoring at Tech High School's gym.

In the other contest on the program, Acacia Life Insurance Co., boasting three former George Washington University players, eliminated a fighting Boys' Club of Washington quintet, 41 to 33.

District Commissioner George E. Allen put the official Government stamp on the A. A. U. games by tossing up the first ball to the ringing cheers of spectators.

Sinks One Himself.

Commissioner Allen threw up the ball to the opposing centers, Bert Cannefax, of Acacia, and Phil Roache, of Boys Club, as if he were an experienced player. Before doing this he limbered up by taking five shots at the basket. He sank his fifth try.

The performance of the Ilmsted players augurs well for their chance in the battle for the unlimited division in which close to 30 teams are seeking honors. They set a whirlwind pace a minute after the game started—as Dave Dantzic, captain and center; Hal Kemp, Buss Cross, Bud Thompson, Billy Mitchell and Johnny Sherman fired away at the hoops in hair-trigger fashion. Seldom did the boys miss.

Dantzic, a lanky, black-haired lad, rang up eight goals for high-point honors. He probably would have scored more had he not left the game for a while. On the defense Mitchell and Sherman were towers of strength and smothered virtually every play the church boys attemtped.

Leads, 27-8, at Half.

Olmstead led, 27-8, at hte turn and scored almost at will in the closing session. Cossette, guard, with 9 points, did nobly for Calvary, which actualy went out of its class in attempting to stop "Sox" Harrington's lads.

Acacia had to snuff out an early Boys' Club lead and beat off an eleventh-hour challenge to win by an 8-point margin. As a matter of fact, the Clubbers led, 10-4, after seven minutes of play, but their lead melted like so much butter in a pan when Bill Beall, stocky guard; Asher, O'Brien and McGibbony started potting shot after shot. With 6 to go for the half, McGibbony sank a long shot to put Acacia ahead, 14 ot 12, a lead the insurance passers refused to surrender. They enlarged it to 24 to 17 at the half.

Beall, with 14 points, was high point scorer, and the best player on the floor. John Mandes, former Central player, with 9 points, and Artie Nock, were outstanding for the Boys Club.

Death Site Honor Is Paid to Rockne

Cottonwood Falls, Kans., March 4 (AP).—Friends and relatives gathered today for a memorial service where Knute Rockne—"The Rock" of Notre Dame—was killed with seven fellow passengers in an airplane crash on March 31, 1931.

Today was the forty-seventh anniversary of his birth. Bill Rockne, eldest son of the coach, a student at St. Benedict's College, in Atchison, Kans., placed a wreath on the monument marking the spot in a pasture near here.

3 Games Slated In A.A.U. Play Tonight

First Baptist, Central 'Y' Will Meet in Opener at 7:30 P. M.

UNLIMITED basket ball teams will continue to furnish the attraction tonight at Tech High School's gym in the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament under the sponsorship of The Washington Post.

Clashing at 7:30 in the curtain-raiser will be First Baptist Church and the Central Y. M. C. A. At 8:30 Maryland A. C. will engage Parchet's Comets, and an hour later Miller Furniture will take on Mount Vernon Methodist.

Seasoned Campaigners.

The "Y" cagers have a number of seasoned campaigners on their team who bid fair to play havoc with the Church outfit. Ellis Klein, Paul Madden, Al Levitt, John Summer, Bill Rhodes, R. B. Miller and Woodrow Bousman will take the floor for the "Y," while First Baptist is banking on Elden Page, Bob Marks, Harry Saunders, the horseshoe throwing champion and golf star; Ed Beech, Dave Painter and Paul Moore.

Maryland A. C. may prove a serious threat in the tournament, and is favored to defeat Parchet's. Willis Benner, Jim Forney Fuchs, Hay, Berry, Selmoy, Collins and Stan will make up the Maryland outfit, while the Comets will offer George Swift, John Dickey, Ford Young, Tom Sewell, Strother Asquith and J. H. Melton.

Virtually Same Team.

Miller Funiture and Mount Vernon promise to put on a thriller. The Furniture boys will have available Edwin Holland, Cliff and Billy Harris, Spifo Kollus, Frank Baroni, Milton Riegelman and Everett Johnson.

Mount Vernon may prove a serious threat in the championship. The team will open with Corky Snyder and Bill Fry at forward; Maurice Goubeau, former Western act, at center; Hoggy Albert and Edgar Newcomer, at guard. In reserve will be Rusty Lampson, former Central player, and Ed Babbitt. Don Garber, also on the team, is out with a broken finger. Mount Vernon is tied for the Sunday School lead.

Tomorrow Twin Oaks meet Ehrlicks Poultry at 7:30 in a 145-pound game; the Eagles of Wesley Heights face Rinaldi Tailors in an unlimited battle at 8:30 and Jewish Community Center takes on Fort Washington at 8:30.

Cumberland Cloakers' Ace Keeps League Lead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 4.—Charles "Snapper" Morris, Cloakers' center, held his place as leader of the Inter-State League scoring race last week and now has a total of 128 points for the second half. Glenn "Tink" Smith, Westvaco, ranks second with 117 and has the highest average of points per game—13.

Edgar "Ike" Cessna, of the Cloakers, advanced from eighth to third and is the only other player to have more than 100 points. His total is 102.

"Tink" Smith established a new record for the highest number of points scored in a game and the highest number of goals, 28 and 13, respectively.

Johnson Picks Catchers.

New Orleans, March 4 (AP).—Bill Brenzel and Charlie George are scheduled to do the bulk of the catching in the Cleveland Indians' early exhibition games, Manager Walter Johnson intimated today.

Outside Chance Seen for C. U. Ringmen

Restaino, Thibideau and Fleming Carry Hopes Against Maryland.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

EDDIE LA FOND, Catholic University's boxing coach, took a long, searching look at his pupils of punch yesterday afternoon and immediately decided that they'll have a fighting chance against Maryland's maulers next Monday night in the battle of the century at College Park.

Mr. La Fond was not cracking wise. He meant just what he said.

"To be more explicit," he explained, "I figure my boys can win—or at least tie—if they get in there and punch all the way. That's what I mean by a fighting chance—they've got to fight—and fight as they've never fought before.

Mix, Rydewski Missing.

"We're gonna be handicapped by the loss of Fred Mix, our 145-pounder, and Freddy Rydewski, the kid who has been doing the heavyweight fighting lately, but don't count us out of the running too soon. I've got a coupe of cards in my hand that might trump Maryland's aces."

The Catholic U. ringmaster has seen Maryland in two engagements and has spotted about all of the few weaknesses of the Harmony boys. Thus he knows the ground he is walking on when he visualizes the outcome of the bouts.

LaFond is counting heavily on Angy Restaino, featherweight, Capt. Eddie Thibideau, lightweight, and Red Fleming, light-heavyweight, to win for his team. The defeat of any one of this trio definitely will erase the Cards' slim chance of winning, but if they deliver, then C. U. is in a good position to upset the Terps' apple-cart.

Restaino looks capable of outboxing and outpunching Bill Waller, and Eddie Thibideau should knock out Joe Jones. Fleming will have his hands full with McCaw, the Southern Conference 175-pound champion, but if big Red can pat "Stew" on his glass chin with that left, that's all he'll need.

Young Is Too Strong.

That puts tying or winning up to the rest of them. Ruben Miro, Catholic's bantam, doesn't look strong enough to handle Jimmy Young, and Carmen LaSalle certainly will be no match for "Spike" Webb in the 145-pound scrap. Tom Oliver, senior-welterweight, seems to have gone stale, but must be reckoned with against either Mike Lombardo or Harold Kelly.

At 165-pounds, Pete Dranginis, of C. U., is an exceedingly large and inquisitive question mark, while the Cards will be hopelessly lost in the heavyweight division.

Mr. LaFond is right. His boys do have a fighting chance—they've almost got to start a civil war to win, but nobody ever accused the Brooklanders of quitting.

Hunters Are Given Two Hours' Chase

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., March 4.—Five foxes jumped today and runs totaling two hours gave the Middleburg Hunt one of the best day's sport of the season. The riders started at Dover at 10 a. m. and drew the estates of Mrs. Henry Fairfax, Miss Charlotte H. Noland, Crouch Brothers, Jim Skinner and Turner Wiltshire to the Fred farm, where a fox was jumped.

The chase, which lasted 30 minutes, circled the Sands estate and back to the Fred farm, where the animal was denned.

The hunt then drew back on the Sands estate, where two foxes were jumped, and, with a split pack yelping for more than 30 minutes, both foxes were denned on this estate. Then they drew to Capt. Iselin's, where the fourth fox was jumped, and, after a short chase, the pack split when the fifth red was started on the Turner Wiltshire place. A 45-minute run denned the first fox on the farm of Mrs. Charles E. Perkins and the field came in, leaving a part of the pack still running.

Riding today were D. C. Sands, M. F. H.; Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Gen. William Mitchell, Mrs. Linn, of Chicago, who is a guest of Mrs. Perkins; Mrs. John Hughes, of Chicago; F. H. Prince, jr., Jack Skinner, Jim Skinner, Capt. C. O. Iselin, Miss Hope Iselin, Col. Clifford, Miss Charlotte H. Noland, Miss Eleanor Mackubin, Dr. A. C. Crump, Frederick Warburg, Arthur White, W. P. Hurlbert and Forrest Dishman.

Tech's Team Is Tapering Off For Chapel Hill Track Meet

PREPARATIONS for the first invasion of the South in several years by a Washington High School track and field team reached the tapering off stage at Tech yesterday. Fifteen Techmen, under Coach Hap Hardell, will leave Friday for Chapel Hill, N. C., where they will compete in the scholastic meet of the annual Southern Conference indoor games at the University of North Carolina.

A bit dubious, Coach Hardell put the squad through its paces, feeling that "they are not very far advanced" for the big test despite several weeks of training. Few indications of speed, according to the stop-watch, have been forthcoming due to lack of an indoor track at the school.

The gymnasium has been used when available, but the flat surface offers little or no similarity to the banked boards which will be under tread at Chapel Hill.

With several schools nearer the university entering much larger teams than Tech, Coach Hardell has no expectation of winning the team championship, but admitted that George Bogan and Paul Lynch, in the sprints, are good enough to finish well up among the leaders. The coach is a bit disappointed at the showing made in the Newark interscholastic two weeks ago by his mile relay quartet when it trailed in fourth place behind New Jersey schools.

Their unfamiliarity with the indoor track affected the result to some extent, but Hardell made it plain he had expected a better performance than Bogan, Byron Hayden, LeRoy Green and Monroe Emmerich displayed. The same quartet will race in the mile Saturday with Paul Ellinger as alternate.

Other members of the squad making the trip are McMann, who will be entered with Green in the 1,000-yard run; Frank Haskey and Thompson, who will enter the sprints with Bogan and Lynch; Leo Wall and Emmerich in the 70-yard high hurdles, and Justin McKenna and Harry March in the high jump.

Dean Best Schoolboy Player in 15 Years

By John R. Vosburgh.

IF you wish to take the word of their basket ball papas, Coach Charlie Guyon and Coach Mike Kelley, young Mister Lavelle (Dope) Dean deserves to rate higher as a basket ball player than his famous, older Eastern High brothers of the court, Tommy Nolan and Harry Bassin, now displaying their wizardry in behalf of the Georgetown Freshmen.

"Dean," says Kelley, coach of last year's interhigh champions, is the best high school basket ball player I have seen in my 15 years' connection with the game around here. He has everything it takes to make a great player. I'll put him at the top of my list, any day."

Kelley coached Dean two years and also Nolan and Bassin. While preferring not to reflect on any of the three, of all of whom he thinks a great deal, the veteran mentor said that he would have to rank Dean above any others he could think of.

Between Guyon and Kelley, Bassen and Dean have been nurtured from awkward adolescents to confident, smooth-working, matured basket ball stars. It was from Guyon who first began molding the youngsters into the brilliant players they were later to become. Nolan, however, got his start under Orrel Mitchell at Gonzaga and was almost a finished player when he entered Eastern.

"I had 'em in my gym classes," the chief says. "They needed a little coaching, of course, but they were natural athletes and more or less developed themselves."

While terming it a "hard choice" to pick any of the three above the others, Guyon cited the fact that Dean is almost faultless in every department of play while Nolan and Bassin have their weak spots. Nolan, for instance, the coach said though a flawless floor man, has shown himself "a miserable scorer" at times. Of course, all three are so much better than 99 out of 100 college freshmen or high school players that such criticism is made only in a comparative light.

Certain it is, however, that Dean outscored Bassin, 28 points to 20, in the three games between the Freshmen and Eastern, and Nolan, 28 points to 19. Figures taken on the second game showed that Dean took 10 shots at the basket and made 3; Bassin took 5 and made 2 and Nolan took 15 and made 2. In that game, however, the high school won by a comfortable margin, and it was plain that Dean was not particularly interested about scoring. He goes better when the going is the toughest. In the first game, when Eastern won, 42 to 25, Dean scored 13 points and 9 in the third game, Saturday.

"Getting the ball in the bucket is Dean's big talent," Kelley declares. "After all, that's what wins your games for you. He's a good scorer, that's the main thing. He's good defensively, an excellent passer, a good ball-handler and knows the game."

"Nolan, Bassin and Edelan can play on my all-star team of the last 15 years," Kelley concluded, "but my No. 1 man is Dean."

Irish Wrestler To Bring New Hold Here

Will Try His Wits Thursday Against Grobmier at Auditorium.

By George Considine.

THE high court of Rassledumb, presided over by Hizzoner Yussel Turner, will stage its weekly session come Thursday night at the Auditorium with the intriguing case of Dan O'Mahoney vs. Fred Grobmier listed as the feature of the docket.

Daniel the O'Mahoney did not agree to bring suit against Fearless Freddy in our courts without much coaxing, begging, cajoling and even threatening by Hizzoner Turner. After much of this coaxing, begging, etc., etc., Judge Turner finally convinced the itinerant Irisher that working out in the Nation's Capital was strictly a gilt-edged proposition.

To assure success from a box-office standpoint, Herr Grobmier, a tried and true defendant, has been selected to share top-spot honors. Last Thursday Freddy administered a thrashing to both Referee Cyclone Burns and Da Garibald in one of the most stirring sessions the high court of rassledumb has tried (to forget).

Reversed Decision.

The court ruled against Grobmier, reversing the decision of Ye Common Pipple, but sentence was suspended so the fearless one could appear against O'Mahoney.

Creating a furore since his invasion of the United States a few months ago, O'Mahoney has failed to lose a single fall in 13 American performances. Featured among the mauling Mick's consummate variety of breath-taking grips, is the Irish whip, a hold which has proven as effective as it is unique. Such masters as Strangler Lewis, Ray Steele and the brothers Dusek, Ernie and Rudy, have succumbed to the unprecedented lock.

In what promises to be a rousing semifinal, Rudy Dusek is slated to lock horns with Abie Goldberg. Taking care of the half-hour tete-a-tetes, Sandor Szabo, the handsome Hungarian chumpeen, will square off against Journeyman Andy Rascher and Dick (40-love) Daviscourt entertains beetle-browed Boris Demitroff.

Potomac Edison Votes To Keep Loop Franchise

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 3.—The bus drivers and mechanics of the Potomac Edison Co., by a vote of 21 to 12, decided to retain the P. E. franchise in the Interstate League for the 1935 season.

Potomac Edison had the strongest outfit of any league team in Allegany County last season and won the Interstate title by winning three consecutive contests from the Frostburg Demons in a post-season series.

Gridders Heed Opening Call Of Spring

G. U., Maryland and C. U. Hold First Sessions; Issue Uniforms.

SPRING football practice was launched at Georgetown, Catholic University and Maryland yesterday without spring and without a whole lot of practice, and by divers methods in all three camps.

At Georgetown practice consisted chiefly of opening, closing and snapping locks on dressing lockers, for Coach Jack Hagerty deemed it advisable to dismiss the boys after issuing equipment. Not that his men are not in good physical condition, but so much time was lost in trying to squeeze a No. 12 foot into a No. 10 shoe, and vice versa, that dusk enveloped the Hilltop before the first was ready.

Coach "Dutch" Bergman's vocal cords did most of the exercising at Catholic University. The good burgher-man warned seven regulars left from last season that 1936 is another year and all positions are "wide open." This warning is in accord with rule 18, section B, of the football coaches' code.

25 Men Report.

Bergman, assisted by "Fod" Cotton and George Vik, then escorted the squad, about 25 men in all, to the practice field and set them up in pretty poses for the photographers who also reported for their first spring workout. The boys kicked several imaginary footballs, filled the chilly air with an armada of imaginary passes while camera shutters clicked furiously, and called it a day.

Beginning today Bergman will try a new system, one desiged to aid the squad's football and his own after-dinner speaking. Immediately after luncheon the players will assemble for a 45-minute lecture on fundamentals and diagnosis of plays. On the practice field, after class, they'll practice what Bergman preaches. The idea is to save valuable practice time on the field.

Practice An Hour.

At Maryland Coach Jack Faber put a group of 30 men through their paces, calling a halt after an hour's work. Faber is taking the squad along easily, waiting for it to toughen up a trifle before inaugurating the heavy work. Blocking, tackling and possibly a brief scrimmage are on the docket for the latter part of the week.

Maryland and Catholic U. probably will get together for some inter-squad scrimmaging after getting in shape, and there is a remote possibility that the Cards will work-out with Georgetown, but thus far nothing has been done toward arranging such a session.

Mackenzie's 70 Wins P. G. A. Sweeps

Mackenzie clicked in old-time form and hit the ball with such deadly accuracy that only once did he wander off the fairway, and only twice was he guilty of three-putt greens.

By scoring a 34—36, one under par, Mackenzie served warning to his professional brethren that he means business this season and will be hard to beat. He was over par on only two holes, and picked up six birdies, four of them coming in succession starting with the fourth hole. Had Mackenzie been successful with 18-inch putts on the twelfth and seventeenth holes he would have scored a 68.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, and George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, were tied for second with 74 each, while Al Houghton, who teamed with Maury Fitzgerald against Mackenzie and Walter McCallum, played none too well in scoring a 75. Walter (Red) Cunningham and his kid brother, Frank, of Burning Tree, and Al Treder, Manor, did 77's. Sam Rice, left-handed baseball golfer, Fitzgerald and McCallum were all below 80.

Mackenzie's score:

Stocks Droop While Traders Watch London

Prices Drift Lower in Turnover of Only 422,930 Shares.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 4.—Stocks were neglected today while the financial district stood by and watched the gyrations of the pound sterling in the foreign exchange markets.

Shares and corporation loans drifted idly lower. Stock transactions were held to a minimum by most traders, who appeared somewhat restrained by the fireworks in the foreign exchanges. Turnover aggregated only 422,930 shares. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks declined .3 of a point to 37.5.

A scattering of improved earnings reports appeared, including the 1934 figures for B. F. Goodrich and Adams-Millis, but neither stock changed much in value during the session.

United States Smelting receded 3 points to 199¼, while losses of around 1½ points or so appeared in Cerro de Pasco at 43¼, American Smelting at 35½, Dome at 39¾ and McIntyre Porcupine at 43¾. Dips in most of the leaders in the share market were confined to fractions, including Alllied Chemical at 134, Bethlehem Steel at 27⅛, Case at 56, United States Steel at 32¼, Montgomery Ward at 24¾, General Motors at 29⅝, Sante Fe at 41 and Union Pacific at 93¾.

Argentine Crop Lowers Grains

Cotton Closes at Net Declines of From 6 to 10 Points.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 4—Demoralized conditions of foreign exchange rates, pointing to likelihood of lower-priced offerings of Argentine grains, led to material downturns of Chicago cereal values today.

A domestic winter wheat crop of 496,000,000 bushels was indicated by unofficial estimates from Chicago trade experts. This compares with 405,000,000 bushels harvested last year. On the other hand, United States farm reserve stocks of wheat were placed at around 93,000,000 bushels, against 131,000,000 last year.

Wheat closed weak, at but little above the day's bottom level, ½@1⅛ cents under yesterday's finish, May, 97@97⅛; corn, ½@1½ down; May, 83⅜@83½; oats, ½@⅝ off, and provisions showing 2 cents to 5 cents gain.

A new low since the gold clause decisions were rendered was reached by the corn market, the May delivery of corn selling down to 83⅛ cents, against 89 cents two years ago. Some of the corn-selling was of a stop-loss character.

Provisions responded to sharp new upturns of hog prices.

New Influences Are Likely to Offset Last Year's Foreign Trade Revival and May Lead to Further Restrictions of Commerce.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, March 2. — Recent events in various parts of the world indicate that the moderate revival in international trade registered during 1934 may not only prove short-lived, but that a further contraction in foreign trade may occur because of new influences now at work.

The expansion in the aggregate volume of trade between nations during 1934 had caused some observers to conclude that the "log-jam," which had so largely dammed up commerce between nations during the depression years, had at last been broken. On closer analysis, however, we find that this revival resulted to a large extent from the internal upturn in business activity, which occured last year within several of the important industrial nations, notably Great Britain, Germany and the United States. Insofar as this domestic business improvement reflected merely a temporary stimulus exerted by governmental recovery schemes, it will not last. Business reaction at home in these countries will probably entail a decline in their foreign trade as well.

The increase in foreign trade in 1934, it is important to note, in many instances reflected higher prices more than increased volume. Such price advances resulted chiefly from artificial control schemes and from the widespread drought in the northern hemisphere last year. There is no assurance that such higher prices will prove lasting, and so the increase in the aggregate value of international trade due to the price factor will tend to disappear as the trend of commodity prices turns downward.

Raw Material Producers Chief Beneficiaries.

The chief beneficiaries of the foreign trade revival of the past year and a half have been countries producing raw materials, notably agricultural products. The nations of Latin America and Far Eastern nations producing rubber and tin have been specially aided by increased sales of their products, at higher prices, to the United States and the industrial countries of western Europe. These nations, therefore, would be injured most if the revival of international commerce should be checked and a retrograde movement set in.

For the immediate future prospects of maintaining and further increasing foreign trade are menaced most from another direction. Owing to the unsatisfacotry status of their balance of international payments, a number of countries have recently taken or now contempalte measures designed to curtail their imports. Such steps inevitably tend to cause a reduction in exports as well and so contract the total of foreign trade.

The most recent move of this kind has been reported from Italy. By imposing a comprehensive import quota system, that country hopes to reduce her imports materially within the near future. This step was held necessary to curb the pressure on lira exchange, which has resulted from a recent large unfavorable trade balance, which has not been offset latterly as in the past by heavy foreign tourist expenditures within the country and emigrant remittances received from abroad. How effective a quota restriction system can be in cutting down foreign trade is shown in the case of France, a country which has used this device freely for years. French imports, which amounted to 42,000,000,000 francs in 1931, when quotas began to be applied more drastically, fell to 28,000,000,000 francs in 1933, and further to 23,000,000,000 in 1934, a year in which foreign trade elsewhere was expanding.

Japan Seeks to Correct Adverse Trade Balance.

Japan is another country which is giving serious thought to correcting an adverse trade balance with certain nations, especially the United States, by new restrictive measures. Japanese business circles have expressed resentment over having to pay higher prices for American cotton, because of our Government's price-raising program, while the island empire has had to make painful efforts to raise the funds to pay for it by selling her own goods very cheaply in world markets. Hence, measures to enable her to get along with less American cotton are reported being given serious consideration by Japanese authorities.

Germany, also, evidently faces the need of resorting to further restrictive measures to reduce her large import surplus. The heavy January import surplus, one of the largest reported, reflected in part the effects of clearing agreements imposed by European countries on Germany to enforce debt payments. To protect the Reichsmark, steps to cut the import surplus are again necessary.

In South America, current efforts to balance international accounts more evenly take on a different character. There, the various countries seek to stimulate domestic industrial development, in order to reduce their dependence upon imported manufactured goods. Thus, the market for American and European manufactures in Latin America will be narrowed in time.

Through world-wide efforts of individual countries to balance international accounts and to bring down their imports to a level in line with their exports, the progressive strangulation of world trade that has been apparent since 1929 appears likely to be resumed.

Steel Operations At 48% Capacity, Reversing Trend

A month ago the operating rate was around the peak at 52.8 per cent, and a year ago it was 47.7 per cent.

Retail Trade Increase 12.5% In Washington

N. Y. Life Reports Assets Gain $98,562,112 in Year.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Retail trade in the City of Washington increased 12.5 per cent during January as compared with the same month of 1934, according to figures made public yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

This increase is the highest of any city in Fifth Federal Reserve District, which includes the States of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and South Carolina. The average gain in the neighboring City of Baltimore was 2.9 per cent, while Richmond lagged with a decrease during the month of 2.4 per cent. The average for the entire district was a gain of 6 per cent during the month.

Stocks on hand in retail stores, on the other hand, showed a decrease during the first month of the year of .3 per cent below the same month of 1934. Statistics on number of times the stock was turned over during the month showed Washington to be in the lead, with an average of .291. Richmond was second, with a turnover of .258, while the average for the entire district stood at .267.

Bank debits as officially reported by the Reserve Bank showed that clearings had jumped to $203,860,000 during the five weeks up to February 14, as compared with $188,636,000 during the same period of 1934. In total clearings, Washington stood second to Baltimore, where the turnover increased to $291,132,000 from the previous year's total of $262,802,000.

New York Life Insurance Co.

Assets of the New York Life Insurance Co. on December 31, 1934, totaled $2,109,505,224, an increase of $98,562,112 over the previous year, it is stated by Thomas A. Buckner, president of the company, in the New York Life's annual statement.

The gain in assets during the single year 1934 is greater than the total amount of assets accumulated by the company during the first 44 years of its history.

During 1934 the New York Life increased its holdings of Government, State and municipal bonds by $146,918,786. Investments on December 31, 1934, in United States Government, direct, or fully guaranteed bonds were $208,726,056, or 9.9 per cent of total assets. State, county and municipal bonds totaled $191,270,360, or 9.1 per cent of total assets. Cash on hand or in bank amounted to $36,449,562.

The company also reported investments of $159,151,938 in public utility bonds, $341,910,539 in railroad bonds, $459,805,821 n first mortgages on city properties, and $396,467,101 in policy loans.

Commodity Rise Threatens Restricted Buying Power

Advance Reached New Peak in January; Slight Recession Last Month Does Not Indicate End of Upward Movement.

New York, March 4.—The index of all commodity prices based on 1926 as 100 rose from 76.9 in December to 78.8 in January, a new high peak for the upward movement which began in March, 1933, after reaching the depression's low of 59.8 in the preceding month, according to the Business Conditions Weekly of the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The rise from December to January was primarily due to an advance in the prices of raw materials in which live stock prices played an important part. The raw material price index rose from 73.1 to 76.6. At the same time, there was a noticeable increase in the price level of manufactured goods with the index rising from 79.5 to 80.8.

While weekly reports indicate a slowing down in the rate of the commodity price advance in February, there is as yet little reason to believe that the upward movement is near the end of its course. The shortage of farm products should continue to bolster up the price level of raw materials. Manufactured goods prices should not only reflect the increase in the cost of raw materials but should also show the effect of higher labor costs with wage rates still tending upward.

This price situation points to a rather pronounced recession in general business activity in the near future. The actual price level in January was practically as far out of line with the real price level as it was in 1933, while business activity in January was 16 per cent higher than the average 1933 rate. The actual price level is based on the price index compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The real price level is based on index of farm cash income as reported by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Since farm income reflects the total value of all goods produced, the farm income index represents the real price index.

Higher Wages Aid Insurance

Payments Rise 90 Per Cent in Virginia, Says Liability Company.

Philadelphia, March 4.—Improved industrial conditions in Pennsylvania, with resultant increased pay rolls, brought about an increase of more than 50 per cent in workmen's compensation premiums in 1934, as compared with 1933, for the American Mutual Liability Insurance Co., according to Charles E. Hodges, jr., of Boston, executive vice president, in his annual report at a meeting of the Philadelphia district representatives of his company. Increases in the States of Maryland and Virginia, which are in the territory covered by the Philadelphia office, showed increases of 65 and 90 per cent, respectively.

In pointing out that his company's business showed an increase last year in all of the 44 States in which it operates, Mr. Hodges said:

"There is every indication that our business and that of other insurance companies will continue to grow in 1935. Despite pessimistic forecasts, pay rolls continue to grow both in increased volume of earnings and increased numbers of persons employed. There is no better barometer of business conditions than the premium and accident records of insurance companies, particularly those that write workmen's compensation insurance. It is only evident that our workmen's compensation premiums are increasing because there is an increase in employment.

"Our annual report on business in all States shows a 70 per cent increase in workmen's compensation premiums and an increase of 44 per cent in all lines of insurance."

NRA Presses Code Edicts

Cancels 7 Government Contracts in Face of Court Injunctions.

By the Associated Press.

In the face of adverse court decisions, NRA has found methods of achieving compliance which are not affected by court orders.

Some officials of the recovery administration feel that court decisions generally have not frustrated enforcement, although official statistics show 22 of 200 cases have been lost.

Despite the injunction granted by Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson, of Louisville, against enforcement of the wage provisions of the bituminous coal code, the NRA still has considered the operators in violation of the code and in seven cases has caused cancellation of Government contracts on the grounds of noncompliance.

Noncompliers are forbidden by Presidential order from bidding on Government contracts. There is a strong probability that NRA's power to act in this manner may be challenged.

The injunction prevents other punitive action and the loss of Government contracts may not be sufficient to bring enforcement.

Officials are proceeding on the basis that section 7(a) of the recovery act, which guarantees labor the right to bargain collectively without interference, is fundamentally sound, despite a verdict declaring it unconstitutional as applied to the Weirton Steel Co. This controversy hinges on whether or not manufacturing is a part of interstate commerce, and thus subject to Federal regulation as NRA officials insist.

Federal Issues Strong; Other Bonds Are Dull

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 4.—A strong tone in United States Government issues featured an otherwise dull bond market today.

The popularity of Federal obligations, both as a trading and investment medium, advanced another step upon publication of the Treasury's quarterly financing plans, which involved exchanging operations in the called 4¼ Libertys and refunding of Treasury notes at interest rates unprecedented for comparable securities.

In the outside market the volume of trading greatly expanded as banks and traders switched from one issue to another in quest of small profits or gains in yield. This was particularly so in the Treasury 2½ per cent notes of June, 1939, which were switched into the 2½s due March 15 as a medium for acquiring the new 1⅝ per cent notes. On the listed market advances in all types of Government securities ranged from minor fractions to nearly ¾ of a point.

Domestic corporate loans remained in a dull and hesitant zone, with small declines outnumbering advances.

Loans of the Paramount-Famous Players continued to be bought at advancing prices and other firm spots were McCrory 5½s, up 2¼ at 86¼, and Baldwin Locomotive 5s, up 2 at 100. The Associated Press averages were .8 of a point lower to .1 of a point higher. Argentina, Australia, Denmark and New South Wales bonds were weak with the British pound sterling.

Transfers aggregated $13,296,000 par value, compared with $14,087,000 last Friday.

Curb Prices Follow Metals To Lower Level

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 4.—Heaviness in metals depressed the general curb list today and losses of fractions to a point or more prevailed at the close. Volume, however, was small.

Among metals, declines of 1 to 2 points were recorded by Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Lake Shore, Hollinger Gold and Newmont. Pittsburgh Plate Glass also yielded around 2, but Montgomery Ward "A" was up as much.

Resistant spots included American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, and Parker Rust Proof. Fractional recessions appeared in Distillers Corporation - Seagrams, Pan-American Airways, Swift International, Pioneer Gold and Sherwin-Williams. Hiram Walker dipped more than a point.

Transfers approximated 137,000 shares, compared with 208,000 last Friday.

Foreign Bears Active as Gold Rises to $35.48

By the Associated Press.

London, March 4.—Renewed excitement marked trading in the foreign exchange market today as continental bears resumed their drive against sterling, which dipped against all currency.

The dollar touched 4.74 to the pound. The franc was marked at 71.00, a record low.

Gold established another record high of 148 shillings 10 pence ($35,48) a fine ounce, an increase of 23½ pence over Saturday's record high.

There were large offerings at this price, gold worth £674,000 ($3,213,495) changing hands.

New York Bank Stocks Higher.

New York, March 4.—New York City bank stocks reached their best levels of 1935 during February, Holt, Rose & Troster report. From the month's low of 46.26 on February 6, the weighted average of 17 representative issues reached the new 1935 high of 48.20 on February 18. Easy Lessons.

"If you'd speak French, send us $5 and in three weeks you'll learn that tongue;" 'tis thus the advertiser hollers and once again I find I'm stung. I studied French as per direction. I burned the well-known midnight oil, and gathered up a weird collection of words that had begun to spoil. A Frenchman heard me try to stammer some words while roosting on my bench, and then he chased me with a hammer and said that I had ruined French. "Our language never will recover from such a vile and raw attack, and in my dreams," he said, "they'll hover and make the night seem doubly black." "We'll teach you music in a hurry," the truthful advertisers say, "and save you all expense and worry of studying the old-time way. Just send five bucks and we will guide you along through music's lovely maze, and fame will soon have glorified you, and you'll be earning Mozart's bays." I thought it would be fine to teeter on high where great musician's roost, and win applause from Heck and Peter, and give the whole blamed art a boost. I sent five bucks and plunged in study, and soon should have the right of way, but I admit the outlook's muddy, for no one wants to hear me play. They throw dead cats instead of roses, they throw large rocks and chunks of coal; the shape of their response discloses that they are lacking heart and soul.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

'Way back in late December there was a little release tucked in the back of the radio writer's desk. It said, in effect, that N. B. C. was going to "cover the water front"—give radio listeners an oral glimpse of fishes, sailors, steamships and what not. It sounded like a novel idea—but no more releases came through, and eventually the original was almost, but not quite, forgotten.

But yesterday in the morning mail a three-page story told about "New York's Water Front Scene of Broadcast." So it'll be done, brought on the blue network on March 15.

N. B. C. plans to cruise around from the Fulton Fish Market to the new piers on Fiftieth street. Stops on the trip include the market, a sailors' rooming house and bar, the Seaman's Institute, the Battery, a police boat on the harbor, the Weather Bureau, the pier where the Olympic will be preparing to cast off and the new piers built for the Normandie and Queen Mary.

You'll get a dramatization of pursuit and capture of "river rats;" contrasting methods of shipment and transport bring you flashbacks of the older days. Cameron King, Graham McNamee and a quartet of N. B. C. announcers divide duties of the proceedings.

"The Rogue Song," Russian musical comedy, will be on the air tonight. Half of it comes through at 10 o'clock, WRC, the other half will be heard on March 12. Gladys Swarthout and John Barclay have the leading roles.

Harlem Amateur Night, one of WOL's funniest air contributions, will be heard hereafter on Tuesdays at 11 p. m., beginning tonight from the stage of the Harlem Opera House. New features are added; famous "name" bands play the amateurs' accompaniments.

A debate between George Washington University and the University of Florida is on WMAL today, 2:15 p. m. Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate arms investigation, appropriately enough, is acting chairman on the question debated. "Resolved: That the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions." Phillip Merryman and Arthur Murphy uphold the affirmative for G. W.; J. B. Patterson and Willard Ayres represent the Florida university.

Speeches:

Board of Trade: WMAL, 9:45 p. m. Dr. Joseph F. Manley on "The Importance of the Five State Dental Clinics."

Representatives Kloeb and Treadway, 5:15, WRC. "Taking Profits Out of War," and "Two Years of the Present Administration," respectively.

James A. Moffett, 7:45 p. m., WRC, on "Providing a Liquid Market for Home Mortgages."

Edith M. Gates, of the Y. W. C. A., is on the Little House program, WJSV, 4 p. m. Her subject, "A Sport for Every Girl."

Dr. Harry Allen Overstreet, on WRC, 4 p. m. His subject, "The Citizen and the Community."

An all-Russian program is on WMAL at 4:30 p. m. when Edward Davies and the Chicago a Capella Choir perform the "Volga Boat Song," Tschaikovski's "Humoresque," and Rachmaninoff's "The Angel."

Lawrence Tibbett sings a request program including "On the Road to Mandalay," "Sylvia," "Old Black Joe," "Sweet Song of Long Ago," "Eri Tu," from the "Masked Ball," and "Carme." The last number is a favorite, not only of many listeners, but of Tibbett's wife as well. On WMAL, 8:30 p. m.

Grace Moore sings the hit from her film, "Chirchirbin," (glad to know how to spell it at last), "The Sunshine of Your Smile," "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," and others. WMAL, 9 p. m.

Georgetown to Let Law Dames Use Hall

The Georgetown Law Dames, newly organized group of the wives of students at the Georgetown University School of Law, have won official recognition from the school authorities.

Denied admission as students under the rules of the school, the 35 or more wives belonging to the group sought other means to identify themselves with the school. The Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent, gave them permission to hold their meetings in the school's social hall every second Monday evening.
